Lorton Plot Is Thwarted; Prison Under Heavy Guard

Weapons Found In Cell Blocks

Food Is Denied Leaders; D. C. Police Are Held Ready to Aid.

Armed with tear gas bombs and automatics, more than 75 guards last night patrolled two adjoining cell blocks at Lorton Reformatory, housing 250 desperate prisoners, after quick action by officials early yesterday had thwarted a convicts' strike and a possible break for freedom.

The prisoners—200 white and 50 colored—who were to have participated in the strike were housed in the same cells used during the riot at Lorton in July, 1933, when District police were called to aid regular guards in subduing a revolt at the reformatory.

A thorough search of the cells occupied by the 250 men revealed that the convicts had armed themselves heavily with knives, blackjacks and pieces of pipe and iron. Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, said last night that no firearms had been found.

Work Suspended.

While the rebellious prisoners sat disconsolately in their cells, or paced restlessly up and down yesterday, the rest of the 1,223 inmates of the institution were kept in their dormitories, and all work at the prison was suspended.

No food had been given the insurgents late yesterday, and Capt. Barnard said he did not know when the men would be fed.

A petition of grievances, directed principally against the food and the steward, has been circulated among the prisoners for several weeks. The group sponsoring the petition demanded the power of appointing their own steward and removing him at will; the general improvement of the food, a universal 50-cents a day wage, numerous sanitary improvements and complete control of the commissary department. The prisoners, in the petition, stated that they contemplated a strike and not a riot.

Capt. Barnard received word of the impending trouble from a friendly colored prisoner weeks ago. He watched the situation closely.

Farley Escort Killed in Crash

Motorcycle Wheel Locks, Crushing Officer in Oklahoma.

Ponca City, Okla., Aug. 20 (AP).—Tragedy marred the trip of James A. Farley through the Southwest today. Elmer Sartor, 30, a motorcycle officer who was escorting the Postmaster General, was crushed beneath his motorcycle when a wheel locked. He died later in a Ponca City hospital.

Farley, in a following car, was unhurt. He hurried to the hospital, after a brief speech at the postoffice here, and left a note for the officer.

Sartor, however, never was able to read the message, which said:

"Dear Lieut. Sartor: Terribly sorry about your accident. Sincerely hope you will be all right. They will do everything possible for you. (Signed) James A. Farley."

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 20 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley told the people of drought-ridden Kansas today that they would have no cause to regret their "faith in President Roosevelt."

Addressing the Democratic county committee at Wichita this afternoon and a dedicatory audience at the new Topeka postoffice tonight, the party's National chairman struck at "croaking critics" and "reactionary statesmen."

Beset by Law, Noted Aviator, Plane Vanish

'You'll Not See Me Again,' Dorbandt's Farewell to Alaska Friends.

Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 20 (AP). Pilot Frank Dorbandt, one of the Northwest's greatest aviation heroes, told bystanders last night they would not see him again, flew away in a plane with only a small supply of gasoline and could not be found today.

Dorbandt was the central figure in several dramatic airplane flights of the North. He rushed serums and antitoxins to Indians and Eskimos stricken with various diseases and took injured white men to hospitals.

He landed Father Bernard Hubbard, the "Glacier Priest," inside the smoking volcano of Aniakchak, and was one of the leaders in airplane searches for lost aviators and sailors.

Recently, the Federal Government accused him of smuggling furs into the United States and in Seattle he failed to appear August 16 to answer to a suit of Marjorie Seller, pretty 19-year-old girl, who charged the flier was the father of her 17-

Hitler Drives To Win Last of Regime's Foes

Begins Determined Effort to Convince Those Who Voted 'No.'

Berlin, Aug. 20 (AP).—Established by a plebiscite as chief executive, chancellor and leader of the army, Adolf Hitler today set for himself and his Nazi party colleagues the task of "winning over" the 4,294,654 Germans who said "no" to him in Sunday's election.

Taking direct cognizance of the fact that he received 90 per cent of the vote cast, Hitler said in a message of thanks to the German people:

"My task and the task of all of us will be to consolidate this unity and to win over all the rest of our people to our ideals and doctrines by inspired, incessant and determined efforts."

To the party he declared: "We must and shall succeed in winning over the last 10 per cent of the nation for national socialism. That will be our last and crowning victory."

"Joy Day" Celebrated.

Throughout Germany today banners and flags were out in profusion in celebration of "national joy day."

The celebration was of a victory in which 38,362,760 voters proclaimed themselves in agreement with Hitler's assumption of the full functions of head of the nation.

The officially controlled press showed a rather sarcastic and contemptuous attitude toward the "no" voters who held Hitler's percentage of ballot support 3 per cent under that his policies received last November.

Mixed with this was a prediction

250 Fight Police In FERA Strike

Milwaukee Riot Quelled by Gas and Clubs.

Milwaukee, Aug. 20 (AP).—Two hundred fifty striking FERA workers charged a squad of deputy sheriffs who arrested a picket at a Lincoln Park project this afternoon, but were routed when officers met them with tear gas, nightsticks and fists.

The strikers, who sought to induce FERA workers to quit their jobs at the park, were angered by the arrest. Goaded to action by a woman, they attempted to wrest the man from deputies. The melee followed. No one was hurt. Two men were arrested.

The crowd appeared at the Lincoln Park project after forcing suspension of FERA work at nearby Estabrook Park by persuading men on relief rolls to drop their tools and join them.

Strike Threat Augurs U. S. Cotton Loans

12½ or 13c Pound Price Expected to Combat Bearish Moves.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

A Government loan on cotton at a figure around present market prices probably will be the Administration's answer within the next few days to the threat of a general textile strike and other bearish factors.

Responsible officials yesterday reported that recommendations for the loan had been made to the President and all that remained was his approval. Mr. Roosevelt last year authorized the 10-cent a pound loan on the staple. Millions of dollars were saved for Southern farmers as a result.

Under the loan plan the Government would advance farmers who wish to hold their cotton the price agreed upon—12½ or 13 cents, probably.

Should cotton fall below the loan price and stay there, the Government would take the loss. But if it rises above the figure, farmers could repay the Government, sell the cotton and take the profit.

A group of Southern Senators, including Bankhead, Alabama; Smith, South Carolina, and Thomas, Oklahoma, advocated recently that such loans be made on wheat and corn as well as cotton.

A corn loan plan was in effect for the 1933 crop, but officials said yesterday that action on cotton only is likely for the present.

A figure of 12½ cents a pound has been suggested for the advances to cotton growers, but so has 13 cents a lint pound.

Officials said this would be decided by Mr. Roosevelt, and it was added that "he also will say whether there will be any loan at all."

It was known, however, that those directly concerned felt the program would be approved.

General Transit Strike Threatened in Chicago

(Associated Press.)

A general transportation strike which would tie up Chicago street cars and elevated trains hinges on a vote to be taken in Detroit today.

The request of Chicago's striking union bus drivers for a sympathetic walkout by 20,000 other transportation employes was put before the executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes yesterday as the board opened a meeting in Detroit. Discussion was postponed until today.

Meanwhile, militia officers created a "No Man's Land" in the heart of Minneapolis to stave off violence in connection with the employe election intended to end the protracted truck drivers' strike.

Carleton Beals Freed By Mexico City Police

Mexico City, Aug. 20 (AP).—Carleton Beals, lecturer and writer, of Berkeley, Calif., was detained at police headquarters an hour and a half today and was released finally at the request of the American Embassy.

Beals, who has written a great deal on Mexican subjects and who was once on the personal staff of President Carranza, was turned over to police by a hotel house detective. The writer had gone to the hotel to visit friends. He was released without charge.

Husband, Estranged, Runs Amuck, Shoots 4

Houston, Tex., Aug. 20 (AP).—After a quarrel with his estranged wife, Daniel Wilson ran amuck in a downtown store today and, firing wildly into a crowd of shoppers and employes, wounded four persons.

A bullet struck Miss Ethel Granger, 20, a store employe, in the right breast, wounding her critically. Three others received less serious wounds. Wilson was arrested.

Alaska Fliers Return

Fourten officers of the Air Corps, 19 enlisted men, 6 Malemute Eskimo husky pups and a totem pole, all packed into 10 airplanes, came back to Bolling Field yesterday morning to complete a successful mass flight to Fairbanks, Alaska, and return.

Of the entire party, the dogs and the totem pole seemed to be in the best condition. This was probably due to the fact that their participation in the expedition was limited to a one-way ticket. The officers and men, under the command of Lieut. Col. Henry Arnold, were

Flames Drive Out Residents Of Two Towns

Portola, Calif., Aug. 20 (U.P.).—A vast sea of roaring flames swept through the Plumas National Forest tonight, masking the fate of about 60 fire fighters believed trapped in the inferno. Men and beasts fled before the flames.

Smoke and embers from the blaze filled the northern California skies. The roar of the fire could be heard for miles. The red glare heightened throughout the night. Two towns in the path of the fire were abandoned.

Desperate fire crews drafted helpers from Civilian Conservation Corps camps. Transients were taken from freight trains to help.

One crew was reported missing after it failed to check in with its timekeeper 14 hours ago. The fire has raged three days.

Hundreds of wild animals fled before the 10-mile front of the fire. Deer, coyotes, reptiles and birds broke through the fire fighters' lines in mad flight.

Paraguayans Continue Drive Toward Pirapiti

Ascuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 20 (AP). Picked regiments of Paraguayan troops, which last week took five Bolivian forts in four days, continued their drive tonight until they had reached a point 30 miles from their objective, the Pirapiti River, a war office communique stated.

The immediate object of the Paraquayans was to push the Bolivian forces in western Chaco past the river and the sixty-third meridian.

Armed War Hovers Over New Orleans

New Orleans, Aug. 20 (AP).—A threat of armed conflict hung over New Orleans today on the eve of Senator Huey P. Long's legislative investigation into Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley's city administration.

Senator Long, backed with the State militia, a private army and dictatorial powers conferred on him by a subservient Legislature, maintained an ominous silence as the September 11 primary election, spearhead of the embroglio, approached.

Mayor Walmsley's police stood at arms, awaiting his orders, as the mayor reaffirmed his intention to prevent Long's "armed henchmen" from interfering at the polls on election day.

Dynamite may be touched off by Long's legislative committee investigation into governmental affairs in the city, which has been indefinitely scheduled to start early this week. It was reliably reported that the committee already had been se-

Banker Battles Bandits; Saves Cash

Waggoner, Ill., President Is Hurt in Fight.

Waggoner, Ill., Aug. 20 (AP).—A bank president shot it out with bandits today and foiled an attempted robbery of the State Bank of Waggoner.

G. E. Williamson, the president, ignored the command of two armed men who ordered him and Cashier Emmett Brubaker to "stick 'em up." He stepped into a vault, seized a pistol and fired. Brubaker dropped to the floor.

Williamson was slightly wounded in the arm in the gun fight that followed. The bandits fled.

Justice Agents May Get Code Enforcement

Transfer of Compliance Division Is Being Considered.

Loss of Important Cases Said to Be One Cause for Shift.

Transfer to the Department of Justice of the NRA compliance division was authoritatively reported yesterday as under consideration by Administration officials.

Such a step, it was generally conceded, would be one of the major changes in the sweeping reorganization of the recovery unit now being studied by President Roosevelt and his advisers. The program was discussed yesterday at a three-hour conference between the President, Donald Richberg, acting director of the National Emergency Council; Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and Secretary Frances Perkins.

While it is generally recognized that an overwhelming majority of the country's employers have abided by even the most unpopular provisions in the codes for their industries, officials are known to feel that compliance has not been all that it might have been. Tightening of the enforcement machinery is suggested as the most promising method of correcting future abuses.

One of the chief causes for official dissatisfaction with the present set-up was said to be the failure of the compliance division to win outstanding court cases instituted for alleged violation of codes. The division, it was learned, has been successful in most of its relatively unimportant court tests and has lost virtually all of the most important legal fights.

Crucial Cases Lost.

Among the most bitterly contested cases prepared by the compliance division and lost when prosecuted by United States attorneys were those against the Woodward Iron Co. in Alabama, the Ballard-Gearhart Co. in Colorado and the Western Kentucky Coal Co.

Officials privately commented that the Department of Justice, with its large staff of lawyers and investigators, would be better prepared to win compliance than the compliance division as now constituted. The psychological effect on potential violators of the transfer of this work to the Justice Department also was emphasized.

Several thousand cases of code violations are handled weekly by the compliance division. The complaints range from wage and hour offenses to those resulting from failure to comply with fair-trade-practice provisions such as price-fixing clauses.

The staff of the compliance division includes approximately 150 persons in Washington headquarters and 1,000 in the field. The personnel numbers only a handful of lawyers.

Meanwhile, there was speculation whether President Roosevelt would go outside of present NRA personnel in naming a board to direct the activities of the recovery agency.

Bank Can't Make Profit; To Pay Depositors, Quit

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—The 7,000 depositors of the Sixty-third and Halsted Streets Savings Bank were requested today to "come and get it." The bank intends to close and pay everybody.

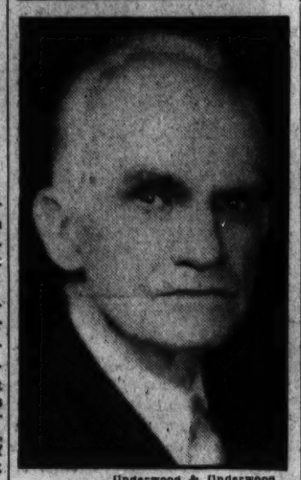
"There are no profits in banking under present conditions," said C. H. Dehning, president. "The directors have decided that the thing to do is to pay off all depositors and go out of business." The deposits total $700,000.

Woman Shoots Man, Seizes $690 Pay Roll

Pueblo, Colo., Aug. 20 (AP).—A blonde gunwoman was hunted by police here today for a daring payroll robbery. As Bert Walsh, paymaster for the Tamminga Construction Co., stopped at a through street, the woman stepped to the side of the car, shot Walsh in the right thigh and demanded the payroll money, $690.

With her loot, she walked across the street to a car driven by another woman and fled.

Roosevelt Leaves Today to Attend Rainey Funeral



Underwood & Underwood.

President Heads List of Notables Going to Illinois.

Changes Plans For Trip to N. Y.

Will Go to Hyde Park After Obsequies at Carrollton.

President Roosevelt will leave Washington late today for Carrollton, Ill., to pay personal tribute at the funeral of one of the New Deal's stanchest supporters—Speaker Henry T. Rainey, who died Sunday in a St. Louis hospital.

This was announced at the White House yesterday after a telegram from Senator William H. Dieterich, of Illinois, had informed the President that services had been arranged for 4 p. m. tomorrow in the Speaker's old home.

In order to attend the funeral, the President moved forward his scheduled departure from Washington by three days. He had planned to leave Friday for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., but instead will go there immediately following the services.

Precedent Set by Hoover.

Boarding a special train about 5 p. m., President Roosevelt will be following a precedent established by former President Hoover, who journeyed to Cincinnati to attend the funeral of Speaker Nicholas Longworth in 1931.

The body of Speaker Rainey, the third Speaker to die in office, is being taken from St. Louis to the small community in which he was born 74 years ago yesterday. He died of a heart attack while ill with pneumonia, which also took Speaker Longworth's life while he was visiting at Aiken, S. C. The first Speaker to die was M. C. Kerr, of Indiana. His death occurred in 1876.

Leaders to Attend.

President Roosevelt will head a distinguished assembly of members of Congress and governmental officials attending the funeral. Although no announcement was made of who will accompany him from Washington, the entire Illinois Congressional delegation and a number of others of both parties will be on hand.

Meanwhile, in Washington the flags over the Capitol were lowered to half-staff, a wreath was placed on the Speaker's dais, and numerous messages of regret were received at the House veteran's office. Mrs. Rainey communicated by telephone with the office, in which she had worked side by side with the Speaker for years.

The White House said that the President, proceeding directly to Hyde Park after the ceremony, will establish the "summer White House for an indefinite period," while Assistant Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre will open Executive offices in a Poughkeepsie hotel. The Presi-

Byrns Leading Many Seekers Of Speakership

By Elliott Thurston.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader of the House, probably will succeed the late Henry T. Rainey as Speaker of the House.

Another intra-party battle for this post of honor and great power is precipitated by Speaker Rainey's unexpected death. But most of the candidates for the Speakership will be angling for other preferment—first of all, the floor leadership, then commanding places at the head of important committees.

Another bargain probably will be struck among the more potent contenders, just as it was when Rainey, Byrnes and Representative Cullen, leader of the Tammany contingent, pooled their forces, agreeing upon the Speakership for Rainey, the floor leadership for Byrnes and a then newly created place of assistant leader for Cullen. The probabilities are that out of this shuffling, Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, will capture the floor leadership as Byrnes steps up to the Speaker's rostrum. And the chances are that Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, brother of President Roosevelt's former law partner, will move in as chairman of the potent Rules Committee as Bankhead steps into the leadership.

Outcome in Doubt.

However, this outcome can be upset by a variety of combination dickerings or by subterranean intervention by the White House. Theoretically, and perhaps actually, the White House will remain aloof from the scrambling, although it is of much moment to the New Deal to have the Speakership and leadership in sympathetic and competent hands.

Byrns has several advantages in the succession for the Speakership.

2 Austrian Owners Of Explosives Die

Hangings Since Putsch Now Total 11.

Vienna, Aug. 20 (AP).—Two farm workers were hanged today, bringing the total number of executions in Austria since the Nazi putsch in July to 11.

After the putsch, 20 pieces of explosives were found in the room of Franz Unterberger, 27. He admitted receiving them from Franz Saureis, 30, who confessed. They were hanged today under the Dollfuss decree, which makes the death penalty mandatory for persons possessing explosives.

Woman Killed Trying To Rescue Man in Bath

Beacon, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP).—Two women fell off the roof of a porch today while trying to enter a bathroom through a second-story window to extricate a man who had locked himself in after a three-day drinking party.

Mrs. Bertha Merwin, 47, was killed and her niece, Mrs. Alva Kingsland Costello, 22, of New York, was slightly injured.

Chicago Permit to Wed Denied Siamese Twin

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer today decided he would be no party to the projected marriage of one-half of the Hilton twins.

Violet, right half of the Siamese Hiltons, was refused a license here to marry a musician appearing in the same stage act with the twins. Violet recently was refused a license in New York and Jersey City, N. J.

Cummings Deepens Capone Mystery

Denies Former Gang Head On Way to Alcatraz.

San Francisco, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Chronicle today quoted Attorney General Cummings as denying that Al Capone, former Chicago gang leader, is on a train en route to the new Federal prison on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay.

"That's one point on which the reports are wrong," the newspaper quoted the Attorney General as saying. "Capone is not headed for Alcatraz. That's all I can say at this time, since we never discuss such matters."

At the hotel where Cummings is staying here his secretary said he could not be disturbed.

2-Layer Air Service Planned, Speeding Mails to Big Cities

A two-layer air-mail service, the upper of which would have speedy express planes splitting the thin atmosphere 15,000 feet above the earth, is under consideration by the Postoffice Department, the Associated Press reported.

Officials of some air lines informed postal authorities that their fast new planes operate most effectively at around 15,000 feet, but that when they have to stop frequently lots of time is lost climbing up and down. The new plan would be for these ships to carry the mail between important cities, with smaller "local" planes covering intermediate points.

It was reported reliably yesterday that the proposal will be put up to Postmaster General Farley for decision when he returns from the West. If he approves, the companies flying the mail will be asked to provide the through and local service on long routes where sustained speed counts.

Proponents of the plan say schedules of "locals" could be arranged to make direct connections with through planes at larger cities.

The Postoffice Department has $12,000,000 to spend on the air mail this fiscal year. Service specified in present contracts—which are being extened for nine months as they expire from time to time—will require $9,500,000. Officials have decided definitely to spend most of the remaining $2,500,000 for more frequent fights over some of the 32 routes on the 1934 air-mail map. The plan for through and local mail planes, serving different types of business is one of the ways proposed to do this.

Tiny Spider Slowly Conquering Snake in Baltimore Death Duel

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (AP).—The craft of a shiny, black spider, its body barely larger than a pinhead, was enough today to hold at bay—if not slowly to conquer—a foot-long garter snake, a mortal enemy.

The two are locked in a death duel in the cellar of a Baltimore home. After more than 80 hours of conflict, the tide of battle was definitely on the side of the minute foeman, "no bigger than an eye of the snake."

The snake, voraciously fond of spiders, flies, small bugs and the like, entered the cellar four days ago and sought to make a morsel of the spider. Instead it ran afoul the spider's web, swung between a spigot and a water boiler near the cellar floor.

Desperately it sought to release itself, only to become more securely entangled. Dancing from one vantage point to another, the tiny spider deftly and swiftly encircled the snake with slender but tough silken strands.

Intermittent writhing and twisting to free itself has all but left the snake exhausted. Its struggles slowly are becoming less violent. Horace P. Lane, jr., at whose home the battle is pitched, commented:

"Whether he's resigned to his fate, or just conserving his strength for a stiffer battle is hard to say. Anyhow he shows less pep.

"It's going to be a battle to the finish. I do not plan to interfere."

All the while, the spider, full of the cunning and patience of its kind, perches on its web waiting for the struggles to cease—for the death of its foe. It keeps a close watch and sallies forth occasionally to repair rents in the web or loop another deadly turn around the snake's body.

Rainey's Rites To Be Attended By Roosevelt

President to Leave Today for Speaker's Funeral in Illinois.

Rainey's Body to Lie In State at Old Home

Carrollton, Ill., Aug. 20 (AP).—The body of Speaker Henry T. Rainey will lie in state in the Greene County Courthouse rotunda from 9:30 a. m. until 1 p. m. Wednesday.

During this time the Speaker's friends and neighbors, to whom he was affectionately known as "Henry T." will have an opportunity to view the body.

The body then will be taken to Walnut Hill, the spacious country estate of the Speaker just east of Carrollton.

At 4 p. m.—soon after President Roosevelt is to arrive—the funeral ritual of the Episcopal Church will be read. Interment will be in the Carrollton Cemetery in the Rainey family lot in which the Speaker's father and mother now lie.

The little Episcopal Church in this town, it was felt, is too small to hold the crowd which will attend the funeral so it was determined to bury the Speaker from the farm home he loved so well and where he spent many of his 74 years.

Carrollton, a little county seat of 2,000 population, which had advertised a "Rainey Home-coming Day" September 13 in connection with the annual Greene County fair, expects its facilities to be taxed by a host of dignitaries Wednesday.

In addition to the President, Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois and many others prominent in the State and Nation have signified their intention of attending the funeral.

The Speaker and Mrs. Rainey had no children. Besides his widow, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Frank P. Williams, of Carrollton, and a brother, William C. Rainey, of Mexico, Mo.

Election Date Not Set.

The date for the election had not been set.

The strike committee of the united textile workers, with a strike of 300,000 cotton textile workers already called, opened offices in Washington and waited for action by the employers or the Government. The cotton and textile industrial relations board is to meet tomorrow.

New proposals intended to end the strike of employes in six plants of the Aluminum Co. of America were laid before the participants by a Government conciliator. Pickets again patrolled the closed plants in Pittsburgh, Alcoa, Tenn.; Massena, N. Y., and East St. Louis, Ill.

Factional feelings engendered in the recent West Coast maritime strike were blamed for a shooting affray in Portland in which one longshoreman was killed and another wounded. The gun play started when a group of men besieged a union meeting.

Complain to Board.

Steel union leaders laid charges before the National Labor Relations Board that the Wheeling Steel Corporation virtually had locked its employes out in an attempt to break the union.

National Guardsmen moved out of Kohler, Wis., leaving deputies to maintain peace between the Kohler Manufacturing Co. and its striking employes.

A dynamite bomb wrecked the fan house of a Canton, Ill., coal mine, and company officials, laying it to the protracted Illinois mine union dispute, feared more trouble.

Ten of the 20 herdsmen, hired to care for 3,000 drought-distressed cattle near Brainerd, Ill., went on strike for higher wages. The strikers were replaced.

Carroll Farms Sold for Taxes.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—In the fourth of a series of sales by the Carroll County Commissioners of delinquent tax properties, a 10-acre farm sold for $70, and 18 acres and improvements brought only $245.

907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Russell Mitchell Post, No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Alexandria, met last night in the old Friendship Veterans Fire Company house on South Alfred street and received five new members.

The post elected G. Raymond King, past commander of Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion, and John E. Minnigh, a former member of the Twenty-ninth Division, to honorary membership. The post also voted to limit honorary members who have not seen foreign service to three, but to admit all veterans of allied armies who have served overseas, regardless of the number. The post now has one honorary member who served in France with the British army and one with the Canadian army.

A meeting of all committee chairmen for arrangements to entertain the National Firemen's Association in Alexandria on September 1, 2 and 3 next, was held last night in the George Mason Hotel. The three-day gathering will culminate in a mammoth parade Labor Day at 11 a. m.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce is daily receiving acceptances from additional fire companies. The work of decorating the city will start next week, under the direction of Policeman George W. Welker. Fifteen squares on Washington, and ten on King street are to be decorated, together with the local fire houses and the terraces leading to the George Washington National Masonic Memorial Association Temple, where business sessions will be held.

Seven thousand seats will be placed on Washington street, the line of march, and a reviewing stand at Washington and Princess.

The Alexandria Light Infantry, under command of Capt. W. Cameron Roberts and Second Lieut. John S. Arnold, has returned from a two weeks' encampment at Virginia Beach. Capt. Roberts and Sergt. Burton E. Archer were included among the 15 best shots in the brigade and represent the State at the National rifle matches at Quantico the last week in September. Corporal Gilbert B. Durrer, selected to represent the company in firing the antiaircraft course, scored the highest number of hits in the regiment.

Lieut. John S. Arnold and a picked squad consisting of Corporal Gosney, Privates Mason, Snyder, Shu, Purdy, Creel, Rutledge and Simpson were detailed to the honor guard battalion.

Edward L. Simpson, 48, of 529 South Patrick street, died yesterday in a Washington hospital, where he was operated upon recently. He was employed as a machinist at the Washington Navy Yard. Besides his widow, Mrs. Ruth V. Simpson, he is survived by four children.

The funeral of William Bathurst Daingerfield, 55, who died Saturday, was held yesterday from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector. Burial was in Ivy Hill Cemetery. The pallbearers were J. C. Ramage, R. H. Lane, R. H. C. Beverly, C. S. Taylor Burke, Arthur K Warfield and Louis Folmar.

Alaska Fliers Reach Bolling At End of Hop

tired, dog tired, they said, and glad to be back.

Secretary of War Dern, Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief, headed a group of welcoming military officials. Families of the officers and men and a large crowd attended.

Dogs Steal Show.

As the fliers brought their big twin-engined Martin bombers to rest, and observed a guard of honor turned out for them, they gathered to report formally the completion of their mission to Secretary Dern and Gen. Foulois.

But whatever military formality they had mustered disappeared quickly when a half-pint-size Eskimo pup piled out of one of the big ships and broke into the crowd of officers.

The exercises immediately took on an informal air, and a number of the pilots seeing that there would be no court-martial for the presence of the dog, went back to their ships and brought out other husky pups.

The pilots were welcomed back a total of twelve times officially by Secretary Dern and Gen. Foulois, and ten times for the motion-picture operators. About the ninth time even the dogs became bored and one brave pup uttered a plaintive wail in Eskimo when Secretary Dern again offered his congratulations.

Unpack Totem Pole.

The welcoming ceremonies over, the fliers returned en masse to one ship which had been surrounded with a special guard. After considerable feverish unpacking, at one stage of which it appeared that it would be necessary to dismantle the airplane, a large totem pole was produced as a gift of the Governor and the people of Alaska to the Army Air Corps.

Assured that the picture men had all gone, Gen. Foulois consented to give another speech, this time accepting the pole in behalf of the Air Corps.

But the photographers were only hiding. One of them spotted the totem pole and as a result it was officially welcomed to the United States a half dozen times, mostly for the benefit of the sound men.

The pilots came here yesterday from Dayton, where they spent Sunday night. The return trip was made by way of Seattle in a little more than three days.

Commenting on the quick return trip from Juneau, Col. Arnold gave all the credit to the dogs.

"You know those animals grow fast," hesitated, "and when they are full grown they are as big as bull moose. And you can't put a bull moose in one of these bombers. We had to get back before they grew up."

Byrns Leading Many Seekers Of Speakership

There is, first, the ever potent seniority rule. He has served 13 consecutive terms in the House already. Then there is the tradition of having the leader step up. Beyond that, he is personally popular, and his current job as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee puts him in a place where all Democratic candidates this fall for House seats might be under more or less obligation to him.

There was some muttering among New Dealers last session because the House broke away from the Rainey-Byrns control on the bonus and the independent offices bill. But nobody questioned the implicit loyalty of either. Byrns remained steadfast, even when hurt—on the bonus. Hence, he is believed entitled to White House blessing, in any event.

Rancor in Making.

When Speaker Garner retired to the Vice Presidency, the competition for his mantle in the House brought out a big field which finally narrowed down to Rainey, Byrns and Representative McDuffie, of Alabama. By joining forces and by the lure of the assistant leadership offered to Cullen, as the custodian of the Tammany votes, Rainey and Byrns whipped McDuffie. That left some rancor behind, and more is in the making now.

The complaint of Northerners and Westerners that the Southerners have too big a share of the committee chairmanships and controls in general will be heard again, and may serve to upset an arrangement whereby a Tennesseean becomes Speaker and an Alabaman floor leader. Rather, such a disposal implies transfer of some important committee posts to placate the Northerners and Westerners.

Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, who managed the Byrns ambitions before, probably will take hold again now. He will shortly issue a statement for Byrns for Speaker—and this, too, will sound to the rank and file like an echo from headquarters, since McReynolds is close to the White House.

How many candidates will enter the field will not be known for several days, but the expectations are that the aspirants will include Representatives Bankhead, O'Connor, McDuffie, Doughton, of North Carolina, who heads the powerful Ways and Means Committee; Rankin, of Mississippi; Warren, of North Carolina; Woodrum, of Virginia; Sam Rayburn, of Texas, who feels entitled to new recognition because he piloted the bills to control the capital markets; McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Reed, of New York.

Most of the prospective seekers after higher honors profess to be entitled to New Deal backing—though some have had their lapses. Thus, Bankhead and Rayburn broke away to vote for the bonus. In the lists for promotion are some of the newer or less conspicuous Democrats. Representative Greenwood, of Indiana, who was made whip in recognition of the West, is one, although he has not been notably active. Representative Crosser, of Ohio, who heads the unofficial steering committee and was sponsor for the railroad pension bill, is another. Representative Arnold, of Illinois, is a third.

McDuffie After Post.

McDuffie put up a strong and strenuous bid for the Speakership before and is expected to do so again. He and Bankhead are looked upon as among the ablest debaters in Congress. O'Connor, of New York, is probably the strongest contender from the North.

The battle is destined to be waged until some time late in December, when the Democrats probably will call a party caucus to decide. With their huge voting majority in the House unlikely to be seriously impaired by the fall elections, they are sure of electing the candidates nominated by the caucus.

It is imperative for the New Deal to have the battle over and the smoke cleared away by the time Congress meets again on January 3. Meantime, however, another free-for-all family battle is on in the Democratic camp.

Sabath, Former Immigrant Boy, Is New Dean of House

Came to Capital in 1907; Life Like That of Book Hero.

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—An immigrant boy who has had a hand in American government since "Teddy" Roosevelt sat in the White House became dean of the House of Representatives today following the death of Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

The new dean is Representative Adolph J. Sabath, 68, who has held a House seat continuously since 1907. Only one other legislator in either House or Senate has seen as much legislation flow under the Washington bridges—Senator William E. Borah, the stormy Idaho veteran, who went to the Senate the same year that the cosmopolitan citizens of Chicago's Fifth District first elected Sabath.

The honorary title and the seniority which goes with it cap a career for Sabath which follows the "land of opportunity" pattern. The Sabath family—six boys, five girls—came here from what is now Czechoslovakia in 1881.

Sabath worked in a sash-and-door factory, became a clerk, went to night school and then entered the real estate business. While selling subdivisions on the South Side, he went to university and law school.

He entered politics with his first vote, and Mayor Carter Harrison made him justice of the peace, and later police magistrate. Then Sabath ran for Congress. His district, where people of Polish extraction predominate, has elected him every two years since.

Immigration legislation was Sabath's specialty until prohibition; then he became a leader of the wet forces. In 1932 he advocated Federal price fixing as a depression cure. His best ammunition for the present campaign, in which he faces strong opposition from Republican and Socialist opponents, is that he fathered the bill which made it possible for Chicago teachers to get their back pay through an RFC loan.

Jarnagin Death Ruled Suicide

Police Probers Hold Mate of Irene Franklin Shot Himself.

Hollywood, Aug. 20 (AP).—Police decided today that Jerry Jarnagin's death was a suicide, despite lack of a definite motive.

The song writer husband of Irene Franklin, musical comedy actress, for whom he had composed whimsical love lyrics and played accompaniments throughout the country, was found shot to death in his late Hollywood drive home last night as dinner guests were about to sit down to the table.

Capt. Bert Wallis, of the police homicide squad, said Jarnagin had been morbid since the recent preliminary hearing of Lawrence Thomas, former houseboy, on charges of beating Miss Franklin. The song writer was worried also over finances and getting movie employment, Wallis said.

"He was shot by his own gun," Capt. Wallis added. "He alone knew where it was hidden under the pillow of his bed.

HOW CHRYSLER MOTORS PROTECTS THE TIME PAYMENT BUYER

WHEN you buy a car on "time payments" you want a finance service that assures you courtesy, consideration and adequate insurance protection at the lowest possible cost. Such a service is offered to you in the Official Chrysler Motors-Commercial Credit Plan of automobile financing.

But how are you going to know when you are getting low cost financing with adequate insurance protection?

If you will apply the rule in the box at the right, you can tell to a penny, how much financing costs you under any plan. It is then a simple matter to see which car has the fairest and most reasonable financing charges.

When you buy a car on the Official Chrysler Motors-Commercial Credit Plan your finance arrangements are backed by the experience and resources of the $40,000,000 Commercial Credit Company. This Company is one of the pioneers in instalment financing. It employs more than 1800 trained people and has 142 offices and subsidiaries in the United States and Canada. It has financed nearly $3,500,000,000 of various receivables.

Every car bought on our Official Plan is adequately insured against the hazards of fire, theft and collision. You receive an insurance policy written by one of the largest and soundest old line companies—giving you the necessary protection that you should have.

Compare financing charges and you will find that you can finance the purchase of a Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler car as reasonably as you can any car. Investigate the finance company and you will find that none is more secure or more considerate of the buyer than Commercial Credit Company.

We urge you to find out what financing costs before you buy any car. Use the rule in the box. It is printed for your convenience and in keeping with the Chrysler Motors policy of open-and-above-board dealing on this important matter.

PAY NO MORE

Check Cost This Way:

1. Write here the amount your dealer asks as down payment (this may include trade-in value of an old car). $.....
2. Write here the total of all monthly payments required. $.....
3. Add the two figures above. Their sum is the total cost of car including financing and insurance. $.....
4. Write here the cash delivered price of the car. $.....
5. Subtract amount No. 4 from amount No. 3 above. The result is the total cost of financing, including insurance*. $.....

Then—compare this cost with the finance cost under the Official Chrysler Motors-Commercial Credit Plan, and pay no more for the financing of your car purchase.

Hitler Plans Drive to Win Over His Foes

Last 10% to Be Convinced Yet, Leader Asserts; Thanks Army.

in some journals that those who voted "no" will change their minds when they see the future accomplishments of the Nazi regime.

Hitler's statement to the German people said:

"The 15 years' struggle of our movement for power in Germany came to an end yesterday. From the leadership of the Reich down to the last rural official, the realm today is in the hands of the National Socialist party.

"This is the reward for immeasurable labor and for countless sacrifices. I thank all those who yesterday helped demonstrate the unity of the state and of the movement before the whole world.

"My task and the task of all of us will be to consolidate this unity and to win over all the rest of our people to our ideals and doctrines by inspired, incessant and determined efforts.

"Decisions to this effect already have been taken and they will be carried out with National Socialist rapidity and thoroughness.

To Convince Last German.

"The struggle for state power is ended, but the struggle for our beloved people continues. The aim is immovable; the day will come when every last German shall carry in his heart the symbol of the Reich as a confession of faith."

Hitler also sent a message to Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense and head of the Reichswehr (regular army), which, with other defense forces took an oath of allegiance to Hitler when the latter assumed presidential powers after the death on August 2 of Reichspresident Paul von Hindenburg.

"Now that the law of August 3 has received its confirmation by the nation," said this message, "I thank you and the army for the oath of allegiance to me as their leader and commander in chief.

To Defend Army Status.

"The same way as the officers and soldiers pledged themselves to the new state as personified by me, so shall I consider at all times my highest duty to be to defend the status and inviolability of the army in fulfillment of the testament of the late departed field marshal in accordance with my own will to anchor the army as the sole bearer of arms within the nation."

While Hitler does not have—and has proclaimed again and again that he does not want—the title of president, his position consolidates powers, including legislative, which amount to dictatorship.

He holds no cabinet posts, except that of Chancellor, and the "second in command" has not been named since the transfer of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen to the post of minister to Austria.

Sure Saar Will Return.

Among the thousands of persons who crowded before the chancellery today to cheer Hitler was a delegation of 2,000 from the Saar region. After they expressed their loyalty, Hitler replied from the window where he appeared again and again during the day.

"On January 13, 1935, the whole nation will accompany the plebiscite (in the Saar) with prayers and we all are convinced that the Saar territory sufferings will then be ended," he declared.

He referred to the plebiscite which will determine whether the Saar remains under the League of Nations or becomes a part either of Germany or France.

The press comment on the 10 per cent "No" vote yesterday included that of Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels "Angriff," which dismissed them as "malcontents who imagine Hitler can be used as a scapegoat for disappointed jobseekers and unsuccessful business men."

within 2 miles of the first house. Automobiles, wheelbarrows, and wagons filed along the county road with the inhabitants' belongings.

A slight wind showered glowing brands down upon the town of Twin Rivers and it was evacuated. Forest officials feared the arrival of a strong wind which might drive the flames ahead too fast for the fire fighters to escape.

The flames had burned over more than 1,000 acres of virgin timber and 6,000 acres of brush land. The Quincy Lumber Co. reported the loss of 175,000,000 feet of timber. Additional fire losses were reported to private and Federal holdings along Feather River.

Pilots of the Forest Service air force reported the fire was the worst in California this year.

A few hundred yards to the rear of the fire fighters' lines, emergency camps and kitchens were set up in clearings to provide medical attention and food for the workers. Scores were receiving treatment for burns.

Prison Plot Leaders

Lorton Revolt Plot Thwarted, Prison Is Under Heavy Guard

ing 5 to 16 years for a hold-up and robbery, suddenly arose and told his fellow prisoners in the auditorium that the general demonstration would be held at breakfast.

Shortly before 5 a. m. yesterday, 100 guards went through the cell blocks and aroused all prisoners. Those known to be "bad actors" were segregated and locked in the two-story building, where they remained last night.

So swiftly did the officials move, that the men were not even given time to dress. They were marched away in their night clothes and shoes. Later their clothes were brought to them.

Both day and night forces surrounded the prison, under the command of Maj. William Peake, superintendent of the reformatory, and Capt. Paul Peglow, of the day guards. Shortly after noon the night force was withdrawn.

Donahue and a fellow prisoner, George Murphy, also alleged to be a leader in the plot, were placed in solitary confinement. Murphy was serving a term of from three to five years. He was sentenced with Donahue, and both have been inmates of the institution for only a few months.

Several other convicts, said to be leaders of the plotted strike, were held with Donahue and Murphy in solitary. Capt. Barnard did not reveal their names.

Meanwhile Washington police were held in readiness to rush to Lorton if violence should develop.

Violence Averted.

"We tried to handle the thing without anyone getting hurt, and I think we've succeeded," said Barnard late yesterday.

In the afternoon, after the situation had quieted down, the police riot squads, in readiness to go to Lorton, were disbanded.

Except for official business and telephone communication, the reformatory was closed to outsiders yesterday. Newspapermen and cameramen were not admitted. Capt. Barnard, however, met them just outside the institution and explained the situation to them.

"There were a lot of boys in there who were doing a lot of talking a little while ago, but they don't talk much now," said Barnard.

"Donahue is pretty quiet now. The fellows we've got in the cell blocks are being watched pretty closely. They're bad actors, a lot of them, and some of them are Communists."

For several weeks, Capt. Barnard asserted yesterday, he has been aware that trouble was brewing. The prisoners appeared to be receiving propaganda from outside sources, Barnard said, although he could not name the sources. Capt. Barnard seized about 50 of the pamphlets citing the prisoners' grievances. They are in typewritten form, and he stated he believed they were written in the institution, although he had not checked the typing against the typewriters at the reformatory.

Resembles Armed Camp.

Plans for quelling the strike were formed at Lorton Sunday in a conference that lasted until midnight.

The reformatory resembled an armed camp last night as searchlights played on the cell blocs and guards massed at entrances of the buildings.

Following a conference with Elwood Street, director of public welfare, the District Commissioners announced yesterday that the ringleaders in the demonstration were Federal prisoners, "most of them dangerous men who should not be kept at Lorton at all."

When the present trouble is ironed out, they said, District heads will forward to Federal authorities a request for the transfer of the more dangerous of the Federal prisoners now at Lorton.

Urges Completion of Wall.

"Criminals of the killer type, and dangerous criminals in general, should never be sent to a reformatory like Lorton," said Capt Barnard yesterday.

"If the wall we hope to finish had been completed, nothing like the attempted strike, or the riot of last July, could happen."

He was referring to the 20-foot brick barricade, now only one-third completed, for which a $500,000 appropriation now is sought.

The petition which the prisoners were circulating follows:

"A militant plot against the standard of living in the institution and a demand for better conditions. A strike in all parts of the institution effective. Work to be resumed after an agreement is reached (through the subcommittee) approved of (by vote) by all prisoners. The administration of the institution shall recognize the subcommittee as the official representative of the prisoners and shall bargain with them for settlement. Should any member of the subcommittee be segregated from his group, all negotiations will be discontinued until he is restored to his group.

"This is not a riot and there is no need to call for armed forces. Should armed forces be brought in, all negotiations will be discontinued until such forces are removed.

"All proposals shall be subject to approval by the prisoners.

"Approving is a pledge of support.

"1. Insure an orderly meeting.

"A. Brief discussion led by the chairman. B. Master at arms from each dormitory to be placed in aisle to insure order.

"2. Precaution for the safety and protection of those taking active part in the struggle for better conditions. Discussion. A—Should any inmate be punished (or isolated from his group) all negotiations (between inmates and officials) shall be discontinued until he is restored to his groups.

"3. A committee composed of one from each dormitory be elected for the purpose of negotiating with the officials of this institution for final settlement. Committee to be known as subcommittee.

Majority Must Decide.

"A. The committee shall not have the power to make final decisions. They must refer to and carry out the decisions (reached by vote) of the inmates.

"B. No committee member shall deal directly with an official or guard, give opinions or advice or carry on any forms of discussion.

"C. The committee shall meet every day in the rest hall until final settlement. Meetings subject to change as seen fit by the committee.

"The dormitory committee of three, over which the sub-committee will preside, be elected for the purpose of discipline. An organized way of making decisions and instructing your sub-committee men.

"4. Steward to be picked and approved by the inmates to be given complete control of the dining hall and the kitchen and bake shop.

"A. Steward to be personally responsible (to the inmates) for the planning, cooking and serving of meals and the ordering of supplies.

No-Profit Plan.

"B. The steward shall see that the canteen is run without profit.

"C. The inmates (collectively) shall see that the steward has a free hand, free from intimidation.

"D. The steward shall have the necessary help to run his department.

"E. The steward can be replaced and be removed by another, chosen by the inmates, any time he proves unwilling and incompetent.

"5—1. Complete control of steward and commissary department.

"2. Uniform wage for all prisoners; not less than 15 cents a day.

"3. Hot and cold showers in all dormitories and modern sanitary conditions. A committee of inmates will be elected and authorized to draw up specifications.

"4. Sanitary conditions in the barber shop. Specifications by the committee.

"6. A surgical doctor to be stationed on the reservation."

"Of course this is not the way a prison should be run," said Street after he had been shown a copy of the petition.

"Apparently these men contemplated a protracted strike. Naturally there had been no meetings by groups of prisoners, and these ideas were set forth by the ringleaders of the demonstration.

"We believe now that it was the ringleaders' plan to start things this morning at breakfast, but Capt. Barnard nipped their plan in the bud."

Hitler Setback Seen by Paris In Reich Vote

French Leaders, However, Believe War Menace Has Not Abated.

Paris, Aug. 20 (AP).—A setback in Chancellor Hitler's hope to "dazzle foreign powers" by showing that all Germany is backing him was seen by French leaders today in the results of the German plebiscite.

Hitler's "menance to Europe" nevertheless is unabated, said quarters close to the government, since he "remains master of Germany with increasing dependence on the Reichswehr for support."

The 10 per cent opposition to Hitler in the plebiscite was regarded here as indicating a stronger undercurrent of discontent.

That "Pan-Germanism is in the arms and on the march" is shown by the vote, Henry Berenger, chairman of the Senate foreign affairs committee, wrote for the Agence Economique et Financiere. "The duel henceforth is begun in Europe between Pan-Germanism and the existence of other nationalities and civilizations. It is the pre-1914 menace which is recommencing."

The French press generally proclaimed the "duty of maintaining a strong force to assure peace" and declared that "despite signs of weakening" Hitler's regime is "not finished."

The newspaper Paris Soir charged that the testament of the late President Paul von Hindeburg was changed to eliminate a recommendation that former Kaiser Wilhelm succeed him.

The story, by the central European correspondent of the paper, was based on an "authentic source," said the Soir.

The advice deleted named Wilhelm for president and Franz von Papen, now minister to Austria, for chancellor, the story states.

Gun War Feared In New Orleans

lected, that counsel had been named and that an immediate inquiry would be launched into the city's affairs. Mayor Walmsley called his ward leaders to the city hall today and conferred with them for some time, but made no announcement.

The investigating committee is not scheduled to make a formal report to the Legislature until February, 1936, the same month in which the gubernatorial primary election will be held. The committee, however, is empowered to hold open hearings at any time, and it was believed that the quiz would be started immediately for its effect on the September election, in which both Long and Walmsley are supporting rival Congressional candidates.

Senator Long, when asked when the investigation would be started, said:

"They will find out about that investigation so quick that they won't have to ask when it's going to start."

Walmsley, apparently, was waiting for Long to crack down before moving into a showdown struggle.

"We will have the courts and the courts have the power to enforce their orders," the mayor said.

Reminded that a court decree ordering Long's militiamen out of the city registration office had been ignored, the mayor shrugged his shoulders.

"The court can swear in deputies to enforce its orders," he replied.

The discussion hinged immediately on the point that a situation of this nature would naturally involve a conflict between the military power of Long and the civil authority of the judiciary.

"—And that would mean civil war," a hearer remarked. Mayor Walmsley nodded, but remained silent.

Leesburg Jury In Barnhouse Case Still Out

No Verdict Returned in Slaying of Veteran at Drinking Party.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Clarence Barnhouse was found guilty of second degree murder and his punishment set at 15 years in the penitentiary at 11:45 p. m. today, nearly six hours after the jury received the case.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Conflicting statements were brought out by State witnesses today in the trial of Clarence Barnhouse, 45, on a first degree murder charge for the killing of Basil Brown, 40, disabled World War veteran, in Loudoun County Circuit Court here.

At the end of the trial there was no direct evidence produced that Barnhouse did the killing. Evidence was brought out that there was a drinking party at the home of Richard Cooper July 1, and that an argument, starting over a drink of whisky ended in the death of Brown.

The case went to the jurors at 6 p. m., and at 9 they had not reached their verdict.

Mrs. Nellie D. Cooper, chief witness for the State, confirmed a former alleged statement made to authorities. This frail woman testified an argument started at her home on the night of July 1 between her husband and Brown, and that Cleveland Harper, who was also at the Cooper home, jumped on Brown. Barnhouse, stepfather of Mrs. Cooper and resident at the Cooper home, arrived on the scene and, picking up a club from the porch, hit Brown several blows over the head, rendering him unconscious, the woman said.

She further testified that the four, Cooper, Harper, Barnhouse and herself, all of whom are under first-degree indictments, carried the body to a thicket nearby. They later heard Brown calling for his brother, she said. The three men then went down to the spot where the dying man lay and "finished the job," she testified. The woman said they heard Brown say, "Please don't hit me any more. I am dying now."

Evidence brought out by a witness for the Commonwealth, Jess Johnson, favored the defense when he said the dying man called out: "Dick, don't hit me any more, I am dying now."

Other witnesses for the State were county officials, who told of finding the body, and neighbors who testified to noisy drinking that night at the Cooper home. The defense offered only two witnesses, placing their arguments for Barnhouse's innocence on statements of State witnesses.

Commonwealth Attorney John Galleher declared that Barnhouse, by hiding for several days in the hills following the murder, proved that if he did not actually commit the crime he aided and abetted it, and that he intended to try every one of the alleged murderers of Brown.

Stilson H. Hall and Lucas Phillips, defense lawyers, cited a statement made to an officer by Barnhouse that he killed Brown in self-defense. They pointed out Barnhouse had no motive.

Jurymen were E. F. James, Roland Legard, F. Mercer Love, jr., Raymond S. Roderick, S. W. Lindsay, Ben Middleton, Leslie M. Myers, C. M. Warner, W. P. Brown, R. McSherry Miller, H. N. Kirkpatrick and E. C. Downs.

Montgomery Ready For More Cattle

County Farm Agent Orders 19 New Carloads.

Announcement has been made by Otto W. Anderson, Montgomery County farm agent, that 19 carloads of drought-stricken cattle will be shipped to the county for pasturage. He declared that the county farms are now able to accommodate nearly 800 more cattle. Several hundred already have been brought into the county.

Anderson said that four carloads of cattle were unloaded at Brown's Station, near Gaithersburg, last night, containing 168 head. He said that a survey of the county had been conducted by his office before the additional cattle were ordered.

'Flu' Outbreak Hits Hundreds In Hagerstown

Many Others Afflicted in Washington County as Malady Spreads.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Washington County Health Department announced today that several hundred cases of influenza have made their appearance in Hagerstown during the last week, and that there were several hundred additional cases in the county.

State and other health officials have been here for a week checking the malady, which is somewhat different from the type of "flu" prevalent during the winter of 1917-18.

The first report of the existence of influenza in the East came three weeks ago, when 300 cases made their appearance in the Hancock Valley. Since then the health department says the disease has spread as far West as Cleveland, Ohio, cases there being traced to contacts from the Hancock outbreak. Cases in Montgomery County and near Baltimore also were traced to the Hancock source.

A week ago influenza first made its appearance in the western part of Hagerstown, the nearest point to Hancock, then spread throughout the city.

A check made by Dr. W. Ross Cameron, health officer here, revealed that the disease, which usually runs its course in four or five days, is most prevalent among children.

The victim is stricken suddenly with severe chest pains, fever and chills. Persons who have remained in bed until completely well have shown no ill effects. Others, however, who left bed too soon, have since suffered relapse. The real danger lies in complications, said the health department.

Dinner Opens Frederick Push Of Democrats

Groups Opposed to Conley Start Campaign With Joint Rally.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—A joint meeting and dinner by the Jeffersonian Club and Young Men's Democratic League, attended by about 200 party workers and leaders, marked the opening of the Democratic State and county campaign in Frederick tonight. Supporters of Gov. Ritchie for a fifth term were in charge.

This morning Republicans accorded Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, candidate for Governor, a public reception. During the day Senator Goldsboro visited Middletown, Thurmont and other county towns in the interest of his campaign.

David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of State, was toastmaster of the Democratic dinner and the speakers were George R. Radcliffe, candidate for the United States Senate; Representative D. J. Lewis, seeking reelection from the Sixth Maryland District; William S. Gorty, candidate for State comptroller, and William Preston Lane for attorney general. All speakers lauded the Administration of President Roosevelt and stressed the importance of continuing Democrats in the National Administration to complete the recovery program. Robert B. Ennis, chairman of the Baltimore City election supervisors, was among the guests.

The event was designed to show the strength of the regular organization now in the thick of the fight with backers of Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, candidate for Governor, and for control of Frederick County Democracy. Both factions have a State committee and delegates to the State convention tickets in the field. The State committee is the governing political body of the county and the control of the county will be determined at the primary election September 12.

Senator Goldsborough is the third candidate seeking the Republican nomination for Governor that has canvassed Frederick County. H. Webster Smith and Harry W. Nice, Baltimore, have held meetings here.

Road Project Gives 40 Jobs

Montgomery County EWA Is Praised by Assistant State Engineer.

Employment for 40 men for about six weeks is provided in a new Montgomery County EWA project to start this morning. The work will include grading, widening and paving a mile-long section of road from Browningsville to the Frederic County line.

The work of the local EWA in improving roads was praised yesterday by E. B. Rider, assistant State engineer, after a county-wide tour of projects. Rider declared that the work was equal to much of that done by more experienced road workers.

Announcement has been made by Stephen C. Cromwell, manager of the county office of the EWA, that paving and grading of the Seven Locks road near Bethesda is expected to be approved by the State authorities in Baltimore this week, which will provide work for more men.

Rights of Way Delay Work on Lee Boulevard

Donations of Land Needed to Complete Strip to Memorial Bridge.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The acquiring of needed rights of way is all that is now delaying construction of the connecting link of Lee boulevard from Station 107 in Lyon Park, Arlington County, to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, according to a statement by H. G. Shirley, chairman of the State Highway Commissioners, yesteday, Engineers from the State Highway Department are seeking the rights of way.

Chairman Shirley announces that the State, Federal Government and other interested parties have definitely agreed upon a route passing to the North of the Fort Myer Military reservation and the Arlington National cemetery, and Federal funds have been made available for the construction, which is estimated, will cost approximately $200,000.

The only possible danger of not completing the project this year is the obtaining of rights of way with the limited funds available. The Federal funds are for construction only, Shirley said, leaving the acquisition of rights of way up to the State.

Engineers will make every effort to obtain as many donations as possible, since State funds for purchase of rights of way are so limited as to make purchase of all needed lands impossible.

Seeks Cooperation.

The highway chairman appeals for cooperation on the part of property owners, so that the approach to the bridge may be completed at the earliest possible moment.

The highway has been graded and surfaced with gravel from a point where it meets the Lee highway at Falls Church to Glencarlyn, in Arlington County, where the overhead pass is now in course of construction by the Blackwell Engineering Co.

The bridge will be 243 feet in length and 40 feet wide, and is expected to be completed within the next 30 days. With it completed, the boulevard will have been graded and surfaced as far as Lyon Park.

The traffic count authorized by the Arlington County Board to determine the most suitable light to control traffic at the intersection of Wilson boulevard and the Military road shows a total of 23,941 cars passing between the hours of 6 a. m. and 8 p. m., over a period of three days.

According to County Manager Roy S. Braden, the count was made Thursday, Friday and Saturday. On Thursday a total of 4,535 cars passed over Wilson boulevard and 2,724 over the Military road. Friday, 5,047 on Wilson boulevard and 2,945 over the Military road, and on Saturday 5,612 over Wilson boulevard and 3,078 over the Military road.

To Submit Report.

Braden announces that he will submit his report and recommendations to the board at its meeting on August 30.

Bids ranging from $272,398.75 to $169,984.50 for the construction of the Four-Mile Run sewer interceptor were received by the county board at its meeting held at the courthouse yesterday morning. Sizes of pipe to be used range from 29 to 40 inches in a distance of more than 26,000 feet.

Chairman Lyman M. Kelley announced the board would meet in special session this morning to award the contract.

Firemen's Aid Bill Proposed

Maryland Group Seeking $10,000 a Year From State Legislature.

The Maryland State Firemen's Association is preparing to offer a bill at the coming session of the State Legislature seeking an annual appropriation of $10,000 from the State to be used for the relief of disabled firemen or their widows and orphans. The organization's legislative committee is headed by Thomas G. Basil, of Annapolis.

That the organization will make a determined campaign in behalf of the bill was indicated in a letter by Noble Rushe, president of the State Association, appearing in the annual yearbook of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen. In the letter Rushe said: "We can accomplish our object if the firemen will forget party affiliations and support only those candidates for office who pledge themselves to support these bills."

The firemen's organization is not a political one, but the legislative committee in presenting its bill has declared "if it be necessary to play politics to receive support to a just cause, for our own salvation, let's play and play to the letter."

Fairfax County Income Taxes Show Increase

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The treasury of Virginia will receive 55 per cent more in income taxes from residents of Fairfax County this year than it did in 1933, according to James U. Kincheloe, county commissioner of revenue. The amount of State income taxes this year total $10,113.22 compared to $6,510.37 last year.

According to reports in the commissioner's office, the income tax this year will be based on an assessment of $491,102.42, while in 1933 the assessment was $322,405.09.

A change in the State law, lowering the personal exemption to $2,000 for married persons and $1,000 for single persons was responsible for part of the increase; the exemptions last year were $2,800 and $1,250. The commissioners records show that 91 more persons filed taxable income returns this year than in 1933. A total of 267 persons was listed this year. Of those persons assessed this year 239 reported net incomes of $3,000 or less, 11 incomes between $3,000 to $5,000 and 17 incomes in excess of $5,000.

Despite the heavy increase this year, Commissioner Kincheloe states that State income tax assessments have not approached the pre-depression standard, when the average annual amount was about $30,000. The largest yearly amount ever collected was $36,000.

School Board to Meet.

The school board of Fairfax County will hold a special meeting today at the county courthouse to consider bids and specifications for school furniture and for projects now under construction.

Most of the equipment is to go into buildings being constructed with PWA funds. Because such funds also are intended to aid in the purchase of equipment, the bidders must submit the necessary PWA compliance forms with their bids.

The list of the faculty appointments for the public schools of Falls Church has been announced by Horace Brown, president of the local school board. Miss Nancy Gregory Edwards will return as principal of Jefferson High and Madison Elimentary schools. In the high school she will be assisted by Mrs. Ruby Douglas, Mrs. J. W. Rullman, Miss Mary Wynn, Miss Elizabeth Glenn and C. P. Scott.

The grade school teachers are Miss Zella Cox, Miss Dixie Middleton, Miss Mary Brewer, Miss Margaret Fravel, Miss Helen Haertel, Miss Sallie Weymouth, Miss Dorothy Callis, Mrs. C. B. Reid, Miss Jeannette Luther, Miss Nellie Williams and Miss Allie K. Libby.

The Jefferson High School is being wired for electricity and both buildings are being given a thorough overhauling, prior to school opening September 12. Teachers will report in time to attend the teachers' meeting on September 11.

Prince Georges Election Board Expects Rush

Candidates Have Until Midnight Tomorrow to File.

The Board of Election Supervisors of Prince Georges County is preparing for a last-minute rush of candidates who have until midnight tomorrow to file for the fall general elections.

Three candidates filed with the board yesterday, bringing the total to 41. Should only one person enter the field for each office, at least 68 must file before the "deadline" tomorrow.

Mayor John H. Beall, mayor of Mount Rainier, filed yesterday as a candidate on the Democratic ticket for judge of the Orphans' Court. W. R. C. Connick, of Baden, former principal of the Baden Agricultural High School before his retirement last year, filed for register of wills, also on the Democratic slate. Both are believed to have the organization support. Ernest Henson, colored, of Upper Marlboro, filed for the Republican State central committee.

G. O. P. Has Larger Task.

Republican leaders last night faced the task of selecting candidates for more than half the positions to be filled, while the Democrats had only to choose two more candidates, county surveyor and one delegate to their State convention.

John S. White, attorney of Colmar Manor and Hyattsville, yesterday was selected by the Democratic State Central committee as the sixth candidate for the House of Delegates. Others previously indorsed were Kent R. Mullikin, of Laurel; Charles C. Marbury, of Mellwood District; T. Van Clagett, of Upper Marlboro; L. Harold Sothoron, of Brentwood, and Egbert F. Tingley, of Hyattsville.

Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins, who is looked upon as one of the strongest candidates whom the Republicans have available, yesterday was still undecided whether to run for county commissioner, clerk of the court, or treasurer. The Republican organization will be unable to select candidates for the two positions which he rejects until he makes a decision.

5 Candidates in 12 Races.

The Republicans to date have only three candidates for the five positions on the board of county commissioners and two for the seven posts in the Legislature.

Dr. Robert A. Bennett, William A. Duvall and J. Bryant Morrison are the three Republicans aspiring to the county board. County Commissioner Frank Small, jr., who is out for the State Senate, and Herbert J. Moffat, who is a candidate for the House of Delegates, are the only two G. O. P. candidates in the field for the General Assembly.

Selection of other Republican candidates for the House of Delegates, the State central committee and delegates to the State convention has been complicated by factional disputes reflecting the three-cornered fight for the Republican gubernatorial and senatorial nominations.

Robert W. McCullough, of Bladensburg, candidate for State's attorney on the Democratic ticket, who does not have the organization indorsement, last night announced that his resignation as president of the Bladensburg Democratic Club and as chairman of the district organization committee, had been refused. A "McCullough rally" will be held Thursday night at the Pig 'n' Whistle barbecue in Bladensburg.

Yesterday the motorcycle was found on the Elktonia Beach road in Maryland. It was taken to the Annapolis Police Headquarters.

Wilt regained possession of it late yesterday. He is looking for the thief.

3-Way Contest Is Looming in Montgomery

Full G. O. P. Slate May Be Entered; Sadler Considers Filing.

Voters in Montgomery County may find three party tickets on their ballot in the November election if reports current in Rockville yesterday that several candidates may file on the Republican ticket materialize.

John D. Sadler, Chevy Chase attorney, said he was considering filing for the Republican nomination for the House of Delegates Thomas L. Dawson, Rockville lawyer, is said to plan filing for judge of the Montgomery-Frederick circuit court. He could not be reached at a late hour last night to verify the report.

Following Sadler's statement, speculation was rife as to the possibility of a full Republican ticket, recruited from the ranks of Republicans who are not supporting the Fusion movement.

Entry of Dawson into the judgeship fight would create a contest for the Republican nomination between himself and F. Barnard Welsh, who filed several weeks ago. At present there is no Republican county ticket in the field, leaders of that party having agreed to share Fusion ticket posts with anti-organization Democrats. There will be candidates on the Republican ticket, of course, for State positions and for the judgeship which is a bicounty office.

County Police Deny Laxity in Takoma Park

Mayor and Council Say Lack of Cooperation Caused Removal.

Charges by the mayor and council of Takoma Park that they were unable to get cooperation from Montgomery County police stationed there were greeted with surprise today by John B. Diamond, president of the board of county commissioners.

The town authorities were quoted as saying that their recent action in obtaining new quarters for their own force was actuated by the necessity of policing the entire town at all times. Members of the county police are without jurisdiction in the Prince Georges section.

Takoma Park police are preparing to move from the quarters of the local firehouse, which they now share with the county police, to a newly remodeled building in another section of town. Diamond stated that his board had taken no action on moving the county men because they had not been officially advised of plans of the town authorities.

He denied that the county commissioners had been invited to participate in the consideration of plans for new quarters to house the joint forces, stating that they had merely been invited to give an opinion on the advisability of several sites in the town.

Housebreaker Is Given Six Months' Sentence

Chester Merryman, of Washington, yesterday was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction by Judge Donald A. Delashmutt on charges of housebreaking and larceny.

Merryman was arrested August 8 by Patrolman Frank Soper, of the Bethesda substation, after a series of robberies in the Bethesda and Chevy Chase communities. Soper testified the prisoner admitted entering five houses in one evening.

Ritchie Sails For Baltimore; Due August 30

Return to U. S. Expected to Put New Life Into Democratic Campagin.

He embarked at Havre, France, on the Baltimore mail line steamer, City of Baltimore, and will arrive here August 30, according to a cablegram received at the offices of the steamship line.

Loyal Democrats from all over the State will gather at the dock here to greet the Governor at an elaborate home-coming party, according to present plans.

When he sailed early in July for his vacation, the Governor was known to be an ill man. He was tired from 15 years of work as the State's chief executive, for throughout that period he had never taken a vacation.

Health Much Improved.

But a month at the resort town of Cobourg, on the coast of Normandy, has done wonders for him, according to letters from his traveling companion, Col. Stuart Janney, the Governor's former law partner and now chairman of the State Board of Welfare.

The Governor's return is expected to infuse new life into the quiescent Democratic campaign throughout the State. During the Governor's absence the political stage has been occupied by the squabbles of the Republicans, with Mayor Howard W. Jackson's withdrawal as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination the only event of consequence in the Democratic field.

Upon his arrival in Maryland, however, the Governor is expected to demonstrate to the voters that his vacation has restored to him his old-time vigor.

Republicans Divided.

Whether the Republicans have made marked gains during the Governor's absence is a topic of debate among the Democrats. Most of them believe that the entry of Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough into the gubernatorial race has caused a wider split in the ranks of Republicans.

Gov. Ritchie is expected to make a hurried swing through the Maryland counties during the two weeks remaining between the time of his return to Maryland and the date of the primary election, September 12. It appears probable that his principal fight against his opponent, Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, will be made in the counties, where Dr. Conley has been campaigning during the summer.

Anne Arundel Sees Democratic Contest

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—A warm primary election contest within Democratic ranks in Anne Arundel County became assured today when Samuel B. Dove filed his certificate of candidacy for county commissioner representing Annapolis, which comprises the Sixth district.

Mr. Dove, a building contractor, will oppose John J. Levay, merchant and former mayor. Mr. Levay apparently has the backing of leaders of the party organization, while Mr. Dove has been indorsed by the Non-Partisan Better Government League, which is seeking those regarded as the best available candidates for the more important offices.

Other important developments in the local situation today included the switching of Roscoe C. Rowe from Republican candidate for resident associate judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, for the State's attorneyship. Rowe at present holds the post of city counselor of Annapolis. Thus far he is unopposed in his party, as is A. Theodore Brady, Democratic incumbent. Rowe has the indorsement of the Better Government League, thereby assuring a hot contest at the general election in November.

Mr. Rowe's withdrawal leaves the judgeship on the Republican side solely to former Representative Linwood L. Clark, Second Maryland district, who recently withdrew from the contest for United States Senatorship. The Democrats face a primary fight for judge, the candidates being Nicholas H. Green, incumbent, and Eugene P. Childs.

Alexander W. Andrews, Republican, filed for county commissioner from the Eighth District.

"New Deal" Promised.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Democratic organization in Allegany County is promising a "new deal" in that it is proposed to name an entirely new State central committee with no member holding political office.

None of the present group is to seek reelection, it is understood. The personnel of the new committee, as filed with the Board of Election Supervisors for the primary, September 15, follows:

John P. Schellhaus, Mount Savage and Cumberland, glass manufacturer, former city councilman of Cumberland and former chairman of the Democratic county committee; Michael A. Laughlin, business man and party worker in Westernport for many years; Bernard Hughes, Frostburg, president of the Frostburg Fire Department and party worker for 40 years; Mrs. Emma F. Barnett, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Veterans Auxiliary for 20 years; John J. Meyers, Cumberland, salesman and active party worker; Harold A. Powell, Cumberland, boilermaker and president of the Federated Shop Crafts local, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Woman Seeks Post.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Miss Mary Ann Bradley, who has announced herself a Republican candidate for the office of register of wills, is the first woman in Dorchester County ever to aspire to an elective office.

Miss Bradley is a graduate of the Maryland State Normal School at Towson and for a number of years has been attendance officer for Dorchester County. She is a daughter of William O. Bradley, of Vienna, who represented Dorchester County one term in the Maryland Legislature.

G.O.P. to Organize In West Virginia

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Republican State executive committee will meet Saturday at Huntington to elect a State chairman and plan the fall campaign. Charles J. Schuck, Wheeling lawyer, and retiring State chairman, called the meeting.

Schuck has resigned as State chairman, saying he believes the leader of the ticket at the fall election, United States Senator Henry D. Hatfield, of Huntington, should have the privilege of selecting the personnel to conduct the campaign. Senator Hatfield was renominated at the recent State-wide primary election. Shuck also said that his law practice and other interests would prevent him from giving the time and attention to the chairmanship that it demands.

Committee officers, in addition to Schuck, are Mrs. U. G. Young, of Buckhannon, associate chairman; Maj. A. E. Haan, of Charleston, secretary; Sattis Simmons, of Ripley, assistant secretary, and Nathan Goff, of Clarksburg, treasurer.

Virginia Girl's Skull Crushed By Assailant

Second Attack in Two Weeks at Waynesboro; No Clews Found.

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Miss Pauline Parry, 21, is in a critical condition with her skull crushed as the result of the second mysterious attack recently on young women in the northeast section of the city.

All available State, city and county police officers are engaged on the case, but no definite clews as to her assailant had been unearthed tonight.

Waynesboro city council, at a special session today authorized a $200 reward for information leading to the conviction of the attacker and it was understood that if arrests were not made soon this sum would be augmented by other organizations in this community.

The attack occurred Sunday morning. She left a friend and had proceeded a block toward her home, alone, when her screams were heard. No trace of the assailant or the instrument used could be found. Hospital attendants say her recovery is doubtful.

Two weeks ago Miss Nannie Hutcheson, 20, was struck from behind in the same neighborhood and lay unconscious in weeds along the street for several hours before receiving assistance. Police are still investigating this affair.

Chief S. B. Shumate and City Manager I. G. Vass were questioning tonight several young men said to have been friendly with Miss Parry.

Robbers Get Little In Baltimore Home

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Burglars invaded the home of Dr. Howard A. Kelly, internationally known cancer expert of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, over the week-end and ransacked the house without finding anything of considerable value, the police reported today.

Dr. Kelly and his family are vacationing in Canada, and previously had placed all of the family valuables in safe-deposit boxes. During his Canadian tour he has been treating one of the famed Dionne quintuplets for a tumor on her thigh.

Discovery that the Kelly home had been entered was made today by a servant. The only loot was two baskets of canned goods and a few articles of apparel, police said.

Virginia Convicts Start Making 1935 Car Tags

Bar Association Vanguard Leaves New York for Parley

Aboard the Britannic at Sea, Aug. 20 (AP).—A vanguard of the group which will make the Virginia State Bar Association convention cruise from Norfolk to Bermuda made merry tonight aboard this big liner and constituted themselves a committee to welcome other members and friends of the association who will embark at Norfolk tomorrow afternoon.

Taking advantage of the option given them—of embarking at Norfolk or New York—this portion of the convention party began to get acquainted last night in the New York hotel, which served as temporary headquarters. Today they devoted to sightseeing or other entertainment in New York, and this afternoon embarked for the trip down the Coast.

Several speakers listed on the association program, officers and members of the association's executive committee, are among the early starters. Although outsiders now make up a majority of the passenger list, special parts of the boat have been set aside as gathering places for the bar association party. Numerous empty staterooms and vacant tables in the dining saloons tonight served as reminders of those who are to embark tomorrow, and a popular diversion for those on board was scanning the passenger list to find out which friends will come on at Norfolk and where they may be located.

Formal features of the program are reserved for the time during which the entire convention group will be present, and the usual shipboard pastimes were indulged in tonight.

Apple Brandy First in Virginia

Distillery in Winchester to Produce 250,000 Gallons in 6 Months.

Richmond, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Apple brandy, not the famous "corn whisky," will be the first hard liquor to be legally manufactured in Virginia since repeal.

The first license to operate a distillery in Virginia under the new State liquor laws will be issued today by the State A. B. C Board to Pomell, Inc., at Winchester, Va., which will manufacture apple brandy in estimated quantities of approximately 250,000 gallons every six months. Pomell, Inc., is a New York corporation. The distillery is located at Ridgewood Orchard, a few miles from Winchester. W. P. Massey, of Winchester, former secretary of the Virginia Horticultural Society, is president of the concern, and C. F. Massey, of Winchester, secretary.

Meanwhile, a distillery for corn whisky erected recently just off the Staples Mill road near Dumbarton, by the Virginia Distillery Corporation, was awaiting a State permit to start manufacturing a product to be known as "Old Virginia Cawn." Two buildings have been erected and 325 gallons are expected to be manufactured daily and retailed through State A. B. C. stores, according to B. H. Burnstein, president.

Drowning Victim Still Unidentified

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Scores of persons visited the city morgue today in an unsuccessful effort to identify the body of a young woman, about 25, found yesterday floating in the harbor.

Her clothing yielded no identifying papers or articles. Police at first thought she might have been murdered and her body thrown into the river.

Dr. Howard Maldeis, the city post-mortem physician, conducted an autopsy and ruled that the girl had drowned. Police have not discarded the theory that she might have been thrown into the water, however, and seek her identification as the first step of an investigation to determine how she met her death.

Plan to Immunize Dogs.

McClue, State health commissioner, at closing sessions of the State public health council. Dr. McClue opened the way for sterilization of the mentally unfit in State institutions by approving a State law, passed in 1929, but never used.

Passion Play Talk Heard By Brethren

Opens the Final Week of Massanetta Springs Bible Conference.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug 20 (Spl.).—An illustrated lecture on the Passion Play of Oberammergau by Page McK. Etchison, of Washington, tonight climaxed United Brethren Day which marked the opening of the final week of the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference.

The day's speakers were Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, of Birmingham; Dr. William Evans, of Los Angeles; Dr. William L. Stidger, of Boston, and Dr. Clyde A. Lynch, president of Lebanon Valley, Annville, Pa. Dr. James W. Wright, pastor of the First United Brethren Church of Harrisonburg, presided at the noon session and introduced the ministers of his denomination.

United Brethren Day followed a Sunday filled with inspiring talks which were heard by 3,000 persons. The feature address was that of Dr. Kirby Page, of New York City, in which he told Christians not to go to war. There was a large attendance of members of local congregations of pacifist faith, including the Church of the Brethren and the Mennonites.

Dr. Page gave seven reasons why a Christian should not go to war. First, he said, it is contrary to the mind of Jesus. Second, he pointed out, it is futile, does not work.

"Third," said Dr. Page, "war is uncivilized. We thought we could save the lives of our loved ones. On the basis of evidence, war is destructive. In the World War we thought we could save human lives and protect property. In the main, the World War was an effort to protect property, an economic struggle. We are just beginning to pay the bills of the World War and our grandchildren will continue to pay for it * * * We went into the World War to save democracy, while in reality democracy has no greater enemy than war. We also went into the war to save civilization. Our civilization will not survive another such effort as that.

Calls It Unpatriotic.

"Fourth, we can not give war our support because we feel that war is unpatriotic. A man is guilty of disloyalty to his people if he goes to war. We have long cherished the delusion that it is patriotic to go to war. That is false. Patriotism is love of your people, love of your country, devotion to the high and noble ideals * * * By all the laws of logic it becomes unpatriotic for a man to go to war * * *"

In the fifth place, said Dr. Page, war is not necessary. The United States can settle any dispute with a foreign power peacefully, he said. Sixth he listed as "strategy," saying that if Christian people expressed their opposition there would be no war. Seventh, he declared, "it is less perilous to refuse to go to war than it is dangerous to go to war."

In conclusion, Dr. Page said: "We will never get peace until Christians have bravery enough to follow the way of the cross even though it leads to Calvary.

Benefit Fete Thursday.

Kilmarnock, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—An entertainment to aid Lancaster County tuberculosis sufferers will take place Thursday at Wharton Grove, sponsored by the tuberculosis committee.

Methodists Hold 4-Day Celebration

Pageant at Leesburg on Wednesday Night Will Close Meetings.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The four-day celebration by local Methodists of the sesquicentennial of the founding of Methodism in America will close on Wednesday night with a pageant, "The Romance of Methodism," to be staged on the courthouse lawn in Leesburg.

This pageant, written by Mrs. Arthur B. Bibbins, of Baltimore, and directed here by the Rev. Jesse H. Hobbs, pastor of the local Methodist church, will depict the history of the beginnings and growth of Methodism.

There will be 15 speaking characters in the pageant. Sixty nonspeaking characters will also take part, and in addition there will be a chorus of 100 colored singers.

The celebration opened yesterday in the Methodist church with the baptism of Herbert Gray Hobbs, 4-month-old son of the Rev. and Mrs. Jesse H. Hobbs. The Rev. James Furman Herbert, of Roxboro, N. C., administered the ordinance with water from the River Jordan where Christ was baptized. Dr. Herbert preached at the opening service.

This evening was devoted to Methodist history with a talk on "Asbury, the Great Bishop," by the Rev. G. Ellis Williams, pastor of Calvary M. E. Church, Frederick, Md. Tomorrow evening Dr. H. H. Sherman, of the Baltimore Conference, will give an illustrated lecture on the general history of the Methodist Church.

Woodland Church Has Anniversary

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The golden anniversary of Woodland Methodist Episcopal Church, 2 miles west of Culpeper, was celebrated yesterday with exercises occupying the entire day.

The program, arranged in four major events, began with an address of welcome by the pastor, the Rev. J. H. Johnson, of Brightwood. The Sunday school department sponsored the introductory number on the program, accompanied by music from a choir trained by Prof. John Elliott, of Fredericksburg. The morning and afternoon sermons were preceded by historical talks on the early days of the organization of the church.

A portrait of the late Rev. George W. Bailey, the founder of Woodland Church, was presented by W. G. Taylor, giving a personal sketch of the life of the subject of the painting.

Fincastle, Va., Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Search was in progress today for Lewis Kendricks, of Beacon, N. Y., chauffeur for Maj. Robert C. Kent, former Army officer, who will be tried September 2 on a charge of slaying Mrs. Mary Hastings, Blue Ridge Springs hotel proprietress.

Hendricks, wanted as a witness, disappeared from Fincastle when Kent and Mrs. Hastings left together for Washington, D. C. Kent returned alone and several days later the body of Mrs. Hastings, riddled with shotgun bullets, was found near Stroudsburg, Pa.

Adult Schools Discussed at FERA Parley

Educational Institute Is Told of Recreation Needs and Plans.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The growth of general adult education and the aid to good citizenship through community recreational activities were outlined in today's session of the FERA Educational Training Institute at the University of Virginia here.

In describing the trends in adult education, Jacques Ozanne, field representative of the American Association for Adult Education, said that the movement was now considered a necessity in all advanced communities.

Ozanne questioned the value of vocational training in the emergency educational program in view of the lack of opportunities for employment, but declared that general self-education in the art of good living would become increasingly important.

Juvenile Delinquency.

Definite relationships between the amount of crime committed in a community and how the leisure time of delinquents is used before conviction was described by Claire McCarthy, director of the Community Recreation Association of Richmond. In an effort to decrease juvenile misconduct in Richmond, Miss McCarthy said the Community Recreation Association had conducted five-year study of delinquency cases. Less than 10 per cent of juvenile delinquents, she said, were found to be members of any such character building agencies as the Boy or Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., colored recreation organizations and others.

The rise of adult education in Delaware and the value of informal instruction were discussed by Marguerite H. Burnett, director of adult education in the Delaware Department of Public Instruction.

Miss Erin Kohn, assistatnt supervisor of adult schools in South Carolina and dean of the opportunity school there, outlined a plan for organization for adult schools and described various phases of educational activity which might be developed.

Stresses Recreation.

Stressing the importance of character building recreation, Miss McCarthy declared that "no educational plan for a community is adequate that does not include provisions for wholesome recreation. In education, therefore, the school has a large responsibility in promoting recreation as a part of the educational system.

"At the present time in Virginia the schools are not in a financial condition to expand activities to meet the needs of the present day. Therefore in Richmond the Community Recreation Association, a study group for planning, organizing and promting of recreational and informal educational activities, demonstrated the value of commuity center work in the schoolhouse as a method of meeting these needs."

For the purpose of presenting resolutions to the group, Prof. J. A. Rorer, head of extension teaching at the University of Virginia and presiding officer, today appointed a committee composed of Kenneth Lee, emergency educational supervisor for Virginia; G. H. Van Dorp, adult educational supervisor for Maryland; Dr. H. C. Humphreys, director of emergency education in West Virginia, and Mrs. Hazel Clark Taylor, representing the District of Columbia.

Field Completed For Fox Hunting Airplane Service

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Construction of a landing field later to be known as the Warrenton Municipal Airport, has been completed by the State. No planes are permitted to land on the field for the present because of soft earth resulting from recent heavy rains.

The airport is a link on the existing air-mail route between Washington and Nashville, and one of a system of 11 airports that will provide a landing field every 50 miles between Washington and Nashville, thereby enabling air-mail planes to carry passengers. The airport also lies on the air-mail route between Washington and Charleston, W. Va.

Plans have been announced for airplane service directly between New York and Warrenton every week-end during the fox hunting season.

Fifty acres of land were leased for five years from E. W. Winmill, of Warrenton, for the airport. The ground has been improved with a drainage system and A. W. Card, director of Virginia airports, declares it to be one of the finest landing fields in the State. The runway is half a mile long and 250 feet wide.

10 in Boat Mishaps Saved From Death

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Rescues of ten persons from Patapsco River and Chesapeake Bay were reported here today. Four of those saved were young women and six were men.

The first rescue was accomplished yesterday in the Patapsco, about half a mile from the Anne Arundel County shore. Charles F. Mitchell, aboard his yacht, the Harmattan, noticed an overturned row boat and investigated. It was found three women and four men were clinging to the overturned boat. Mr. Mitchell took them aboard and towed the rowboat to shallow water. There the rescued group bailed out the boat and departed without giving their names.

Later in the day a sailing yacht, the Upset, overturned with John Dowling, its owner; Miss Winona Hare and Karl Nyborg. They were seen by Thomas Johnson, sr., of Woodlawn Beach, who took the exhausted swimmers into his skiff.

Rent Held High In Washington Slum Sections

Halbert Reports One Case of 10 Persons Living in Single Room.

In one diplapidated dwelling in Washington, more than ten persons occupy a single room—a poorly ventilated, none-too-large room at that.

This is just one in a "striking array of evil conditions" cited in a report made yesterday by Leroy A. Halbert, research director for the emergency relief division here.

The report was based on a survey of the living conditions of 6,595 persons who are on the relief rolls in Washington. The survey was made by CWA workers who made a house-to-house canvass to gather their information.

Like N. Y. Tenements.

The survey revealed conditions rivaling any uncovered in New York's tenement districts in the old days, and gave impetus to The Post's campaign for the abolition of alley dwellings in Washington and the building of low-cost houses here for persons with small incomes.

Rents in the dwellings occupied by relief workers in Washington were found to be 45 per cent higher than in other cities.

The investigators also found that many houses which are being rented here have been condemned by the health authorities.

Much Overcrowding.

The findings of those who made the housing survey were checked and tabulated by Norman T. McManaway. Commenting on McManaway's reports, Research Director Halbert said:

"Perhaps the first outstanding point of interest is that only about 4 per cent of these people were found to own their own homes. Practically all of these merely own equities.

"The second point of interest to which I would call attention is that there is evidenced a great deal of overcrowding.

"This was intensified by the fact that 274 white families took in a total of 483 roomers and 298 other white families took in a total of 1,178 boarders, while 995 colored families took in a total of 2,466 roomers and 953 colored families took in a total of 2,293 boarders.

Ten in One Room.

"In other words, the 6,595 families took in a total of 6,520 roomers and boarders.

"If you consider that an average of 1.5 persons per room is as much as any dwelling should be expected to house, this study shows that 34.6 per cent of the houses were overcrowded."

Commenting on a table showing the distribution of families according to the number of rooms they occupied, Halbert said:

"It reveals that there was one extreme case where there were more than 10 people occupying one room, and another case 7 people.

"In the 18 cases, families of six were living in a single room and in 64 cases families of five. In 162 cases, families of four were found occupying a single room and 403 families of three members each were found living and sleeping in a single room."

Lack Windows, Toilets.

Another table in the report lists the number of rooms without windows, those without adequate toilet facilities, and those without running water.

Continuing, Mr. Halbert said:

"Next to the matter of overcrowding and lack of proper sanitary facilities, the subject which stands out is the fact that an unjustifiable amount of rent is paid for hundreds of really uninhabitable dwellings.

"Rents are at least 45 per cent higher in Washington than in other cities of the United States.

"Mr. McManaway concludes from his study that the inability of people to pay rent for adequate quarters has increased the demand for cheap quarters, and the use of dilapidated and insanitary houses has actually gone up during the last two years as a result of this demand. He finds many houses are being rented which have actually been condemned by the health authorities.

Almost Third Use Lamps.

"The third point to which I would call attention is the striking prevalence of antiquated facilities for light and heat.

"The study shows that 31 per cent of the dwellings were being lighted by kerosene lamps; that 70 per cent were heated by stoves, and that the majority of these used wood for heating."

Among the constructive suggestions made in the report were these:

1. The construction of more houses for people with low incomes. Attention is called to the successful operation of low-cost housing companies organized on a limited-dividend basis, which furnish homes at reasonable rental to several hundred families.

Such houses, it is argued, could be rented for less than the "terrible" dwellings which are now being occupied by relief families.

Public Baths Needed.

2. That more public bath houses in certain neighborhoods be constructed. Swimming pools help in the summer, it is pointed out, but what is needed is bath houses that would operate the year 'round.

3. A system under which social workers could determine the rental value of dwellings being used by relief families, and have the authority to move families out of unfit houses.

4. Demolition of unfit houses.

5. A suggestion for keeping the houses free of vermin.

6. That the landlords furnish heating facilities in rented houses so as to do away with stoves.

MY DOG STORY

The Post invites its readers to send in their favorite dog stories, accompanied, if possible, by a photograph. The stories should be true ones, and not more than 250 words in length. A weekly prize of $10 will be paid for the best contribution.

My grandmother is not particularly fond of dogs, but, knowing of my love for them, she told me this story of Bugel, an amazingly smart police dog, belonging to her husband.

It seemed, as a duty to his master, Bugel took it upon himself to act as my grandmother's guardian. So persistent was he about following her and remaining ever under-foot, that she considered him a nuisance. This, however, was before he saved her baby's life.

She was sitting on the high porch by her house. At her feet lay Bugel. By her side, her 6-month-old son, just learning to crawl, played on his pallet. Leaving the porch, she entered the house for the baby's bottle, only to be startled by the screams of her child. She returned to the porch to find only Bugel; his feet firmly planted on the edge of the porch floor, and his head hanging over the side.

She followed the screams of her child and found him, suspended upside down, 8 feet from the pavement, and held by the hem of his long baby dress which was firmly clasped between Bugel's teeth. Frantically she rescued the child. Bugel came and lay down at her feet.

Later, telling her husband of the incident, she remarked, "The carpenter must put a rail around that porch tomorrow."

He smiled, "That's hardly necessary as long as we have Bugel."

Mrs. C. H. Bennion.
1803 Biltmore Street Northwest.

Ted hated a bath more than anything else on earth. His white hair was long and curly and difficult to dry or to comb.

Whenever he heard the faucet turned on for a bath he would retire to the seclusion of a closet, under the couch or back of the stove, where he stayed in hiding and nothing could induce him to come out until the water ceased to run in the tub. Then when all was quiet he would poke his little nose out of his seclusion and venture forth.

One stormy day after I had just completed the arduous task of bathing and combing him, someone came to the door, and Ted rushed out into the muddy streets in the rain.

I was furious! I followed him for two blocks, then gave up the chase and went home.

About an hour later Ted scratched at the door. I opened it to the muddiest hound I had ever beheld. He was a sight!

I didn't have time to deliver my dog lecture, for Ted rushed past me straight to the bathroom and jumped into the empty tub where, he stood wagging his tail dubiously, waiting for me to turn the water on again, and bathe him.

He accepted his fate without the slightest struggle and it was all I could do to keep from laughing outright.

Mrs. L. A. Wallace
201 Custer Road, Bethesda, Md.

Our police dog, Lady, was the most lovable, and most human I have ever seen. One day my young son and I were going to visit my sister in town and he wanted to take her some fudge.

While I was making it Lady was in her usual corner of the kitchen, watching us.

We packed the fudge in a candy box and wrapped it and when John went out to open the garage doors he laid the box of candy on the ground near by and forgot to pick it up.

After we had gone a few blocks, I asked him if he had the candy and he remembered he left it in the yard. We turned back, and as we drove up the street approaching our house, Lady was lying on the front lawn. When she saw us coming, she quickly went to the garage, picked up the box of candy, bringing it to us before we had time to reach the house.

When I gave her an affectionate pat for doing it, she looked quite embarrassed.

Senator Pope Flays NRA Critics.

Critics of NRA were assailed last night by Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, in a radio speech under the auspices of the Democratic National Committee, which was regarded as an answer to charges of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, that the recovery agency fostered monopoly. Senator Pope pictured NRA as the savior of the small business man and ridiculed its foes as members of one of three classes —"purely political, artful self-seekers and chiselers and the sincere opponent of monopoly."

He listed as self-seekers and "chiselers" those who "refuse to cooperate in codes of fair competition and who desire to continue the practices that have enabled them to profit by monopolistic methods. They now are pretending," he added, "great concern for the little business man and their solicitude for him is only exceeded by the rapacity with which they sought to destroy him in other days."

The sincere opponent of monopoly was envisaged by the speaker as an "intense individualist who does not believe in cooperation. He has no confidence," Senator Pope said, "that any good can come out of any cooperative effort by industry to eliminate unfair competition even under the supervision of the Government. He says he is convinced that any such effort will only result in the exploitation of the consumer and the little man in industry. He believes in keeping business units separated and under criminal prohibitory antitrust laws.

"The undeniable fact that trusts and monopolies grew and flourished under the very same antitrust laws to which he would fully return does not convince him that there is anything wrong with that method."

World's Fair Backers To Be Paid $814,620

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—Bondholders who put up $10,000,000 to back the World's Fair will receive an $814,620 payment on the principal of the loan September 1, Maj. Lennox R. Lohr, general manager, announced today. When this payment is made, the fair will have paid off approximately 80 per cent of its obligations.

In addition, $98,792 in interest will be paid the bondholders who in October, 1933, waived their interest. The entire bond interest ultimately will be paid in full, Lohr predicted.

Langer Given Right To Occupy Mansion

Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 20 (AP).—Attorney General P. O. Sathre today ruled William Langer, recently removed as Governor, is entitled to occupy the State-owned executive mansion because "he is still Governor of the State, but is under temporary disability by reason of his conviction in Federal court."

Sathrie's ruling was given to the State board of administration, which sought the opinion after Acting Gov. Ole H. Olson made demands for the mansion.

The Speaker.

In the death of Henry T. Rainey the Administration has lost a loyal supporter who served faithfully during a critical period. The House is deprived of a picturesque figure, held in affectionate esteem by his colleagues. There have been greater Speakers among the 39 who preceded him—men of more forceful character, of broader statesmanship, who left a deeper impress upon their times. But none outranks him in those personal qualities which so appealed to his associates.

Much as the seniority rule counts in Congress, it is still true that no man can rise to the important and commanding Speakership who has been only a time-server. Speaker Rainey had served 14 terms, representing that rural Illinois district once contested by Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas. Except for defeat in the Harding landslide of 1920, he had been reelected continuously since 1903.

When he was sworn in as Speaker on March 9, 1933, he was entering upon his fifteenth term. In point of service he was dean of the House. Nevertheless it was by reason of his record, the respect in which he was held by his fellow Democrats, rather than because of his long service, that he was selected by them for the highest place of honor and responsibility in the House.

It was appropriate that a man long identified with the more progressive, Western wing of the Democratic party should become the New Deal's field marshal in the House. Throughout his career his sympathies had been consonant with what he conceived the New Deal to mean. His loyalty was therefore no mere subservience.

If precedent holds, the succession will pass to Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, who succeeded Mr. Rainey as majority leader. The late Speaker will be remembered as a soft-spoken, kindly man of much personal charm who presided over a House distinguished chiefly for an unprecedented acquiescence in the will of the Executive. Possessing and wielding the power, he will not go down in history as one of the Czars of Congress.

A Courageous Minority.

Close to 12 per cent of the 43,000,000 voters who responded to the command to express their approval or disapproval of Hitler's seizure of the Reichspresidency have had the courage to dissent. It is a limited number, but compared with the much smaller negative vote cast last November, an impressive gain in the strength, or courage, of the opposition is revealed.

Also significant is the fact that the proportion of opposition votes was much above the average in certain Catholic and industrial centers in which disaffection is known to be strong. In Cologne and Aachen, for instance, the "yes" votes dropped to 83 per cent as compared with 89 per cent last November, while in Berlin and Hamburg dissenting votes amounted to about 20 per cent of the total. In former Communist centers, moreover, Hitler received majorities which can only be explained as indicating that this party feels its long-range prospects are improved by continuation of the Nazi dictatorship.

The size of the minority vote is especially remarkable since the people were called to vote upon an issue already decided. Those who cast a negative were merely protesting, doubtless at some personal risk, against actions that are for the present, at least, irrevocable. It would of course require more courage to stay away from the polls altogether than to write a presumably secret vote in opposition. Nevertheless, chances of detection exist which doubtless prevented multitudes of terrorized citizens from expressing their unfavorable views of the usurpation of the Presidency by Chancellor Hitler.

Except for the evidence afforded of growing opposition to the Nazi regime, the election is without significance. It is difficult to understand why the Fuehrer places such importance upon enforced endorsement of his policies. Such tactics do not deceive the outside world and it is most unlikely that they impose upon the German people. The unpleasant shock administered by that 12 per cent who admittedly voted "no" may cause the Chancellor-President to hesitate before again testing the strength of his support by ordering a national plebiscite.

Beaver.

There seems to be some controversy over whether the pink-whiskered human mulberry bush—as the sports writers so pleasantly dub him—is a baseball pitcher or an ex-boxer. Some say that he used to be a sailor who fought for a living on his shore leaves. Another school is of the opinion that he is wrestling's Masked Marvel in still another disguise. Whatever his previous condition of servitude, on Sunday he was a ball pitcher, either good or bad as your own judgment in the matter dictates. And, because of his alliance with the House of David, he appeared with his whiskers blowing in the wind and fanned by the exigent vocabulary of baseball critics.

All this is a very minor matter, but is swell publicity for a team which, lacking much of anything else, needs a lot of that. The season is getting well along now and the Washington team has got itself where it needs whiskered players to attract the attention that might better be drawn by better baseball. Mr. Benson has given the local fans something amusing to talk about and for that Mr. Cronin should be truly grateful.

Partly for this publicity value, and partly because he seems a mighty likable fellow, who can stand kidding from those who don't even excel in whiskers, we hope he makes the grade. It isn't as though it were a very stiff grade, either.

The U. S. And The I. L. O.

President Roosevelt's acceptance of membership in the International Labor Organization officially associates this country with an admirable long-range effort to eliminate profound causes of international friction. The aim of the organization, in a sentence, is to bring about a general improvement of debased industrial standards to the end that no country need fear "unfair competition" from the sweated labor of rival producers.

To further this goal the organization in its fifteen years of existence has adopted 40 separate conventions dealing with matters ranging from the minimum age of stokers to the maximum hours of underground work in coal mines. Passage of these conventions, which are in reality no more than recommendations, of course binds no member of the International Labor Organization. It does set up standards which member-states have an obligation to consider with a view to incorporation into their own social legislation, national or local.

While the International Labor Organization was at first disposed to adopt conventions rather hastily, and as a result to see few ratifications by national legislatures, it has of late years followed a much more careful procedure. For instance, a year of discussion must now precede the adoption of any convention at Geneva. Thorough preliminary examination is also assured by the tri-partite system of national representation in the organization. Governments, employers and labor are all represented in the separate national delegations, a situation which results in frequent defeat of projects desired by only one of the three groups.

Membership in this carefully safeguarded effort to achieve international minimum standards of working conditions will create no control whatsoever over social legislation in the United States. As a matter of fact, many of the standards established by these conventions fall below those already universally accepted in this country. Where we shall gain most from membership will be in influencing improvement among certain of our industrial competitors, and in securing automatically much invaluable technical information which the I. L. O. gathers for its members. This last should be particularly useful in preventing blunders in the development of a social insurance program by the Administration.

The only discernible problem involved in our membership would seem to be a slight intensification of that same issue which Section 7(a) of the Recovery Act has as yet failed to solve. Will the A. F. of L. be chosen as the organization appropriate to present the viewpoint of American labor at Geneva? Anticipation that this will be the case doubtless accounts in part for the support which the federation has given to American membership in the I. L. O. Solution of that difficulty, if any feel that it is such, rests entirely with us. Geneva only asks that employer and employe spokesmen should both be "representative."

Now that this step has been taken there will be apparent the gross exaggeration of those who have opposed it as "committing the United States to internationalism under the lash of foreign influences," as Representative Tinkham characterized the authorization of membership when it passed the House last June. The President, and the Secretary of Labor, have shown exemplary political courage in not being deterred by fantastic interpretations of a step which will have little electoral appeal, but is obviously of a constructive and desirable character.

Proof By Trial.

In an article dealing with problems of monetary policy published in last Sunday's Post, Stuart Chase admits that the advice given by J. M. Keynes to spend our way out of depression impresses many other experts as "dangerous nonsense." Since he is convinced that neither side can prove its case by argument, Mr. Chase suggests that the only way to find out which is right is to try it.

This light-hearted advice to experiment with a monetary mechanism which, we are told, nobody understands may appeal to the scientific imagination of a few disinterested individuals. To the average citizen, however, the proposal to disburse vast sums from the public Treasury in order to test a theory is strange and irresponsible counsel. Mr. Keynes and his followers at least believe that they have proved their case when they urge spending as a cure for depression. Mr. Keynes undoubtedly thinks, too, that he knows a great deal about money. Consequently his daring is justified to a certain extent by his conviction of being theoretically right.

Mr. Chase, although obviously in sympathy with the spending fraternity, is an agnostic, who admits that he does not know what money is. Furthermore, he asserts that money is not a branch of science, but "a set of habits, customs and beliefs, which have grown up the way a religion grows up." There is a large element of truth in this view and, so believing, Mr. Chase should recognize the danger of tampering with social institutions that have acquired a validity stronger than mere reasoning. Instead, he urges spending policies that tend to upset and destroy preconceived ideas regarding the function of money. He also ignores the lessons of the past which show that loss of confidence in a monetary system may lead to national bankruptcy in face of vast expenditures of public funds, and because of them.

The fact that money is a mysterious and very imperfectly understood device for the exchange of goods and the ascertainment of values makes experimentation in this field extremely dangerous. Instead of pleading ignorance as an excuse for a plunge into the unknown, it should be regarded as a warning against hasty action.

Still Champion.

Helen Hull Jacobs has successfully defended her title as woman's national tennis champion. Experts of the game disagree on her playing, one leading critic contending that her appearance in the finals against Sarah Palfrey was brilliant, another being of the opinion that she shone largely by comparison. But critics fortunately are seldom of one mind, whether they are judging a book, a horse or a tennis player. The fact remains that Miss Jacobs went onto the court at Forest Hills before a gallery skeptical of her skill, and came off an easy and undisputed victor.

Before the national tournament the tennis wiseacres were predicting trouble for Miss Jacobs and certainly she has had her downs as well as ups this season. She has never been the popular heroine that Mrs. Moody was and her preeminence in the field has never been so pronounced. Just for that reason one must admire more her doggedness, her determination to win cleanly the honors of her chosen sport. Her victory Sunday at Forest Hills is the more remarkable for the fact that she overcame not merely her outstanding opponent, but also a certain frigidity in the audience. Then, as if to show magnanimity, she took Miss Palfrey with her to win the doubles crown.

So Miss Jacobs emerges from the tournament not only as a three-times national women's champion, but also as a sportswoman of the highest caliber. It may be hoped that next season Helen Wills Moody will again be in the game. For it is doubtful that the present champion is any longer inferior to that great player. And the test of this assertion would be great to see.

Horse Vs. Auto Thieves.

Every so often additional evidence is unearthed indicating that in many respects our judicial system has failed to keep up with the times. Statute books everywhere still contain ancient blue laws, for example, that are often invoked ruthlessly and without consideration of the fact that moral concepts have changed long since the laws were made. Amusing, and revealing, is the statement by the American Automobile Association that 18 States and the District of Columbia still think it a greater crime to steal a horse than an automobile!

The automobile was unknown when the horse theft laws were passed. In another era men were hanged for stealing horses, and even in conservative New England horse thievery was so pronounced that there were established vigilante societies for the suppression of horse thieves. One such society still has a charter in Dedham, Mass., and meets annually!

The A. A. A. (not to be confused with AAA) does not suggest that we hang motor thieves. In fact it points out that in certain States the laws against "misappropriation" of automobiles are so strict that convictions are all but impossible. What it does suggest, and wisely, is the passage of more uniform laws.

The automobile knows no city, county or State boundary. It travels fast and, almost, where it will. It would be a sensible move if a standardization of laws affecting the ownership and theft of automobiles could be effected, with penalties severe enough to act as a deterrent but not so severe as to antagonize court or jury. Standardization of many things may not be desirable, but laws affecting swift-moving vehicles that may one day be in New York and the next quarter way across a continent could stand much more standardization than they have yet received.

Exit Sir Nigel.

Sir Nigel Playfair, who died in London on Sunday, was a most authentic Englishman. That is to say, he attended Winchester, Harrow and Oxford, and then (for a time) became a barrister. But not even these restraints could crush the artist in him. And his special talent as a great theatrical producer he cultivated in the best of colleges: sixteen years as an actor.

It was the Englishman of the "public schools" who asked: "Will Shakespeare ever be translated into American?" But it was the artist who, disregarding all his professional friends' predictions of failure, "made" John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." For his combination of qualities, Nigel Playfair was knighted—with his name a title was almost indispensable. But it is as an interpretative artist that he will be remembered.

Playfair impressed his dramatists, rather than himself, upon the public. If he may be called a British Reinhardt, it is not in the particular of pageantry that the comparison has validity. As manager of the Lyric Theater, at Hammersmith, he achieved a qualitative, rather than a quantitative success. But night after night, for fourteen years, he drew innumerable lovers of the stage to that remote and undistinguished London suburb.

Sir Nigel shared taste with accuracy; had an eye for general effects tempered by a soul for the telling detail. Above all, he possessed a sure literary sense, a perfect understanding of what his theater-public needed, and how best to make it like what was good for it. Had he done nothing more than restore Gay's "Beggar's Opera" to our generation, he would have deserved more than all the honors that were conferred upon him.

"And He Only Has a Moustache—"

A Mexican Defends Mexico's New Day

TO the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with great interest an article entitled "Mexico Sees a New Day Dawn," published in the magazine section, on July 22. Shortly afterward Mr. John J. O'Connor of this city wrote to you "to protest" against it, dubbing it "Communist propaganda of the worst sort." Subsequently, from Mexico City comes a passionate statement by Mr. Paul V. Murray, who, as can easily be gathered, does not "take kindly to sloppy handling of themes which center" in his "life's work, the study of Mexico and her history."

Your excellent newspaper—which in the past year or so has come to be one of the best dailies hereabouts—deserves unrestricted commendation for the fairness shown in publishing in full the two critical letters above referred to. This is true journalism at its best.

A goodly portion of my congratulations must go to the author of the article in question for having succeeded in gathering material sufficiently provocative to elicit written comment from its readers. As a Mexican, I cannot but feel gratified to note the interest that my country is arousing among our cousins of the United States, and the airing of conflicting viewpoints will serve, no doubt, to promote a more intelligent approach to the study of so complex a subject as the Mexican scene. If I were allowed to join in this exchange of ideas, I would feel inclined to agree with certain points raised by Mr. Murray anent what we could call the historical preamble of the article in question. Perhaps it was somewhat ambitious of him to introduce the central theme of his article—Mexico's Six Year Plan—with a "ready-to-serve," evaporated, and condensed resume of four hundred years of Mexican history. But it is clear that his article was not a historical essay, and, it seems to me that, viewed in this light, the article should not have offended the sensibilities of a historian. Moreover, and I am inclined to think that Mr. Murray will agree with me, the history of pre-Cortesian, colonial and early independent Mexico, has not been written yet, and the existing knowledge is not definite enough as yet to preclude divergent interpretations.

There is no such a thing as an orthodoxy in the interpretation of historical phenomena. The final verdict still is in the making. Analyzed from this standpoint, The Post article errs gravely in matters historical—or gives an adequate, well developed background—depending on the school of thought in which the reader belongs.

But granting that it falls short of the mark as a historical monograph, are we to conclude that it has missed its point? Has it failed to show the underlying factors in Mexico's great upheaval? Would the reader be unable to grasp what is behind the comprehensive plan of economic and social rehabilitation toward which are directed the efforts of present-day Mexico?

* * * *

VIBRATING through the whole article one hears a distinct, persistent, tragic note: oppression of the many at the hands of a few. Has Mr. Murray, in his sincere quest of the truth, failed to hear that ominous sound, muffled at times, deafening at others? Wouldn't he agree that the common denominators of all the stages of the history of the Mexican people are the misery, the abject poverty, the exploitation of their lowly and humble? Does it matter much, in the face of this throbbing, human reality, whether the exploiters were Spaniards, or creoles, or mestizos or Indians?

Having—rather thoroughly—castigated the writer of the article for his many historical inaccuracies, Mr. Murray leaves history aside and turns to comment on contemporary events. He admits that "the writer is accurate when he talks about the six-year plan, the nationalization of industry and the advanced ideas in education, social welfare, sanitation and labor codes." The adoption of these measures represent the dawn of a new day for Mexico, Mr. Murray. And the article seeks to portray precisely that.

I venture to suggest that in his handling of the Mexican Revolution and of the agrarian reforms Mr. Murray, in a somewhat jesting mood, proceeds to deal with the matter as lightly as the author of the article dealt with history. "Why should a band of Indians"—he says—"be allowed to take over another man's fields just when the crop has ripened, benefit by the other man's work, and walk away, refusing to plant another crop or tend it once they have harvested and sold or used it for themselves?"

Does this represent Mr. Murray's understanding of the land problem of Mexico and the conception he has of the ideology behind the agrarian laws?

* * * *

I AM inclined to find ample excuse for the errors committed by the writer of the article in question, since he obviously has never been in Mexico. But in the case of someone who lives in Mexico, and claims to have dedicated his life to "the study of Mexico and her history"—as he puts it—I fail to see any reason why his attitude should be considered unbiased, impartial, and accurate, as should be the attitude of a scholar of the type to which he claims to belong.

". . . 'I could laugh at the writer's dramatization of the Indian . . ." says Mr. Murray. No doubt he could—and did. And it would not be far-fetched to assume that he has laughed—and perhaps continues to laugh—at the struggles of a people striving to attain national unity, cohesiveness, life itself. The substantial progress already achieved in this direction seemingly leaves Mr. Murray cold. Villa and his Indians—he informs us—at the cry of "Pulque and Women" enjoyed a "bit of first-class killing." Is that all impartial Mr. Murray has to say about the Mexican Revolution (with a capital R)?

* * * *

THERE was bloodshed—rivers of blood—there was pillage, and rapine, and murder. There was—and perhaps there still is—graft and self-enrichment on the part of many so-called leaders. There were pledges made—and broken, promises unfulfilled, reforms that never were effected. There was, in one word, revolution. But—was that all, Mr. Murray? Out of that nightmare, out of that flood of human passions aroused, sweeping and tearing down everything that stood in the way of the angry waters, a new Mexico is being born.

Little must it matter to Mr. Murray that a tremendously important document—the Constitution of 1917—was one of the first surprises that the Mexican Revolution gave to the world in general, and to some American officials and other representatives of powerful American interests in particular. The fundamental social and economic principles of that Constitution—assailed as a bolshevistic, red monstrosity, both at that time and subsequently—have been incorporated, 17 years later, in the legislation of other "more advanced" countries. Communistic fallacies, in Mexico—a New Deal, elsewhere. True, and here I would like Mr. O'Connor to do a little reading between the lines—many believe certain individual liberties have been dealt a serious blow in that Magna Charta and in other concomitant legislative measures. Let us bear in mind, however, that in 1917 the smoke of battle still pervaded the atmosphere, that democratic liberties cannot be exercised in all their pristine purity until the people are ready for democratic self-government, and that even today, in the most advanced democracies, prejudice can and does become the deciding factor, for example, in national elections.

In attempting to evaluate the Mexico of today, how infinitely better it would be to approach the problem in the calm, truly serene attitude shown by Mr. Grant Shepherd and by Dean Doyle, in their letters to The Post, published on August 10 and 11, respectively. And, in all sincerity, what a valuable contribution to the study of Mexico Mr. Murray would have made, had he confined his statements to the rectification of all the historical errors he found in the much discussed article of July 22.

* * * *

AS A Mexican who has unshakable faith in his country and her people—particularly the humble, the ignorant, the downtrodden masses—who does not want ever to be blind to realities, who begins first by recognizing the shortcomings and defects of his compatriots before attempting to extol their qualities, and who deprecates the lack of even elementary understanding of things Mexican among his average cousin of the United States, because he considers such understanding of tremendous importance for the future of Mexico—I am inclined to state that the article to which Mr. Murray took exception does a great deal more to create a sympathetic feeling for Mexico's problems in the average American reader of the daily press, than Mr. Murray's careless and hasty appraisal of present-day events, in spite of his brilliant historical dissertation. We must bear in mind that the arrogant, high-handed "diplomacy" of yesterday, inspired by powerful private interests, has always appealed for the justification of many "interpositions" and interventions, to a misinformed, unsympathetic public. And public opinion is made up of the average American readers of the daily press, in their numerical aggregate.

May I again congratulate The Post for having opened its columns so generously to this subject, and may I thank its editor for having allowed a Mexican to express his views in the matter. I should like to state, in closing, that I am not an official nor an employe of the Mexican government.

Cupids and Graphs.

Accepted convention, as far back as the mythological days of Cupid and other national love gods, has surrounded human mating with an aura of romance.

But now statistical gentlemen who make curves and graphs and charts are invading this field sacred to the lovers, poets and the romantic school of society editors.

Economic determinism has taken over Cupid's realm, is enforcing its own code in the interest of controlled mergers and economic scarcity. Weddings now, like ingot production and car loadings, have become an industrial index.

But there is a bright side to it. If love laughed at locksmiths in ye olden time, it is now beginning to laugh at depression. A New York statistician of an insurance company has just reported that the marriage rate in 21 States embraced in a survey, increased 4.3 per cent in 1933 over 1932. In addition to his more romantic duties Cupid has had to take on domestic engineering, read the finance pages, follow the building permits and the commodity tables. It may be a mad world, but it is a realistic one.

Dear Sir: I note with alarm that the jobs of the employes of the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics are seriously threatened. This bureau is itself authority for the statement that, during July, there was, throughout our country, an increase of 359,000 in general unemployment. A very simple sum in arithmetic will demonstrate how short a time it will be, at such a rate, before there is no labor left laboring—before everybody except the employes of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is unemployed. And then when there is no labor left for the Bureau of Labor Statistics to get up labor statistics about, why, what labor will there be left for the employes of the Bureau of Labor Statistics?

Dear Sir: It is frequently the uncongenial duty of the physician and surgeon to caution our womenfolk against some new fashion. I now feel that, in my position as an ophthalmic chiropractor, I should call attention to a new disease that is manifesting itself among American ladies.

The prognosis is facile, diagnosis clear. The objective symptoms include a high hyperplasia of the Ciliary Muscle, which, after one or two days, involves the entire Ciliary Process, often extending to the Superior Oblique. Out of 92 cases that I have treated since July 2, this has a 9.333 per cent result in spasmotic contraction of the bronchii and, of course, ultimate virulent astigmatism.

Since the disease attacks women only, and since its appearance coincides with the adoption of feminine headgear drawn down over the left cornea—thus inhibiting normal action of the adjacent pupil—I am constrained to conclude that its cause will not be removed until women again begin asking a once familiar—but now, alas, too long silent—question: "Is my hat on straight?"

Dear Sir: Why does The Post-Impressionist pusillanimously permit The Post's editorial writers to question such a lofty platform as that which Senator La Follette elects for his undoubted reelection? You merely show your own lack of idealism when you decry his assertion that—whereas "the farmer is entitled to a profit above the cost of production," and whereas the laborer must have "shorter hours and wages which will give a comfortable life"—our employing class should conduct its industries not "solely for profit, but primarily to provide useful employment."

Senator La Follette has the right viewpoint. We must compel our employers to conduct their businesses unselfishly, not for themselves and families, but for the people to whom they give jobs. Then, when this has been accomplished, the employes, moved to simple human admiration by such an example in their employers, will speedily, in their own sphere, emulate it.

Barging Through Europe

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Ah! It's Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Germany—Dear Aleck: We come up the Elb River through a profusion of Swastika flags and picturesque little German villages on Sunday afternoon, a bright sun alternating with a drizzling rain. Wind mills and dikes dot the countryside on either side of the river as if it were the storied Holland we were seeing.

BARGERON.

The river is alive with festive-arrayed craft—yachts, motorboats, tugs and racing shells. What we see now of Germany seems very happy and gay with no thought of the tenseness over the Austrian trouble. There is an apparent newness about the dwellings that strikes one, too, Aleck, and it occurs to me that maybe Germany has a Secretary Ickes and a building program. My German friend very proudly explains, however, that it is because the Germans are so industrious and clean, that they keep their houses in shipshape.

• • • •

Already the customs officers with their vaunted German efficiency have gone through our luggage and when the boat ties up we have only to go ashore. In the States and at Havre we have loaded up on marks obtained at around 28 and 29 cents when their parity with the dollar is 40 cents. Only 50 of these marks can be spent a day and they can't be carried out of the country. We have a dickens of a time figuring out just how many we will need. On top of this the American Express man who has come aboard tells us that if we are to stay in Germany eight days we can get railway tickets to other points at a 60 per cent discount, less than eight days at a 30 per cent discount.

It occurs to me that the Germans will soon be owing us money if they keep this discount business up but, Aleck, my solicitude for them was dispelled when I set out subsequently to spend some marks.

• • • •

Sunday night is a gala night in Hamburg. Apparently it is to the Germans what Saturday night is to the States. Anyway, everbody is out on the streets and in the beer gardens. They are very plainly dressed in what I would call calicoes and cottons and they seem sort of subdued, Aleck. There is a smattering of the Storm Troopers about, unarmed but in uniform. I thought they had been furloughed on July 1, but am told that some were called back into service when the Austrian trouble developed.

About the storm troops, Aleck, I have been told by some Hitler proponents that the formation of this organization was one of his greatest achievements. It gave a new hope and manhood to the despairing young men of the country. There is no doubt about it, Aleck, that one of the best ways to make a man perk up and feel big is to give him a gun and a uniform. You remember how the NRA started out to set up an army of generals and lieutenant generals and colonels, don't you, Aleck? The few troopers I have seen have a swagger, but they don't seem menacing, not to my security at least.

My meager information, incidentally, was obtained before we reached Germany, in part from Germans on the boat. One of them, coming over for a brief visit, had his first papers in the States and was very much in doubt as to whether he should land or not. However, he did.

Discussion of this sort is taboo here. One never hears even the name Hitler mentioned, except for the frequent salutations, "Heil, Hitler." What fascinates me, Aleck, is this salutation from the droves of youngsters on bicycles as they pass a traffic cop. They constitute more than half of the Sunday night vehicular traffic. At a traffic intersection one observes a drove of those little automobiles, counterparts of our Austins, and then a drove of bicycles. Both apparently are gregarious, Aleck. I understand that in the olden days a bicycle thought nothing of going out alone, but now that the little automobile has appeared they both go about in multiple for protective reasons.

Well, anyway, when the drove of cyclists cross the intersection they all throw up their left hands and shout "Heil, Hitler." One has to be able to ride a bicycle with one hand over here, Aleck. Yours for good bicycle riding.

He explained that South American Indians had used the sap of the Iliana vine for transfusion purposes for years.

World Survey Shows Significant Upswing

Foreign Policy Association Discovers Economic Recovery Is on Way, but Warns Some Features Appear Basically Unsound.

THE Foreign Policy Association yesterday made public a world survey of economic trends revealing "an upswing of significant proportions."

The survey warned, however, that gains have not been distributed evenly and that many features of the upturn appear "basically unsound."

The report, written by Maxwell S. Stewart with the aid of the research staff of the association, includes a study of economic conditions in Great Britain, France, Germany, Japan and Australia.

Revival Is Domestic With Two Exceptions.

EXCEPT in Australia and Japan, the report said, the business revival has been wholly domestic in character. It went on:

"With a tightening of the restrictions on international trade, a certain amount of new construction has been necessary to furnish the domestic market with goods formerly purchased abroad. This factor, together with the need for replacements which had been neglected in the early years of the depression, resulted in special activity on the part of the capital equipment industries. The possibilities of expansion in this direction, however, are so limited that observers believe these factors have already ceased to operate as a stimulus to business revival.

"In the second place, there have been expenditures for public works, which in most cases have only become effective within recent months. While this has been partially offset in many countries by a curtailment of normal Government expenditures, it has served to take up a portion of the slack which has resulted from a cessation of normal building activities.

Recovery Advances Most With Depreciated Money.

IN the third place, it is significant that recovery has been most pronounced in the nations which have allowed their currencies to depreciate sufficiently to maintain at least a stable price level. Although in theory the adjustments to changed conditions resulting from the depression could have been achieved through deflation as well as through inflation, few governments have felt themselves strong enough to risk the political dangers involved in the former method. Finally, it is evident that, in the case of certain raw materials, restriction of production has proved temporarily advantageous in raising prices and the purchasing power of producers.

"Many features of the upturn, however, some observers feel to be basically unsound. It is evident, for example, that little progress has been made toward overcoming the fundamental obstacles to a revival of world trade—such as the paralysis of international finance, exchange instability or elimination of trade barriers—without which recovery must be confined to fairly narrow limits. The attempt of a number of the larger countries to resolve the contradictions of their internal economies by competitive currency depreciation has served to accentuate the disequilibria in the States retaining the gold standard. Critics have pointed out that, unless this tendency is checked, the sharpening of national rivalries must sooner or later pass over into the military sphere. Equally disturbing has been the failure of labor to obtain its share of the fruits of business recovery. Nowhere, save possibly in Germany, has employment kept pace with the gains in industrial activity. Real wages and standards of living for the working class appear to have fallen almost universally. Agriculture has also suffered a serious loss in purchasing power. It is evident that until consumption can be raised in line with production, there can be no basis for permanent recovery, and that such revival as has occurred will not affect the vast majority of the world's population."

Nobody Ever Asks College President to Spell Cat

By Robert Quillen

Gordon Strong was a big man. He stood 6 feet 3 inches in his bare feet and tipped the scales at 220. A Roman nose, a strong chin, steady gray eyes and the catfish mouth of an orator combined to give him the appearance of greatness.

He talked but little, but he listened courteously to others and his occasional nods of agreement seemed speech enough.

There was something mysterious and awesome in the steady gaze of his calm gray eyes, and one look at them discouraged anybody who had hoped to trick or deceive him.

At the age of 32, Strong inherited a prosperous country bank. Times were good; the bank's employes were well trained; and the elderly cashier trimmed expenses to the bone and made every dime earn its 8 per cent. Strong made no changes. He signed papers that were placed before him, listened and nodded.

His grave silence, his dignity and his bulk inspired confidence and the bank flourished and won the admiration of the State.

One day Mr. Strong received an invitation to visit a famous financier in the Nation's metropolis, and a month later he moved to the city to become president of its largest bank.

It isn't necessary to follow his career. Enough to say that his bank absorbed others and became the richest in the world. Mr. Strong dominated the earth's finances.

The higher men climb, the less they are annoyed by details. Lesser men do the work.

Strong ruled in silence. At a meeting of directors he listened. Men with trickery in their hearts quailed before his steady, mysterious gaze and decided not to risk it. When the others had finished talking, Strong got to his feet and said: "Very well, gentlemen." And that ended it.

And so the story might have ended except for the panic. The world crashed; men lost their reason; Strong signed the wrong papers.

When he appeared in court, he had lost none of his grave dignity. But the prosecutor was not fooled by appearances.

"What is 2 times 2?" he barked.

"I—I do not know," said Mr. Strong.

The look in his steady eyes no longer was a mystery. If people had taken the trouble to examine him or ask questions, they would have learned long ago that Mr. Strong was an imbecile.

Tin Shortage Quiz to Open

House Group Meets Today to Hear Preliminary Studies Report.

The menace to National defense presented by this country's shortage of tin resources will be aired today before a special House investigating committee meeting in the Capitol office of Representative Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee.

Roy Veatch, State Department expert "loaned" to the committee by the Administration, will report to the committee on preliminary studies, and the committee will consider the need for appointing a full-time investigator of its own.

The inquiry is authorized by a House resolution calling for a study of the extent to which the United States is dependent on other Nations for its tin, and the possibility of manufacturing munitions and motors without tin, by using some domestic substitute.

AAA Milk Price Fixing Fought

Boston Suit Challenges U. S. Right to Revoke Dairyman's License.

Boston, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—A legal action believed the first to challenge the right of Congress to authorize the Agriculture Adjustment Administration to regulate the price of milk in interstate commerce was placed before the Federal Court here today.

Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan enjoined Edward M. Dwyer, South Weymouth milk distributor, from dealing in milk and cream that is produced outside the State. He set September 11 as the date for a hearing to determine whether the AAA exceeded its authority when it revoked Dwyer's license to operate in the Greater Boston sales area.

Attorney M. B. Asbill, representing the AAA, said that to allow Dwyer to continue his violation of the licensing agreement would bring about "a chaotic situation throughout the country." Hundreds of dealers might follow suit, he said.

The defense attacked the set-up of the AAA and said it imposed a burden on every small dealer.

Of Prof. Moley, he suggested that the professor 'had been reading some magazine article and that seemed to be his principal source of knowledge.' Friend Wallace, Plowing in Sea, Amuses Fletcher

"I note Friend Wallace is now plowing in the sea," the Florida Senator remarked dryly as he left the White House yesterday. "He'd better stick to land."

Senator Fletcher said he had urged upon President Roosevelt the name of Carey Hardee, former Governor of Florida, as a member of the RFC board to succeed Harvey Couch, who has resigned. He also discussed a successor to Gov. Eugene R. Black, of the Federal Reserve, but left with the impression the President will be in no hurry to fill that vacancy.

Silver Order Put 33,465,000 Ounces in Mints

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., revealed yesterday that in the first week after the President's order nationalizing silver, 33,465,000 ounces had been turned into the mints and assay offices, for which the Treasury paid 50.01 cents an ounce.

In addition the Treasury received 649,757 ounces of newly mined silver under the terms of the President's executive order of last December, for which it paid an equivalent of 64½ cents an ounce. Receipts of newly-mined silver through last Friday totaled 11,321,000 unces.

Meanwhile silver certificates outstanding, as of last Friday, reached a new high mark of $510,223,322, an increase of approximately $15,000,000 in the last ten days. Certificates for all silver in possession of the Treasury prior to June 14 are now being printed. They will total about $80,000,000.

Contrasting with the heavy Treasury purchases of Government securities in the previous week, when bond prices slipped downward on announcement of the silver nationalization order, the Treasury for the week ended last Friday bought only $1,250,000 of its securities for investment accounts. Purchases of Government bonds, if any, by the stabilization fund are not disclosed.

Court Test Threat Given Hotel Code

Modification Is Demanded at NRA Hearing.

A threat to appeal to the courts for "the right to exist" unless the hotel and restaurant codes were modified was voiced yesterday at an NRA hearing by Edward C. Romine, of the American Hotel Association.

The witness stressed the financial instability of many hotels and characterized compliance with code provisions by hotels and restaurants as "negligible."

Charles E. Sands, of the International Union of Hotel and Restaurant Employes, recommended jail sentence for "a few conspicuous violators" to bring enforcement of the pacts.

He said union labor would strike before it would accept payment of wages twice a month instead of weekly.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"A Girl Before the Mast."

Previously in this column I have spoken of the splendid books on contemporary sailing ships written by my friend, the young Australian mariner, Alan Villiers. And now appears another ripping story of the voyage around the Horn, written by a girl in Brooklyn, still in her teens, who went, not as a foremast passenger, but as a foremast hand. The book is called "A Girl Before the Mast," and is more exciting than most novels. Its simple, unpretentious, naive style, in which no attempt is made at literary excellence, adds decidedly to the charm of the narrative.

I meant to have asked Mr. Villiers if the sailors still call Cape Horn by the nickname Cape Stiff, as they did 100 years ago and more.

The author of this latest book on the deep sea is Betty Jacobsen; her father and mother are Norwegian; and she spent the first five years of her life on the sea, in her father's ships. Then she went to school in Brooklyn, forgot her Norwegian, and spoke English like her schoolmates. But the family lived by the water front of New York Harbor, and the sight of the ships was a continual thrill to the young girl.

She was graduated from high school at the age of 17, got a job as stenographer, and typed the whole manuscript of Alan Villier's book, "Grain Race." She told Mr. Villiers she would like to go on the next voyage herself, and he laughingly said: "Why not?"

Then came a letter from the captain of the ship Parma, written just as he was leaving Copenhagen for Australia; and he happened to mention that he had with him his daughter, Ruby. This was too much for Betty; and with the powerful aid of Mr. Villiers, she wrung a reluctant consent from her parents, went to Australia, and came back as a sailor (not disguised) on the Parma; many of the sailor boys were disgusted to have two girls aboard, saying it brought bad luck. But it happened just contrary to their fears; the ship broke the record from Australia to England.

This book is Miss Jacobsen's journal of the voyage, copiously illustrated with excellent photographs. The ship started on March 1, 1933, and arrived at Falmouth, England, May 23, not only beating all the other ships engaged in this particular competition, but breaking all records. No sailing ship ever made that voyage in such good time.

Every one who cares at all for stories of the sea will like this book and they are sure to like the author.

Nippon Navy Aid Is Feted At Reception

Capt. Yamaguchi Honor Guest at Brilliant Function.

The Retiring Attache and Mme. Kobayashi Are Hosts.

During the summer months when the majority of the members of Capital society are amusing themselves at the various summer resorts, the remaining members entertain usually at small informal parties, but a reception held yesterday in the Chinese room of the Mayflower had all the charm and formality of a reception given at the height of the winter season.

The hosts were the retiring Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Kobayashi, who entertained in honor of the newly appointed Naval Attache, Capt. Tamon Yamaguchi. There were about 150 guests including members of official and resident society as well as members of the Army and Navy who attended in full dress uniforms accompanied by their wives.

The party being given not only as a welcome to Capt. Yamaguchi, but as a farewell to the many friends of Capt. and Mme. Kobayashi.

Capt. and Mme. Kobayashi and Capt. Yamaguchi stood by the stairs to receive their guests, as the latter entered the Chinese room, which was attractively decorated with palms, ferns and oak leaves.

On the east side of the room a large buffet table was decorated with a huge basket filled with red and white gladioli and a large sugar-coated cake which displayed the American and Japanese flags done in spun sugar. There were also a number of other sugar pieces, among them a fascinating replica of a Japanese house with slanting roof. Tea and coffee were served from this table and in the far corner another table held a silver punch bowl from which a cooling refreshment was served.

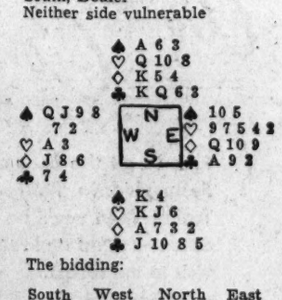
A Farsighted Hold-Up.

The hold-up in Bridge, unlike the hold-up in a dark alley, is not among the stratagems classed generally as robbery, but a member of the communication family. The plays of this general group assume the important role of an engineering corps. They are devices for building entries, for clearing and keeping open the lines of communication between the two hands of a partnership so that the right to lead may be transferred at will from one hand to the other. At the same time, the mission of this very remarkable "engineering corps" is to attack and cut off communications between the hands of the enemy.

Usually there is one suit in which the opponents are particularly strong. If only one adversary holds any cards in that suit, to play them he must obtain the lead by means of a winning card in some other suit. If he holds no such card he will never obtain the lead and his established cards will be of no value to him. But if his partner also holds cards in that strong suit, if either adversary obtains the lead the suit can be used. It is therefore sound practice in many cases not to employ a stopper in the opponents' strongest suit until such time as one opponent's last card in that suit has been played. It is this type of entry-killing play that is known as "the hold-up." It is particularly useful at no-trump and is employed sometimes for the sole purpose of preventing one adversary from leading the suit and effecting its establishment while his partner holds a side entry to cash the established tricks.

The following example illustrates a typical hold-up play:

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♣	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Against the three-notrump contract West opens the spade Queen. Despite the fact that South could win the trick in either hand and still retain a stopper, he can count only four tricks which can immediately be won and must therefore prepare to develop the five additional tricks he needs for his contract. These can be procured by straight leads—simply leading out clubs and then hearts until the adversaries take their Aces, at which time three club tricks and two heart tricks will have made up the quota. But South must be careful lest, while he is relinquishing these two tricks, the opponents will establish many spade tricks and defeat his contract.

South assumes that most of the spades are held by West, who opened the suit, and he is anxious that East, if he obtains the lead by means of one of the outstanding Aces, shall be unable to continue spades and establish West's long suit before the second Ace is gone. The only hope for South lies in the chance that East originally held only two spades so that after they have been led twice he will be unable to play the suit again. South therefore allows the Queen to win the first trick against him. West continues the suit, and South's King wins, whereupon South proceeds to play his longest suit, clubs. East wins the Ace, but is unable to lead spades again, so when West later obtains the lead by means of the heart Ace, his suit is not as yet established and nothing can prevent South from winning at least the nine tricks he needs.

Had South won the first spade trick, East would have led spades upon taking the club Ace and at this point it would have done South no good to use the hold-up play. West would simply have overtaken whatever card East led and continued to lead the suit until North had to take the Ace. West would then have won the heart Ace eventually, and a long line of high spades would have poured down on South, with results disastrous to his game contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

East and West vulnerable

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Powder Box Is Last Word In Hospitality

The Best Hostesses Offer Their Guests Such Conveniences.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

INDIRECT and unexpected little gestures make a hostess fondly remembered.

If she serves fried chicken at least twice a week, and arranges at least three bridge games for her guest, she's playing her part as hostess well. But if she sees to it the guest room is not only comfortably and attractively furnished, but according to the every need of her guest she is tracing an indelible impression of hospitality on her guest's mind.

An up-to-date cosmetician contributes a face powder ensemble to the hostess who wishes to please by an especially considerate gesture.

The guest will beam with pleasure when she sees how beautifully her powder needs have been attended to. This ensemble includes five shades of powder, contained in the triangular compartments of a hexagon-shaped box covered in white pigskin paper, edged and stamped in blue. An extra compartment, neatly covered with cellophane, holds varitinted swansdown puffs.

The cover of the box lifts by a blue ribbon tab and is hinged with blue satin ribbon which holds it at a convenient upright angle. The insignia of the cosmetician is stamped on the cover as the finishing touch to a truly artistocratic assemblage.

The guest who finds this dainty box with its delightful contents awaiting her on the dressing table need have no qualms about using it for it states frankly inside the cover, "Pour les Invitees." Thus armed with knowledge that she is not intruding on her hostess' private stock, she may dip freely into whatever shade of powder pleases her.

This set-up is a slight setback to the hostess' budget but she will readily acklowledge its value is at once apparent. It's upkeep is comparatively little as refills are easily available.

Rubbers in August.

August is not only a month of hot spells and cool speels, pell mell one on the other, but, of rainstorms that come up without notice.

For this reason the wise shopper will carry a pair of rubbers in her handbag. Handbag? Yes! In the notions department of a local store there are some very small, close-fitting, snap-on rubbers inclosed in little rubber bags that fit easily into the pocketbook, or pocket. A pair of these is only 39 cents.

Substitute Persians.

For years all people who could not afford Persian rugs found Anglo-Persians exactly what they wanted. These are beautiful rugs, conspicuous for the deep shading and translucence of the colors. Made of the finest virgin wool, they will last 25 or 50 years with no sign of wear and tear.

This week these rugs are selling at their lowest price since 1917. One can buy a thick, soft rug, exquisitely tinted and designed, for comparatively low prices. There is the ever-popular "Tree of Life" design, a "Bird of Paradise," antique Samarkland," and numerous others rich not only in color but in the legend behind the intricately woven patterns.

The featured rugs are 9 to 12 feet square; other sizes proportionately low.

Roses of Yesterday.

Roses of yesterday become the perfume of today if their petals are gathered in one of the Oriental jardinieres featured in a downtown store. Unlike most containers designed for this purpose these are small, only two or three inches around, and four or five in height. A small top fits loosely over the low neck and aids in keeping the rose fragrance inside.

A pair of these costs 39 cents. There are also some similar vases for the what-not, or small bouquets. These are the same price.

Averting Calamities.

There will be no more capsized glasses, ruined table tops, and cards wet from rings left by glasses if a certain manufacturer has his say about it.

No doubt distressed over the frequency of such occurrences at card parties he invented some adjustable glass holders which fit to the edge of any table and hold the glasses firmly. Even the unexpected shaking of the table isn't going to send them spilling.

When these were first put out they were supposed to sell for a dollar apiece, but now they are four for 50 cents.

"Colored Toothpicks."

Some packages of varicolored sticks in a local shop have interested and puzzled many customers. The first day they were put on the counter, an old and affable gentleman purchased some saying he'd never seen colored toothpicks before.

Since then there have been many guesses hazarded, but only a few of them right. They're hors d'oeuvres picks.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

A COPY of "Finger Plays," offered for the best contribution to this column, has been awarded to Mrs. T. W. Fishback, 516 East Wolfe street, Harrisonburg, Va. Mrs. Fishback's contribution follows:

"During the past winter, my 4-year-old son developed a great fear of the wind. Previously he had not been timid, and I was exceedingly anxious to find a way to quiet his fears. He enjoys games immensely, so I conceived the idea of making a game of the wind. So, on especially stormy nights, when the windows and roof rattled, we played the breezes were playing games. They shook the windows and chased each other over the roof, consequently the noise.

"He is aware that fairies and sprites do not exist except in stories, but nevertheless, easily imagined elf-like creatures chasing each other over and about the house. The wind became fun, and after a few windy nights, I heard no more of his fears."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Foreign Bodies in the Ear.

Young children have a tendency to place in the mouth anything and everything that they can grasp. To them everything should be tasted and, if possible swallowed. With the sense of sight and touch as yet undeveloped the child instinctively seeks to gain information through mouth contacts. As the child grows older, and after he has learned, perhaps through bitter experience, that everything he sees is not to be eaten, he will discover that he has nostrils and ears that will accommodate certain objects.

Foreign bodies placed in the ear usually give much more difficulty than those swallowed or inserted in a nostril. This is because the ear canal ends in a blind pocket at the ear drum. Furthermore, the canal is slightly curved and objects have a tendency to become impacted or wedged in that portion that lies within the bone of the skull. When foreign bodies become tightly wedged in the ear canal they cause no end of trouble in their removal. Seeds of plants, such as peas or beans, may swell and hard objects such as beads, bits of stone, chalk, etc., may set up inflammation, particularly if the manipulation attending their removal is not exceedingly gentle.

Insects sometimes enter the ear canal and may occasionally become impacted in the ear wax. These may usually be removed by filling the ear canal with hydrogen peroxide by means of a medicine dropper. Oxygen liberated by the solution will usually loosen the insect and cause it to float out. If peroxide is unsuccessful sterile olive oil or a drop or two of chloroform will kill the insect, and later the peroxide treatment may be repeated with success.

Much damage sometimes follows the hurried removal of a foreign body from the ear canal. There is really no emergency and plenty of time should be taken to prepare the child and quiet his fears. Because of possible damage home removal of objects from the ear canal should rarely be attempted. Syringing the ear should not be tried unless the article is known definitely not to be a seed or other substance that will swell in the presence of moisture. Help of the highest skill is necessary. The physician is usually equipped with delicate instruments, the proper kind of syringe, and adequate lighting apparatus. Thus prepared, he will ordinarily be able to remove the object with little delay.

Sometimes a perfectly smooth round substance such as a glass bead will offer considerable difficulty unless the bead has a thread hole and can be turned and grasped through this opening. In such a situation the most skilled physician is usually the gentlest. If one procedure is not at first successful he will try another. By means of a lighted instrument he is able to see exactly what he is doing so that no damage will result to the ear canal or the ear drum. Many objects will yield to simple but forceful syringing, the stream being directed in such a way that the force is not exerted directly against the ear drum.

In certain individuals ear wax constitutes a foreign body that may cause pain and form a definite bar to hearing. Individuals who produce an excess quantity of ear wax should have this material removed at least once every few months. Usually a warm, weak solution of sodium bicarbonate dropped into the ear will soften the wax. This may be followed with peroxide of hydrogen and then by gentle syringing.

Children should be taught that only food is to be placed in the mouth and that fingers and articles of all sorts should be kept away from the nostrils and the ear canals. Children who are constitutionally of the nervous type require more persistent instruction and watchfulness.

Hardening Arteries.

D. K. writes:

1. What is the cause of hardening of the arteries?

2. Is it possible to cure?

3. Could it be checked against progress by certain diet?

Reply.

1. Hardening of the arteries is sometimes a manifestation of age. It has been well said that a man is as old as his arteries. Disease toxins of any sort, excessive use of alcohol, or tobacco are usually listed as causative factors. Worry, overwork, lack of sleep, and too much food also play an important part.

2. Only to relieve. Damage done can not be repaired.

3. A diet low in calories, but sufficient to maintain body functions is advised.

Moderns Take to Grandmother's Practice Of "Putting Up" the Summer's Fresh Fruit

It's Best to Preserve Less Common Delicacies the Stores Don't Sell.

By Ann Barrett.

AN OLD FASHIONED practice that's back in style each year is "putting up" the summer's abundance of fresh fruit.

Right now it's peaches, plums and tomatoes that hold the center of preserving interest. Perhaps watermelon, too, if you didn't get 'round to making your preserve sooner.

It's likely you'll want to put up the less common delicacies that you won't find in market later. For nowadays commercial canners do so well by ordinary jellies and jams, pickles, ketchup and chili sauce that only the home canner who goes in for preserving on a large scale includes these in her repertoire.

So in this limited space, I'll include only such old favorites as are most easily made and less easily bought.

Honey-Peach Butter.

Honey-peach butter, for example, which if it is a little more expensive on account of the honey, is also extra-delicious. For this you won't need choice peaches. Small peaches will do nicely, if they have a good flavor. You'll need about six quarts, soaked in boiling water a minute or so, then plunged into cold water and their skins slipped off.

Cover and cook these slowly (with pits) till soft, in just enough water to prevent burning, one-half cup or so. Then put them through a sieve to get 2 quarts of puree. Add 1 cup granulated sugar to this, and bring to a boil. Then add 2 cups strained honey and cook till thick, stirring frequently so that mixture doesn't burn. Turn into hot, sterilized glasses, and seal with paraffin. This makes about 10 half-pint jars.

Peach Conserve.

Another delicacy that's been on the preferred list regularly since great-grandmother's day is peach conserve. Here is one good version: First cut 1 seedless orange and 1 lemon in thin slices, and let stand overnight in water to cover. Next day slip the skins off about 6 pounds of peaches, weighted after skinning. Cook these (with pits) in as little water as possible, maybe one-half cup, till soft. Then press through a sieve and mix with the orange and lemon, first cooked till tender.

Next add 1½ pounds seeded raisins and 4½ cups granulated sugar. Cook slowly till the consistency of marmalade (about 45 minutes). Then add 1 cup broken walnut meats, cook 1 minute more, pour into hot sterilized glasses and seal. This also makes about 10 half-pint glasses.

Plum Butter.

Fruit butters have become so popular and are so easy to make, I am going to remind you of plum butter—one of the best because of the extra-rich natural color and flavor of plums. First wash the plums 4 or 5 pounds, but do not peel them. Put them on to cook in as little water as possible till they are soft. Then press the pulp through a coarse sieve and measure it. Add 2-3 cup sugar to each cup of pulp. Then cook, stirring frequently, till butter is thick. Pour into hot, sterilized jars and seal.

Juicy Peaches, Plums and Tomatoes Are Favorites This Season.

Tomato Butter.

Tomato butter is good, yet easily made and inexpensive. It takes 10 pounds of tomatoes. Slip off the skins after plunging in boiling water. Add 7½ cups granulated sugar, 3 pounds of tart apples (peeled, cored and quartered), 3 cups of mild vinegar, and a spice bag containing 1 tablespoon each whole mace and whole cloves, a piece of ginger root (about 2 inches long by ½-inch through) and a 4-inch piece of stick cinnamon.

Cook the whole mixture gently about 3 hours, stirring frequently. Then remove spice bag, pour into hot, sterilized glasses and seal. Because of the large amount of water that evaporates from the tomatoes, this is not such a large recipe as would seem. Makes 12 to 14 half-pint jars.

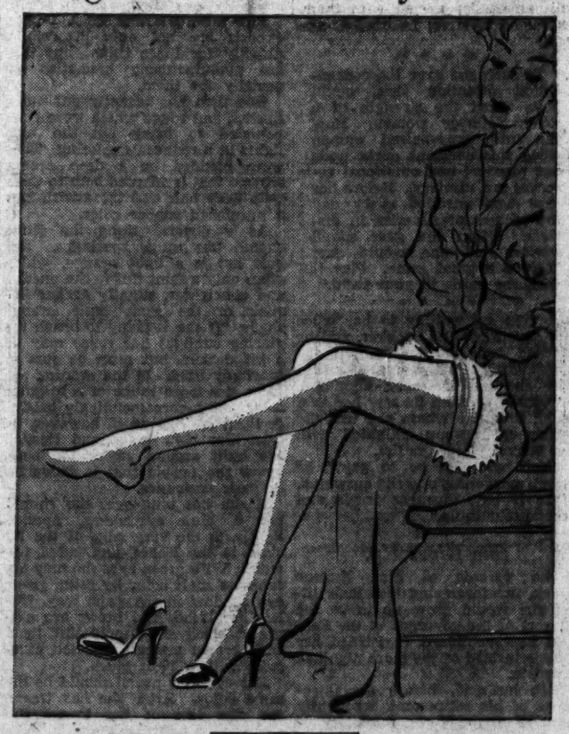
Watermelon Rind Pickle.

For that special favorite, melon rind pickle, I've found a recipe that's extra good, because the pickle is extra crisp. Here's how to turn the trick. Trim your rind carefully, so as to discard all green skin and all the soft part, leaving only the firm white part. (This is important.) Cut this in pieces any size and shape you like. But you should have about six quarts of it, all told.

Next make a solution of lime water, consisting of one-fourth cup lime powder, bought from the druggist, to two gallons water. Soak the watermelon rind in this overnight. Then drain. Rinse the rind through many cold waters, to remove all lime. Then cook the rind in boiling water just till tender, and drain it well.

Next make a syrup by boiling up four cups vinegar, four cups water and eight cups sugar about three minutes. Then put drained rind into this, with one-half teaspoon salt and a spice bag containing the following: Two-thirds cup stick cinnamon, two pieces ginger root about two inches long, one-fourth cup whole cloves, one-fourth cup whole allspice. Cook till rind is perfectly transparent. Then remove spice bag, put into hot, sterile jars, and seal. Makes about five quarts.

Stockings for Every Costume Urged for Autumn by Fashion



In This Season of Harmony in Accessories, Hose Should Be the One Perfect Shade to Set Off the Outfit Properly.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW York, Aug. 20.—Different color stockings for every different color costume in the wardrobe. That's what many women will have this fall. For fashion is taking very seriously the question of harmonizing accessories, even such small ones as hosiery.

Of course you don't have to do it to those extremes. There are practical shades, neutral enough in tone to go with almost any color costume.

But if your budget allows you to be particular down to the last degree, you'll take a lot of pleasure in seeing how much smarter the more subtly graded colors make your costume.

There is, for instance, a neutral, medium, taupe-like brown which can be worn with either black or brown costumes and with brighter colored ones, too.

But there's a clear brown which looks much smarter with brown costumes and a real taupe of dark tone which is more effective with the black costume.

Very dark colors are smart only if they are very sheer and very clear. And this new construction keeps them clear.

Wouldn't you like actually to see what these colors look like so you can decide just what you need? We have a new leaflet containing samples in stocking fabric of the most important ones and explaining just which shade goes best with each costume color.

It's a handy size to take along in your handbag as a sample when you go to buy your fall hose. If you'll fill in and mail us the coupon with requested inclosures, we'll send it right along.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:14 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m.

Today may prove the wisdom contained in the saying, "Silence is golden," for if you are not careful, speaking too freely might possibly lead to complications. Business affairs should, on the whole, be encouraging. Curtailment of credit might prove a mistaken policy, causing resentment which may result in the loss of a valuable customer. A man whose judgment is decidedly warped may offer you some advice.

If a woman, and August 21 is your natal day, avoid taking life too seriously if you wish to enjoy it. Do not let little trifles aggravate you. Making mountains out of mole hills is using up a lot of good energy in the wrong direction. Your many fine qualities must be brought out by yourself, personally, and your family and friends will readily recognize them. Your intellectuality and affectionate disposition should prove magnetic attractions. Your vivid imagination should enable you to be successful as a writer of fiction.

The child born on August 21, when it reaches its teens, must learn there is a time for work and a time for play. This child may be inclined to become too much absorbed in its studies to become interested in out-of-doors sports.

If a man, and August 21 is your birth anniversary, avoid being too strict in business and over indulgent at home. You should be very successful in any business or profession you follow. Your enthusiasm and steadfastness of purpose should enable you to attain an enviable position, as well as financial independence.

POTOMAC PARK

"THE RECTOR told me about it when he thought I was old enough—the rector of the church where she used to sing. Each of them had talked it over with him without letting the other know—just their fears—not this—this thing I'm telling you about.

"They took me to a church orphanage. Some sort of tentative arrangement had been made with the rector for me in case—not for this, you know, but when it came naturally. The place was all right, as orphanges go, but it seemed hell after—after the fun and affection I'd been used to at home. No time to make over kids in an orphanage. I ran away as soon as I was big enough. Hoboed around, landed on a farm, worked like the devil from daybreak till bedtime. I got tired of that after awhile and hoboed some more. I've been in logging camps in the Northwest and mining towns in Pennsylvania and oil burgs in Texas. Went to New York and shifted stage scenery and drove taxicabs. Finally turned civilized and got a government job.

Nick stood up, shook himself and changed his tone. Grim humor.

"Yes, I've had a happy life all right. Been lucky. Stayed out of jail. Always had plenty to eat in localities where they weren't stingy with handouts. Nearly always had warm clothes made for somebody else and either three sizes too big or too small, but warm—especially in summer. Yes, I've been mighty lucky and carefree. Never any trouble, so I don't know how to bear up when my best girl throws me down. But I'm young and I'll learn—maybe."

"Oh, Nick, forgive me. I didn't know——"

"Of course you didn't. I was a piece of cheese to tell you all this, but you just happened to get under my skin."

"I think you're wonderful!"

"Forget it!"

"What has kept you so—so decent through all this?"

"Decent? Who—me?"

"Yes. You are. You know you are. What was it?"

He stood before the window again and looked far across the Potomac to something she could not see.

Influence Lasted.

"I suppose, if I'm decent, as you say, it's because—because they made me that way. I can't ever forget them—the way they stood by one another through thick and thin with that hanging over them—and being such good sports and trying to make things pleasant for me. Somehow I feel that if I ever have kids of my own in a real home, I'd like them to—oh, hell! I'm getting mushy."

"What started you to writing plays, Nick?"

"Why, I don't know. I suppose it was—I heard a lot about the theater when I was a young brat, you know."

"Was your father a comedian?"

"Lord, no! Not on the stage. He played heavy parts. Good, too. I can see him now—can hear him speaking the lines I write in my serious plays, only I can never get them good enough for him."

"You will some day, Nick."

The wistfulness of his face hurt her.

"Do you honestly mean that, Wanda?"

"I'm sure of it. David thinks so, too. He thinks you'll have to learn a lot, grow older—you seem so young, Nick!"

Confidences Given.

"I guess so. I know what you mean. I feel it, too. Miss something. And yet there are times when I grope around and almost touch what I'm hunting for. Don't know what it is, but just out of my reach is something I'm going to get hold of some day. Here of late the feeling has been getting stronger. Wish I could explain it. I've been thinking a lot about—about them, and somehow—oh, I don't know how to say this. Been talking too much anyway."

"Try to tell me. I'm interested."

"Well, you see, Wanda, understanding is something you can't get by knocking around the world looking for it. Just being up against it doesn't teach you much. Nor going places nor doing things. You can be like a rubber ball in a river—float all the way down to the sea, catch on driftwood, be dragged to the bottom and bob up again, and never get wet inside. Some of us go through life like that. Lots of people have raised big families, celebrated golden weddings, died of old age, and never came close to each other the way my father and mother did. They lived every minute. Not feverishly, like some people, but there was a depth to their living. They were important to each other and to me. This sounds like a lot of baloney, I know, but it seems to me that if I could just get hold of something that might make people willing to—oh, well! Getting full of prunes again."

"All right, Nick," she said gently, "don't talk if you'd rather not, but keep on looking. And write! Some day you'll meet the right girl, and then you'll know what you've been looking for. You may not be able to put it into words, even when you find it, but you'll know."

He looked at her keenly, and his old mischievous smile flickered on his face.

"You speak as one who had done some scouting on her own territory. Do you know?"

She laughed softly. "I think I do, Nick. But don't ask me to tell you how. I'm not a writer, you see."

"You're a sweet kid, Wanda, to let me talk like this."

"Kid? I'm older than you a lot."

"You seem like a younger sister anyhow. If I had a sister, I'd want her to be like you. And while we're talking, Wanda. I think Mr. Randall is strictly O. K. I was all cut up that day when—you know. Seemed so brutal. If it makes any difference to you, you might like to know that it won't go any further. I happened to meet Carlin that evening. 'Listen, old scout,' I said, 'if it's all the same to you, we'll let that drop what you said up there to Mr. Randall. We didn't any of us know about his private life, and since it's none of our business anyhow, if you don't mind, we'll just forget it.' 'Oh, sure!' he said, right off. 'I'll just remind Priscilla, and that will be the end of it.' Don't want you to think I was meddling but it was nobody's business."

Approval Needed.

Wanda was deeply moved by his thoughtfulness. After all, when a man has a wife, even if she has chosen to put him out of her life for years and years, things can still be made very unpleasant for the woman who loves him. Royce, Kentucky and Zephyr would understand, of course, and she had supposed that they did know, but it was a relief to be told that they didn't. Funny! Just being right isn't enough; one needs social approval for peace of mind.

She was feeling very close to Nick when he left her to work on his new play. It was different from anything he had attempted thus far, he said, but since he was just stumbling along, there was no use to talk about it yet.

How little we know of those whose elbows brush ours every day, she thought. How little she knew even yet of Nick! A little kingdom firmly ruled, in the main. She had great respect for that sovereign tonight. She believed in him. And her belief in the value of families was confirmed and strengthened also. Let the Soviets give their children to the state if they think best, but let Americans keep theirs at home.

For only a few short years Nick had been loved and cherished and the chill of an orphange, the toughness of lumber camps and oil and mining towns, the associations of hoboes and bums of city streets had not changed the essential shape of the clay from its early mold. Chipped, rough and unpolished yet, but the form held true.

Kentucky Had Changed.

She heard Kentucky's voice at the door with Zeke. They came in, laughing. Kentucky, too. She laughed often these days, and it was good to hear, low and throaty, full of happiness. Wanda thought them an impressively handsome pair, both so large and healthy and strong. Beside his huge, towering frame, Kentucky was feminine enough to be appealing.

Wanda watched her pridefully as she moved across the room, easy, poised and dignified, and she was conceited enough to give herself more than a little credit for Kentucky's grace. She had done the lady a good turn that night by jamming the whalebone down the incinerator. And yet she knew that what hampered her limbs was not really the external armor, but an inner constriction of inferiority. Imagination. When she looked into the mirror of the eyes of the man she loved and saw herself as he saw her, a comely woman, desirable, lovable, that moment the chains fell away. Her heavy feet became light as Cinderella's, if not so small.

Announcement Made.

Observing human nature in the subway, Wanda used to wonder why the largest women seemed to have the smallest men in tow. It must be Mother Nature's plan to keep an average of the race through some trick of selection. Kentucky would never fall in line. Even now, when she stood beside Royce, if Zeke were not there, she stiffened unconsciously and lost the feminine charm which Zeke inspired in her. She was Zeke's true mate, his certain complement.

Her eyes were sparkling tonight—and so were his. She was almost beautiful.

"I'll have to tell her, Zeke. I can't keep it any longer. Look, Wanda!"

She held out her large white hand, shyly, proudly, as Jennie Stokes had done on her last day in the office.

There was universality in that gesture.

Happy Couple.

Wanda looked at it, tried to say something appropriate, but the radiance of Kentucky's face brought a childish lump to her throat and she could not speak.

"Well, don't you like it?" Zeke asked humorously, putting his arm about Kentucky as though he did not care who saw him, and she moved closer into the circle of it as if she didn't care either, still holding out her hand expectantly.

Wanda could not say anything. Realization of what it meant to Kentucky made her heart too full.

She took the large hand in hers and pressed it to her lips.

"Here! Here!" Zeke cautioned, putting out a restraining hand so big as to dwarf Kentucky's by comparison. "That's my privilege!"

She caught his hand and kissed it, too, and then ran away, laughing, into the bedroom to have a good cry because she was so happy for them.

They were satisfied with the blessing she had given them and let her go.

Competition Evils Hit by Professor

Says Schools Must Lead In Banishing Them.

New York, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Schools should take the lead in eliminating the competitive spirit from modern life, in the opinion of Dr. William H. Holmes, superintendent of schools in Mount Vernon, N. Y.

In a recent address at the National Schoolmart and Schoolview convention, Dr. Holmes envisioned a new era in which "men and women would be wise enough to cooperate with each other."

"In the right type of school," he said, "the child can be early taught the evils that come from the competitive spirit, and the good things that follow when cooperation is the spirit of society. From history and biography, the elementary school child must learn of the great men and women who have rendered noble and constructive service to humanity."

Dr. Holmes also advocated the establishment of model farms in cities "to help the city child realize what sort of natural world he is to become a part of."

HouseholdHints AreContributed

Here Are Three Suggestions to Make Housekeeping More Simple.

By Susan Mills.

MAY we use this space to extend thanks to housewives for their hints. If you, too, have ways and means by which your housework is made easier, send them in so others may benefit. Address them to Susan Mills, The Washington Post. They will appear every Tuesday in this column, and Sunday on the Household Page.

Some of the excellent suggestions follow:

To avoid rusting of garden tools and flat irons, put a few inches of lime in a box or barrel, and sink into it the articles not in use. This keeps dampness out and the tools free from rust.

"Jazz Babies" of Local Rhythm Band Whoop It Up With Much Enthusiasm

No Parents Have to Drive Children to Practice Music Now.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

PARENTS who have stood as stern sentinels outside the door and listened stoically to the discordant "one and two ands" as their children practiced hated piano lessons; parents who have sighed, "Johnnie just doesn't have any appreciation of music," when he wriggled and counted imaginary flies at one of the symphony concerts for children, are surprised and pleased when their offspring ask permission to join the Washington Rhythm Band.

For this band, which appeared in Washington playgrounds for the first time this spring and has since been conducting successful tours throughout the city's playgrounds, inspires no rebellion on the part of the musicians, no indifference in the listeners.

Nobody has to drive the musician to practice. There is a fascination in drum beating, blowing tunes through a paper-wrapped comb, jangling bells, beating on snares and triangles. And the youngsters are charmed. Once they get the rhythm urge their mothers are more likely to beg them to stop practicing than to begin.

Jazz Babies.

With an abandon worthy of the jazziest orchestra leader the boys and girls enter into the spirit of the thing. They sway in time to the music, pat their feet, watch the orchestra leader with attentive eyes. They are ready to perform on all occasions, and if the audience is sufficiently interested they will repeat the concert immediately.

Members of the audience are equally enthusiastic. It is much more fun, they agree, to watch Billie, who lives next door, pound on a drum, than to watch some old man with whiskers make funny motions while he "leads" an orchestra. Does it sound as well Oh, much better!

A Common Bond.

Music is a common bond between all the youngsters, and for once discrepancy in age is of no importance. Members range all the way from three to 14. And one of the most respected members of the band is Johnnie Kitchen, who is only 3, but the most accomplished drummer in the Georgetown section.

This summer the band has had one great problem. Wherever the band goes the piano has to go too. Moving funds are scarce, and although the musicians are quite willing to move the piano themselves, their lack of brawn prevents. The problem remains.

Once this year no one appeared to move the piano, and a scheduled concert at Montrose had to be postponed. The Merrie Marionettes performed just the same, and an ingenious musician made the necessary drum effect by pounding on a board with his hands.

The band specializes in getting up concerts at quick notice. The concert at Parkview recently was given by a band that had only practiced three hours.

"Which was pretty good," said Adolph Turner, director of the band. "Since none of the musicians had ever played before."

The children, who love to pound out marches, love all tunes with a great deal of rhythm, and their favorites are "Come to the Fair" and "When Morning Comes O'er."

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Is simultaneous properly called sy-mul-TAY-ne-ous or sim-ul-TAY-ne-ous?
2. Is the "h" pronounced in herb?
3. Define the italicized word in this sentence, "Her wardrobe was proof she had only a modicum of taste!"
4. Are the Hebrew and Yiddish languages synonymous?
5. What is a facade and how is it pronounced?

Answers Here.

1. Both pronunciations are correct, but sy-mul-TAY-ne-ous is preferable.
2. The historical pronunciation for this word is URB, which still prevails in the best usage in the United States. In England HURB has increased in use and now apparently prevails in the best usage.
3. Modicum (MOD-i-kum) means "a little."
4. No. Yiddish is a middle German dialect, originally used by Jews who lived in the northern section of Germany. Later moving to Slavic countries they retained their low German language, but wrote it in Hebrew characters. Hebrew is the ancient language of the Jews.
5. A facade (fa-SAHD) is the front elevation of a building.

Ancient Race Gave Young as Sacrifice

That the ancient Mayas sacrificed children to the gods in the hope of being granted abundant rainfall has been indicated by recent excavations sponsored by the Carnegie Institution of Washington and the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago.

The large number of child burials that the excavations revealed caused explorers to formulate the sacrifice theory.

The Mayas are credited with having established the oldest and most highly developed civilization in America. Traces of five periods of occupation were found by the expedition. The first of these was about the time of Christ or earlier. The last period was just prior to the discovery of America.

Visual Education Increasing Rapidly

New York, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The learning-by-seeing movement is gaining ground rapidly here. About 45 per cent of the schools are now convertible into motion picture theaters for visual education purposes, according to Miss Rita Hochheimer, assistant director of visual instruction.

Weekly picture service was maintained last year in 33 of the city's schools. The visual education bureau has 175 separate films designed for use in connection with courses in geography, nature study, health education and biology.

Miss Hochheimer said motion pictures not only added to a child's factual knowledge, but destroyed barriers of distance, changed attitudes and enlarged vocabularies.

Gas Attack Refuges Planned by England

Anticipating a possible war, plans are being made so that one room in every Englishman's home will prove a safe refuge for the family in case of a gas attack. The plans, drawn up by the committee of imperial defense, are being carried out in the East End of London by the homes office in cooperation with the air ministry and war office experts. Various methods of sealing doors, windows and ventilators are being tested.

Women Peeved In Air Race Ban

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Sparks are flying merrily over the recent announcement that no women may compete in the National Air Races, to be held in Cleveland in September, except in the parachute events.

"It looks as though we were being invited to go out and take a jump in Lake Erie," one woman flier remarks dryly.

The usual Aerol Trophy race for women pilots only, which is considered by the women fliers their most important race of the year, is missing from the program for the first time since 1928.

Margaret Cooper has started an inquiry as to the discrimination against women fliers, writing to the donor of the Aerol Trophy, and to Cliff and Paul Henderson, who are in charge of the air races.

The races are under the auspices of the National Aeronautic Association, which has previously officially recognized the right of women pilots to compete on an equal basis with men. Since women are members of the N. A. A., the present ruling is still more surprising.

Amelia Earhart, who was one of the prime movers in getting the sanction for women pilots to compete several years ago, is a member of the Ninety-Nine Club, as are Ruth Nichols, Mrs. Blanche Noyes, of Cleveland, Mrs. Peggy Remey, Helen Boyd and Augusta Roberts, of New York, and Dorothy Leh, of Allentown, Pa.

Cliff Henderson, who is decidedly opposed to women fliers competing against the men, has said that there is no place for women in the high-speed races.

Chinese Styles In Men Change; Tarzan Popular

Peiping, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Chinese girls now want cave men, or Chinese counterparts of Johnny Weismuller, Max Baer and Buster Crabbe, according to L. Z. Yuan, Shanghai newspaper columnist and commentator on the fashions and foibles of modern Chinese society.

Until very recently the dainty white-figured, flat-chested and narrow-shouldered Don Juan was the fluttering ideal of every Chinese maidenly heart, but the day of the "little white face" is gone forever. The stalwart athlete and the movie hero with bulging muscles has taken his place.

Gorky Makes Plea For Soviet Realism

Urges Authors to Stress Russian Children.

Moscow, Aug. 20 (AP).—Maxim Gorky, the Russian writer, appeared today before the All-Union Congress of Soviet Writers which is being held here and exhorted young authors to devote themselves to Socialist realism. He urged them to give to the world a true picture of proletarian civilization which has banished private property and all bourgeois traditions.

Emphasizing the difference between children of the Soviet Union and those under capitalistic governments, Gorky urged that the former should be truthfully pictured.

He stressed the greatly altered position of women under the Soviet regime and suggested that writers devote greater care to depicting women's changed psychology.

Ball Players Women Idolize Aren't Overly Handsome Ones

But They've Got to Know the Game to Charm the Ladies, and No Grandstand Play Is Tolerated by These Severe Critics.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

HE MAY have the kind of a face that wives go to the movies to forget. He may "panic" disciples of Emily Post, murder the King's English and even chew tobacco. But if he can play ball, in fandom's truest sense of the word, then he has what it takes to fill the grand stand on ladies' day.

Women love winners, individually or collectively. The psychological effect of a sure-fire baseball player, or a team with the series purse in easy grasp will bring the feminine public out in droves—whether they understand the game or not. This comes from merry-eyed Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, who, after 46 years of experience in the league, should know.

Modern women are better students of the game than were their sisters of earlier generations, Mr. Griffith added. They want team play, not individual horseplay. With the growing popularity of sports among women, the stands now hold a large daily attendance of feminine fans, who appreciate the fine points of the game and do not need a ladies' day to stimulate their interest. Washington boasts the largest daily feminine attendance in the country.

It Was a Riot, Then.

With a broad reminiscent smile, President Griffith recalled the Washington Club's championship days of 1924 and 1925.

"Ladies' days were riots then," he said. "An army of between 12,000 and 15,000 women would literally storm the gates before noon. They'd bring their lunches along so as to be assured the best seats.

"Our paid customers were forced out of the edges of the grandstand and up into the rafters. The men complained. Finally we had to set aside a number of reserved seats to accommodate the paid admissions. And don't think that this didn't meet with indignation on the part of the ladies. Some of them took us to task in no uncertain terms. One woman wound up her maledictions by demanding some free information. She wanted to know where first base was."

Sometimes individual players attract a large feminine following. Is it from hero worship? Sex appeal? Mr. Griffith shook his head.

"It is rarely because of the player's beauty," he said, grinning. "Good playing, mixed with personality, explains some cases. Take Babe Ruth, for instance. He simply has to grin and the women are delighted. When he strikes, whether it's foul or fair, their squeals fill the air.

Greatest of Them All.

"Then there was Walter Johnson, the greatest pitcher of them all, who played with the Washington Club from 1907 to 1927. The women were very much taken with him. He was fairly handsome, 6 feet 2, quiet and dignified.

"But the one they adored was red-head, burly and chewed tobacco incessantly—that was Art Shires." And President Griffith chuckled as he pictured the former Washington Club player.

"He had a swagger like Peck's Bad Boy, he didn't mince words even when women were present, and his face was invariably pulled to one side to accommodate an enormous 'chaw' of tobacco. When he talked to the women who followed at his heels, it was but briefly—and out of the other side of his face."

Playing to the grandstand is one fault that the women of today frown down upon, according to President Griffith. Feminine fans, along with their brothers, put the team ahead of any player. College athletics, perhaps has given them this viewpoint.

Among the most faithful women baseball fans in Washington, according to Mr. Griffith, are: Mrs. James M. Farley, who comes often and roots enthusiastically; Mrs. John N. Garner, who accompanies the Vice President virtually every afternoon during the series, while they are in Washington; and Mrs. Gerald Nye, wife of the North Dakota Senator, who comes from a family of ardent baseball fans.

State Adopts a Tree And Writes Its History

Pennsylvania has not only adopted a State tree—the hemlock—but is printing a history of the tree. A brochure by Henry E. Clepper tells why the tree was selected and defines its species, of which there are nine.

Giant hemlocks, says Mr. Clepper, have a majesty possessed by few trees. The hemlock commonly grows to a height of about 75 feet, though very old trees grow as tall as 160 feet. There are a few hemlocks extant that are between 500 and 600 years old. Hemlocks make beautiful Christmas trees.

PILLAR TO POST

Life Is Gay and Tragic, Says Wife of the Late Speaker.

"LIFE is gay, glorious, tragic and incomprehensible," said Mrs. Henry T. Rainey shortly before she left with the Speaker for their home in Carrollton, Ill. The sentence summed up her philosophy; no one can take the vicissitudes of life with better grace than she.

* * * *

Last winter Washington society discovered Mrs. Rainey and she enjoyed a popularity that any debutante might envy. At parties it was not unusual to see her surrounded by eager groups charmed by her gayety. Often the Speaker was to be found in the background watching her, smiling a little proudly. Now the companion with whom she shared life and work so fully is gone, and she faces tragedy with the fortitude expected of her.

* * * *

As the wife of the Speaker, and his secretary for 30 years, she blithely assumed the heavy social duties devolving upon her rank, and at the same time did not neglect her work one iota. With the zest of a young girl she attended diplomatic dinners, teas and White House functions, observing punctiliously her own days at home, while from early morning until late afternoon she was engaged in the strenuous duties that the seriousness of the times and the importance of her husband's office laid upon his secretary.

Through her office marched the grand parade; distinguished men of America who begged for a few minutes of the Speaker's time; wily lobbyists who did not fool the Speaker's secretary; weeping, hysterical, depression-shocked women who demanded the Government do something about their defaulting bonds; the hundreds of unemployed who beseeched her daily for help; distracted farmers; frantic business men.

* * * *

To each she gave the concentrated attention that would have taxed the strength of a much younger woman. How the frail, gray-haired woman stood this constant drain upon her physical and emotional reserves is a mystery. Before her eyes was unrolled every day the picture of America in distress. Often she gave sound advice, and she would say: "Life is a great game. Play it with the cards in your hand."

* * * *

A man sat waiting in her office one day to see the Speaker, and he listened and saw for himself the amazingly sympathetic and skillful way she handled each suppliant. The same evening he saw her at a social function, where she was the center of a group delighted with her conversational sallies.

"How can you be so gay?" he asked, marveling, and she answered, "Life is gay, glorious, tragic and incomprehensible."

She Gives Up.

The parents of Mrs. Eugene Black, not foreseeing that their little girl would grow up to be the consort of the governor of the Federal Reserve Board, christened her Gussie instead of the more dignified Augusta.

Her husband, before announcement of his retirement, frequently used to diminish the solemnity of his addresses on banking with casual anecdotes which go to show that Gussie, as he refers to her, knows little about the intricacies of banking. Mrs. Black doesn't mind at all!

* * * *

She says she knows nothing whatever about banking and doesn't care to learn. When they were first married Mr. Black was practicing law, and his young bride strove to learn all she could about his cases so that she could discuss his work intelligently with him.

* * * *

When he transferred his activities to the insurance field she burdened her mind with mortality statistics and what-not relating to that subject. But when he went into banking she gave up the struggle of trying to understand her husband's business.

Knitting Royal Family Displays Its Creations

London, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—All the members of the royal family can knit.

Recently, for an important charity show, they set an example for the whole Buckingham Palace staff, and two bales of clothes were produced.

Queen Mary was responsible for half a dozen colored shawls, and the Prince of Wales turned in a scarf.

College Wardrobes Aren't Selected With Hard Labor, as in the Past

This slim-fitted tweed and others resembling it will be seen at football games and on and off campuses, on the backs of the smarter element among this fall's college girls. It's beige and brown and those edible-looking buttons are of composition.

BEFORE a dewy-eyed damsel departed for college 20 years ago she and her mother, augmented by the little dressmaker around the corner, spent the entire summer making dresses, undies, perhaps even a suit and coat. The last two items were frequently ready-mades, but even then they were selected for their utility, not for their campus-rightness.

But now, a college-bound maiden can dash into a department store a couple of hours before she leaves for her alma mater and say, "I want Budget No. 1, size 16." Within the same amount of time it takes to pack a picnic basket the collegienne will have a complete school wardrobe in boxes and bags, ready to take with her.

The budget idea was demonstrated yesterday before thrilled coeds-to-be at the opening of the College Shop at Lansburgh & Bro. department store.

The girls learned they could "get by" at all college affairs on Budget No. 1 at a cost of $78.01. Budget No. 2, decidedly more elaborate, is priced at $160.99.

"That's about the amount most collegiennes are spending this year," said Miss Eva Downs, originator of the College Shop, as she pointed proudly to the long list of items comprised by Budget No. 2.

The list seemed complete, even for those who have ambitions to be the "best-dressed girl on the campus." There were three hats, three pairs of shoes, an evening gown, a cocktail dress, a sweater and skirt, a crepe frock, a two-piece wool dress, a four piece suit consisting of jersey skirt and blouse; tweed skirt and coat.

Two pairs of gloves, two bags, a robe, a dozen hankies, two pairs of pajamas, four pairs of hose, and undies made up the rest of Budget No. 2.

"And everything in budgets has been chosen by college girls themselves," explained Miss Downs, an alumna of Southern Methodist University in Texas. "I learned in school more heartaches were caused by the wrong clothes than by the wrong grades. Many girls don't know just what to take with them when they go away to school. And after they've spent their money for unsuitable things, it's too late to do anything. That's why I asked nine college girls to make up an advisory board on what to wear. They selected the things in the budgets."

Notes on Show Give Style Hints

The college girl who has a four-piece suit will delight in the many combinations it offers. For instance, a heavy green coat and brown skirt is accompanied by a brown blouse and brown skirt. The blouse may be worn with either skirt. The heavy coat is adapted to both arrangements.

Redheads Get The Attention Of Beauticians

By Frances Mangum.

REDHEADS are receiving more attention from cosmeticians. For a time they were forced to struggle along with the flesh and rachel powders of their darker and fairer sisters, the carmine and raspberry rouges, and any color eye make-up they happened to prefer.

Now there is a new order. Beauty experts are not only prescribing directly for these titians but they are manufacturing cosmetics especially for them.

One firm has recently put out a lipstick and rouge which were compounded to bring out the high lights in a redhead's coloring. They were blended on a deep orange scheme that is adapted both to those with fiery hair and those with hair a burnished copper color.

As a general thing the titian should use rouge sparingly. Her best bet is a light orange, which gives only a faint tint to the cheeks, and a brighter, slightly darker lipstick of the same basic orange shade. If she is going to brave the glaring sunlight her rouge may be a bit darker, but must be just as sparingly used. In the evening she dares use more rouge of a brighter color, and a correspondingly brighter lipstick. She must, however, be sure that both rouge and lipstick are built around an orange base, never the purple that is prevalent in dark cosmetics.

If she has blue eyes she should use a blue eyeshadow, applied lightly to the very edge of the lid close to the lashes and faded upwards. With green eyes she may accentuate their color by using green eye shadow in the same way. Unless her lashes and brows are naturally black she should tint them with brown mascara, applied carefully with a light touch.

Her eyebrow pencil should be the same color. After she has traced the fine line of her brows she should use a brush to make sure the line loses its sharpness and takes on the natural shape of the brows.

Her powder should be a cream color, never a deep rachel or a light pink. She may choose a light cream, or dark, according to the color of her skin.

In selecting her fall wardrobe she should be guided to a large extent by the coloring of her eyes. If they are blue, let her cleave to the dark blues, and dresses with light blue touches. If they are brown she will be lovely in golden browns and dark browns. If they are green she may glorify the color of her hair and her eyes by wearing green dresses and choosing her accessories for darker dresses in vivid greens. One of her most flattering bets is green button earrings.

Teachers' Loyalty Oaths Criticized as "Menace"

Oaths of loyalty for teachers were condemned by Prof. I. L. Kandel, of Teachers College in a recent address at Columbia University.

"The oaths are an instance of state control which is a menace to education," Dr. Kandel asserted. "The 'externa' of education, conditions necessary to bring pupils and teachers together, are the proper realm of state action, but not the 'interna' courses of study and methods of instruction."

Shorts Center Of the Year's Clothes Fight

Golf and Tennis Officials Side With Censors of Feminine Dress.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20 (AP).—The endless controversy over just how much or how little clothing women may wear now centers on sport clothing, particularly shorts.

Departing from the traditional grounds for controversy, scanty bathing suits, the debate now rages around the attire affected on the golf links, the tennis courts and by devotees of the bicycle.

The result has been that the golf links managers and tennis tournament officials have allied themselves with policemen and various official and unofficial censors of feminine dress who every summer wail over the brief bathing costumes.

Restrictions concerning women's sports wear, however, a survey of regulations enforced by larger cities of the Nation indicated today, show that the only major requirement generally is that the apparel be "within the bounds of decency."

Staid old Boston has banned shorts on municipal golf and tennis courts and loud protests from many have ensued.

The new mode bathing suits—brassiere type and trunks—are in disfavor on Lake Champlain in New York and El Paso, Tex. One of three Des Moines (Iowa) private golf courses has a rule against shorts. El Paso, Tex., bars shorts on tennis courts. The Philadelphia Fairmont Park Commission superintendent has ruled that women's tennis shorts must not be over 2 inches above the knee, not too loose and not of flimsy material. Shorts are banned on the municipal golf course.

Elsewhere, the survey revealed, women's shorts were generally accepted without question.

Baltimore allows any attire as long as it is not "offensive." Alfred Fleishman, superintendent of recreation in the St. Louis park departments, said "very few women are ordered from municipal swimming pools for improper attire," and that the matter of impropriety is left to the life guards. He observed a marked trend toward fewer clothes for women, but expressed the belief it is largely a personal matter.

Freedom and comfort characterize sports wear in the Los Angeles area, and while many Pacific Coast beaches have ancient regulatory ordinances concerning beach attire, some requiring the body to be covered at least from the knees to the shoulders, they are entirely disregarded.

Omaha, Nebr., reported that while there is no restriction of women's sports wear, Supt. Tom Knapp, of the city welfare department, recently denied a dance hall permission to hold a "pajama dance" on the theory "they go too far if you don't hold them in line."

While there are virtually no restrictions on women's attire, regulations requiring men to wear tops to trunks on beaches were reported from many cities.

Stoefen - Lott Advance in Nationals

Perry-Wilde Impress in Victory; Grant and McCauliff Default.

Shields-Wood Advance in Stubborn Match; Women Play Today.

By Sid Feder
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20 (AP).—Paced by the mighty combination of George Lott and Lester Stoefen, ambitious to retain their crown, the field of 32 teams in the National doubles tennis championships whittled itself in half today, but first-round play took an unexpected toll in the seeded list.

Although none of the ranking duos which saw action during the day at Germantown Cricket Club was even close to defeat at any time, a default by Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, the Atlanta mite, and his New York teammate, Gene McCauliff, left only seven of the eight ranked American pairs in the second-round bracket.

Along with them were the foreign aspirants to the National doubles throne, Fred Perry and Frank Wilde, English aces, and the South African-Czechoslovakian pair of Vernon Kirby and the giant Roderick Menzel. They, too, found the going surprisingly easy in their battles for survival.

Cup Stars Not Extended.

Stoefen and Lott—the powerful pair that mixed California height and Chicago guile to win top honors in Davis Cup battles and the Wimbledon championship play this season—were never extended as they mowed down Fred Kuser and E. Harlan Whitehead, of Trenton, N. J., by 6—4, 6—4, 6—3 scores.

The Jerseyans were hard-working racquet-wielders, but were completely outclassed by the stroking ability and team play of the defending titlists.

In the same manner, the top-seeded foreigners, Perry and Wilde, swept to an easy conquest over two former collegians, S. Ellsworth Davenport, one-time Harvard star, and Robert Kelleher, former Williams College player, both of whom now live in New York. The score of 6—2, 6—3, 6—3, which the Britons compiled, indicates just how superior they were over their opponents. Perry carried the brunt of the play and Wilde, although splendid on court coverage, was somewhat weak at times on service.

Allison-Van Ryn Win.

Ranked immediately behind the Lott-Stoefen combination and rated as the greatest threat to their continued rule of the National doubles domain, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, former champions and Davis Cup players, suppressed C. Alphonso Smith and John Wheatley, of Virginia, without once losing the lead.

Conquerors of Lott and Stoefen in the Newport Casino finals yesterday, the Texan and his Philadelphia partner never extended themselves to pile up a 6—4, 6—4, 6—3 triumph.

There were easy victories, too, by third-seeded Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, Davis Cup singles aces; by Berkeley Bell, of New York, and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, seeded fourth; by the California youngsters, Gene Mako and Don Budge, rated fifth; by the Texas-Tennessee team of John McDiarmid and Robert Bryan, ranked sixth, and by eighth-seeded Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, and Wilmer Hines, Columbia, S. C.

Shields-Wood Pressed.

Two other Philadelphians also gave stubborn opposition to a ranking combination, when Shields and Wood were carried to 18 games in the last set of their match with Sam Gilpin and Neil Sullivan, but the competition never placed the Davis Cup players in danger as they ran out the victory, 6—1, 6—4, 10—8.

In tomorrow's second-round battles, Lott and Stoefen oppose the Georgians, Arthur Hendrix and Burtz Boulware, while Perry and Wilde take on Mako and Budge. In addition the National veterans doubles get under way along with an invitation doubles tournament for women.

First Round.

George M. Lott, Jr., Chicago, and Lester R. Stoefen, Los Angeles, defeated Fred Kuser and Harlan Whitehead, Trenton, N. J., 6—4, 6—4, 6—3; Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, defeated Alphonso Smith and John Wheatley, Virginia, 6—4, 6—4; Frank Shields and Sidney B. Wood, New York, defeated Sam Gilpin and Neil J. Sullivan, Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—4, 10—8; Berkeley Bell, New York, and Gregg Mangin, Newark, N. J., defeated William T. Tilden 3d and Norcross Tilney, Princeton, 6—4, 3—6, 6—0, 6—4.

Gene Mako, Los Angeles, and Don Budge, Oakland, Calif., won from Wilbur Hess and Doc Barr, Texas, by default; John McDiarmid, Fort Worth, Tex., and Robert Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn., defeated Paul La Wall and William Stilwell, jr., Germantown, Pa., 6—1, 6—2, 6—4; Dr. Carl Fischer and William Linzelbach, Philadelphia, won from Bryant Grant, Atlanta, and Dr. Eugene McCauliffe, New York, by default; Henry Prusoff, Seattle, and Wilmer Hines, Columbia, S. C., defeated Harold Jane and Harold Custer, Cynwyd, Pa., 6—3, 8—6, 6—2.

Fred Perry and F. H. D. Wilde, England, defeated Ellsworth Davenport, jr., Harvard, and Robert Kelleher, Williams, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3; Roderick Menzel, Czechoslovakia, and Vernon Kirby, South Africa, defeated Dr. Herbert Fischer and Ralph Demott, Cynwyd, Pa., 7—5, 6—1, 6—0; Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, and Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated Watson Washburn and William Fiebleman, New York, 5—7, 6—0, 8—6, 6—3; Martin Buxby, Texas, and William J. Clothier 2d, Harvard, defeated Bernard Friedman and George Dunn, Pennsylvania, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

James W. Farrin and R. D. Sidwell, Boston, defeated Ramsey Potts, jr., and Ernest Sutter, New Orleans, 2—6, 6—3, 8—7, 6—4, 6—4; Arthur Hendrix, Florida, and Burt Z. Boulware, Georgia Tech, defeated Bart Pinest and Herman Dornheim, Germantown, Pa., 6—2, 6—4, 6—2; Armand Rejneau, New York, and William Reese, Atlanta, defeated Thomas McGlinn and A. Willing Paterson, Philadelphia, 4—6, 7—5, 7—5, 6—3; Lindley Tiers and Amos Eno, Princeton, won from Arnold Jones, Providence, R. I., and James Van Alen, New York, by default.

Jones, Race Rider, Hurt at Saratoga

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Jockey Robert (Bobby) Jones, contract rider for Mrs. John Hay Whitney, was seriously injured during the running of the first race at the Spa today when his mount, Alefar, was caught in a jam and forced into a bad spill.

Jones was taken to the Saratoga Hospital, where it was reported he was suffering from a skull puncture and two broken ribs.

Jones, who rode Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's High Quest to victory in the Pimlico Preakness in May, is a resident of San Ysidro, Calif.

Tigers Open Series Here Tomorrow

Rowe and Whitehill to Oppose as League's Leaders Invade.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

MICKEY COCHRANE, who used to be something of a catcher with Connie Mack's championship ball clubs a few years back and who is now so much of a manager that it looks as if Detroit will win the flag, arrived in Washington last night, flanked by 23 of the hungriest-looking Tigers you ever laid an eye on. It seems that Mr. Cochrane and his men are looking for the Nats.

Cochrane senses the fact that his ball club can do itself a lot of good here in Washington, but he also is mindful of the stirring days in July when 'Frisco Cronin's gang gave the Detroiters some anxious moments in their own ball park. The Nats finally lost the series, 3-1, but brother, some of those games were so close those Tigers were plenty shaky at the finish.

Those Games Close.

There was one afternoon when Washington loaded the bases in the ninth inning—only one run behind, mind you, and only one out, and just about gave Cochrane the jitters, to say nothing of the 10,000 Tiger disciples who lost a larynx or so yelling. There was another afternoon when the Detroit boys had their hands full winning a 2-1 decision over the Griffmen, and there was another afternoon when they didn't win.

So, while Detroit can do itself a lot of good here, the Nats figure that maybe they can muscle in on the act and do a little missionary work in the current drive for a first-division berth.

Cronin's men will work out this morning at 10 o'clock—not that they need the practice, but ball players get stiff when they lay over for a couple of days. Tomorrow they open the season with Detroit, which will last four days.

Rowe to Be Ready.

Schoolboy Rowe, the Tiger pitching sensation, who is after a new major league consecutive-game winning streak, and Earl Whitehill, the Nats temperamental southpaw, will be opponents in the first game of the set. Elder Al Benson, Washington's bewhiskered recruit, may break in on one of the games, it was reported yesterday.

Cronin, who has been experimenting with Washington's batting order these past few games, intimated that there will be another shake-up in tomorrow's game.

New Mark for Channel Swim May Be Denied

London, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Official recognition of Mrs. Emma Faber's swim across the English Channel probably will be withheld, due to a confusion of claims as to the exact time of the Austrian woman's start from Cape Griz Nez, France.

She claims to have started at 1:10 a. m., but in other quarters it was said she took off earlier, and failed to better the mark set by Gertrude Ederle, of New York, in 1926.

E. H. Temme's swim across the channel in the opposite direction, accomplished almost simultaneously with Mrs. Faber's effort, was recorded in 14 hours 15 minutes, which will be accepted as a record for that direction.

Wilson Stops Loayza in 7 Rounds

By Bill McCormick.

BOB WILSON, smashing, crashing Florida left-hook artist, battered rugged, aged Stanislaus Loayza into submission in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round main event at the Riding and Hunt Club last night, which was marked throughout by hair-raising fighting, equalled in dramatic intensity only by its climax.

More than 1,600 enthused spectators gasped in bewilderment as Loayza, who had been taking all the Florida dynamiter had to offer for almost seven rounds, raised his hand piteously toward Referee Denny Hughes, a pleading expression on his face, and begged him to stop the fight.

Examination disclosed that Loayza's right side had been crushed like an egg shell by Wilson's crunching left, but more complete examination is necessary to determine just how many of the Chilean chiller's ribs are broken—if any.

Head to Head Fight.

Throughout most of the fighting Wilson and the Chilean stood head to head, a la Carioca, using each other's ribs for marimbas. Back and forth they battled in a regular dog fight, with first one, then the other jumping into the lead, but with Wilson maintaining a slight superiority in every round but one—the second—which was even.

Wilson would come crashing in with his vaunted left hook ripping into Loayza's body. Loayza would bounce back with both fists flying, forcing the Florida Flurry to the ropes and shaking him to the heels with a smashing right hand. Thus it went while it lasted.

Loayza opened fast, like the Loayza of old, jumping about the ring on his toes, laying down a constant barrage of two-fisted punches, but before the fourth round, old age and Wilson's punches had taken their toll and he was standing flat-footed, still shuffling in with dogged determination.

In the fatal seventh, Wilson nailed Loayza with a right and left, to the head, driving him to the ropes, then battering him furiously in an infighting session from which the Chilean emerged with a bloody nose. Weary and weak, barely able to stand, Loayza pumped both hands to the body feebly, then shook Wilson with a long right to the head. Wilson swung back into action, again driving his courageous opponent to the ropes and battering him about the face and body with both hands.

Loayza appealed to Referee Hughes to stop the fight, but Hughes refused to halt the action. Following another brisk exchange in which Wilson sank his left viciously in Loayza's side, the Chilean again appealed to Hughes, who then stopped the bout.

Ernedto Sagues, the Chilean schoolmaster, gave Otto Kushmer a boxing lesson for three rounds, but weakened like a drugstore cuppacawfee toward the finish to emerge with a good draw decision. The Chilean pepperpot sprayed the Alexandria middleweight with a very varied assortment of plain and fancy blows, but he could not punch hard enough to battle his way out of a cellophane wrapper and Kushmer evened matters with his more awkward, but more convincing wallops.

Wild Bill Howell, who knocked out Sam Kirk, of Texas, in three rounds two weeks ago, repeated the knockout business again, applying the finishing touches via the technical kayo route this time in the first round. During the 2 minutes and 58 seconds the boys were in action the Washington lad was floored for no count, bounced up to flatten Kirk for the count, then battered him so badly Referee LaFond was left with no alternative but to stop the slaughter.

In a fast four-round opener, Lou Jamieson and Harry Kershey brawled entertainingly to a draw decision. Judge Howard Livingston voted Jamieson, Judge Bob Eller balloted for Kershey and Referee Eddie LaFond settled the issue on both sides by casting his slip for a draw.

Giants Boost Win Streak To 5 Games

Hubbell Again Called Upon as Reds Bow, 7-4; Moore Gets 4 Hits.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 20 (AP).—Calling on Carl Hubbell to check the Reds for the second time in as many days, the New York Giants ran their winning streak to five straight games and their lead over the idle Cubs to five and one-half as they defeated Cincinnati 7 to 4 today.

LeRoy Parmelee, who received credit for his sixth triumph of the year, was unsteady, issuing seven bases on balls, and in the eighth, with Reds perched on second and third and only one out, Hubbell was called to the rescue. One run came in on an infield out and another on Mark Koenig's single. That was all, however, as the screwball artist forced Bottomley to ground out and then retired the Reds in one, two three order in the ninth.

Reds Fail to Score.

The Reds filled the bases with one out in the second and failed to score, but got two runs on three hits, an error and two passes in the third to take the lead. Meanwhile the Giants found little Toney Freitas a puzzle until the sixth, when they put over three runs on as many hits, an error and a free ticket to first.

Joe Moore was the spearhead of the New Yorkers' 13-hit attack. He connected with four hits, one a double, in five times at bat, and scored three runs.

Willard Turns Mat Referee To Send His Kids to College

Big Jess, Who Earned $1,500,000 in Ring, Virtually Broke; Says Boxing Is Dead; In East for First Time Since 1923.

By Jack Cuddy
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 20.—Big Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion, who earned more than $1,500,000 in the fight game and show business, started a tour of the East here tonight as wrestling referee, "just trying to pick up a few dollars to send the kids to college."

Virtually broke, but with five children on his hands who need schooling, the 47-year-old Kansas giant is following in the footsteps of Jack Dempsey, who battered the crown off his towering head at Toledo, and has become an arbiter of the grapplers.

"This college education stuff is no gag," Willard insisted as he stood in the lobby of the hotel Walt Whitman, Panama hat in hand. No gray was evident in his thatch of thick black hair, despite all his reverses in recent years. He looked good. Like one of the tents of his circus days, a vast blue suit enveloped his huge body—280 pounds on a 6 foot 6 inch frame.

"There's Stella, Frances and Enid, the girls, and Jess, jr., and Allen" Willard continued. "They range in age from 23 to 18, and none of them are finished with college yet. But I'm going to see them through somehow. Allen is with me now. He drives the car for me and Mrs. Willard on our tour. The others are in California."

Willard attributed the loss of his great fortune to just a lot of unfortunate investments in real estate, oil and other ventures, coupled with the depression. He said he still owned considerable land in various sections of the country, "but this land, right now is a liability instead of an asset."

Why did the largest man who ever held the title, before the advent of Primo Carnera, turn to wrestling for money instead of boxing?

"Because boxing is dead. It's worse off now than I ever saw it. Fighters all ride high horses, and they won't come down to accept depression purses. They want to fight as seldom as possible and then for big money, which is not to be had. Most of the promoters lack the imagination and initiative that made Rickard great. And even the better ones have difficulty making good matches because boxers want too much money and want to pick their opponents."

So he turned to wrestling, which he claimed is flourishing. The grunters and groaners get out on the mat as often as possible and are willing to work on percentages, small or large. "And the wrestlers of today, with their dives, tackles, spins, slugging and rough stuff, generally provide more entertainment than the modern boxers."

Willard is in the East for the first time since 1923 when he fought Firpo and Floyd Johnson on a comeback campaign. He expects to renew acquaintances with a lot of old friends.

Turning back to the old days, Willard had little comment to make on reports that Jack Johnson had taken a "dive" on April 5, 1915, when Big Jess won the title from him. When told that Johnson still insists that he "laid down" Willard asked, "What would you expect Johnson to say?"

As for rumors that Dempsey had his hands in plaster paris casts when he gave Willard one of the worst beatings in ring history at Toledo on July 4, 1919, Jess laughed and said he didn't think Jack or his handlers were "that kind of people." After he was hit on the button with a left hook, he said he didn't remember much about that fight.

Pirates Down Dodgers, 6 to 2

Pound 3 Hurlers to Win Behind Swift.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates finally broke the spell which the Dodgers held over them, winning today's game, 6 to 12, after losing eight straight to Casey Stengel's men.

The pitching of Bill Swift and the hitting of the Waner brothers were largely responsible for the triumph. Swift held the Dodgers to eight scattered hits, five of them coming in the last three innings when they scored their runs. Brother Paul, with four hits in five times at bat, drove in two runs, and Lloyd sent another across the plate. Arky Vaughan had a perfect day at the plate with three for three.

Kozeluh Beats Frydell in Three Sets

Capital Man Wins 1 Game From Czech Star in Pro Tourney.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20 (AP).—Karel Kozeluh, Czechoslovakian star who has held the world professional tennis title seven times, advanced to the third round of the National pro tournament today at the South Shore Country Club by a quick victory over Thomas Frydell, Washington, D. C., player.

Kozeluh, mixing his clowning tactics with sound tennis, lost only one game of the three-set match, dropping that one in the second set. Frydell reached the second round earlier in the day when his scheduled opponent, Robert Murray, of Sands Point, Long Island, defaulted.

Jack Castle, 5-foot 2-inch entrant from Buffalo, N. Y., won the longest and most bitterly contested match of the tournament from Ed Faulkner, of Philadelphia, 6—1, 5—7, 7—5, 6—3. After Castle took the opening set, Faulkner came to the net and driving steadily cross court, won the second. He had set point twice in the third set, once at 5—1, and again at 5—4, but Castle rallied to square it.

The Buffalo player broke through Faulkner's service and won his own to take the set, then won the last one with little difficulty.

Emmet Pare, former Chicago star, now a resident of Memphis, Tenn., also moved up via the default route, Bennett Levin, of Rye, N. Y., conceding the match.

Charles Wood, of Bernardsville, N. J., defeated James Mitchell, of Richmond, Va., 8—6, 6—2, 6—3, in another first-rounder, and Allan Wylie, of Chicago, won by default from Espy Diehl, of New York.

10-Day Suspension Cut to 7 Days After Landis Holds Quiz.

Short and Ugly Word Is Heard Through Door of Closed Session.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20 (AP).—Dizzy Dean and the Cardinals, after loud and prolonged wrangling, were at peace again tonight.

The Dizzy one was reinstated by Manager Frankie Frisch following a hearing before baseball's "Czar" Kenesaw Mountain Landis. Much dirty linen and even "Brother Elmer, the peanut vendor" from Houston, came in for noisy discussion at the hearing.

In theory the hearing, by decree of Landis, was closed. In fact, however, the discussion became so noisy it sounded through hotel corridors.

This was the seventh day of Dizzy's suspension, which he brought on himself by failing to attend an exhibition game at Detroit last Monday and by balking at a $100 fine.

Landis Upholds Frisch.

After the three-hour hearing, Landis found that the suspension of ten days imposed Thursday by Frisch on the star right-handed pitcher was not unreasonable.

"The club is within its rights in the decision," he said. "Whether Dizzy shall come back before the ten days are up is between the club and the president."

"What do you think, Frank?" President Sam Breadon asked Frisch.

"It's all right with me," Frank replied.

"What, the ten days?"

"No, let's make it seven," said the manager.

Costs Dizzy $486.

Rebellion against the club discipline cost Dizzy $486. His pay for seven days, which he loses through suspension, amounted to $350. Two uniforms he tore on being informed by Frisch he was indefinitely suspended, cost $36, and he was fined $100 at the outset.

Paul, pitching brother of Dizzy, who was also suspended for not making the Detroit trip, attended the hearing as witness and as Dizzy's only defender. Paul was reinstated last week when he paid a $50 fine, plus the loss of two days' pay.

Everything from action of the club in recently bringing the Deans' elder brother, Elmer, from Houston to peddle peanuts at Sportsman's Park, to a prolonged investigation of Dizzy's alleged sore arm on a New York invasion a short while ago, came up for noisy discussion.

Elmer sold no peanuts here, since Mrs. Dizzy Dean felt it would put the pitching brother in an undignified light, and sent the Goober salesman back to Texas.

Judge Interrupted Often.

Landis quizzed each of the witnesses separately, but was often interrupted. At the hearing were

Gift of Roses Sets 6-Furlong Track Record in Winning Narragansett Feature

10-to-1 Shot Always in Front

Wins by 1½ Lengths; High Glee, Choice, Is Easy Second.

With Joe Jacobs in the saddle, Gift of Roses reeled off the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 flat, three-fifths of a second faster than the mark hung up by Sobihez earlier in the meeting. The speedy trip brought the little mare home one and one-half lenghts in front of C. V Whitney's 3-year-old High Glee, the favorite. Frank Hayes' Can't Remember was third in the field of seven.

Gift of Roses, an outsider paying $22.30 for $2, took the track soon after the start and made every pole a winning marker. She headed into the stretch leading by two lenghths and easily held sway to the wire while High Glee also had an easy time annexing second place, finishing three lengths to spare over Can't Remember. The 9-year-old My Dandy, Chinese Princess, Toney Fastep and Zekiel brought up the rear.

Jockey Haas Chicago Star.

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—Jockey Leon Haas had a longshot field day at Hawthorne today, bringing in three straight winners, and accounting for the daily double.

In the second he piloted Grey Streak home ahead of the field, with his mount paying off at $14.58 for $2. He rode Gunfire to victory in the third event, and came right back in the fourth, with Bert Reid. Gunfire paid $16.22, and the daily double was worth $115.28 for $2.

Haas booted Bert Reid, racing for T. C. Worden, of Chicago, past the judges two lengths in front of S. M. Look's Hathy, which tired after setting the pace in the five and one-half furlong feature. The Audley Farm's Dancing Doll finished third. The winner ran the distance in 1:06 4-5, and paid $17.02.

Little Lie Scores at Spa.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 20 (AP). Chalk up another stakes success for the Schwartz brothers, of New York. Today it was Albert C. Schwartz whose colors flashed home in front, the black filly, Little Lie, accounting for top honors and $1,825 in the thirty-second running of the Kentucky, a claiming stakes of five and a half furlongs for 2-year-old fillies. Outbreaking her field, the daughter of Sickle lasted to beat William Woodward's 15 to 1 shot, Palma, by a neck. Victor Emanuel's High Hand II finished a half dozen lengths back in third position.

Overnight rain left the track good. The winner's time was 1:06 4-5. High Hand 2d forced most of the pace, but had enough upon reaching the last furlong. Palma, a trailer until the last quarter, came wide and made up ground like an express train, but her move came a trifle too late.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLORIST, $13.70, $6.30, $4.70; TARBUCKET (entry), $4.80, $4.00; CHOIR GIRL, $9.80.

COLORIST went into command in the opening strides, drew clear in the first quarter-mile and, hard ridden at the end, held TARBUCKET safe. The latter worked his way up steadily and closed with good speed when placed under punishment in stretch. CHOIR GIRL, prominently placed from the beginning, continued determinedly until the close. LEALETTE closed in a big zap and was going stoutly at the close. BLUE BUBBLE saved ground at the stretch turn and closed gamely. COURT GOSSIP made up some ground. WITTEKIND faltered in the last five-sixteenths. LULU LITE was in close quarters approaching the far turn, was knocked back, and was unable to recover. VALISE weakened badly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAYING ON, $5.00, $3.10, $2.60; PAR VALUE, $3.10, $2.70; HER GOLD, $3.00.

PLAYING ON, unruly at the post and the contributing factor in delaying the start, was steadied along in close attendance of the pace, came to the outside of the leader in the stretch and outgamed PAR VALUE to the end. The latter, prominently placed throughout, disposed of CABOUSE and, despite holding on stubbornly, was unable to cope with the closing challenge of the winner. HER GOLD outrun early, closed steadily in the stretch run. CABOUSE weakened in the last three-sixteenths. CASH SURRENDER was never prominent. FLABBERGAST, away slowly, was outrun throughout.

NANCY C. had speed from the start, was taken under slight restraint straightening out on the back stretch and followed in closest pursuit of the pace; came to the outside for the closing test and outgamed POLLY CEE at the finish. The latter had good speed, was rated along on the front end, but stubbornly held on the closing test. MANAGER BILL, under steadying restraint while close to the pace, closed gamely under intermittent punishment through the last quarter-mile. BANNERS FLYING loomed up threateningly on the outside in the run through the back stretch, but was unable to improve his position when the real racing began. SQUEEZE OUT, well placed, weakened in the last five-sixteenths. RETRIBUTION was never prominent.

HAPPY HELEN, under slight restraint for the opening three furlongs, was taken to the outside for the closing test, closed stoutly and wore down SCOTCH QUEEN inside the last 50 yards. SCOTCH QUEEN went into command soon after the start, drew clear, saved ground all the way, but, despite holding on gamely, was unable to withstand the closing bid of the winner. APPLE FRITTER, prominently placed from the start, continued gamely in the drive, but was no match for the leading pair. NEW FLAG showed good speed, but weakened badly through the closing furlong. UNKNOWN SOLDIER went evenly. WAR PROFITS was never a factor. SOLITARY trailed throughout.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GIFT OF ROSES, $22.30, $9.40, $5.70; HIGH GLEE, $3.60, $2.80; CANT REMEMBER, $6.40.

GIFT OF ROSES went to the front in the opening sixteenth, was steadied along in advance of her field and held HIGH GLEE safe at the finish. HIGH GLEE moved up fast rounding the far turn, closed gamely, but was unable to threaten the winner. CANT REMEMBER, steadied along while holding to a forward position, finished gamely through the stretch run. MY DANDY, in the forefront from the beginning, weakened in the closing three-sixteenths. CHINESE EMPRESS was unable to reach the leaders. TONY FASTEP, away last, lacked speed to hold his position and raced on the outside the entire journey. ZEKIEL trailed his field throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:12. Winner, J. D. Mikel's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLARDIA, $7.60, $3.90, $2.70; COHORT MISS, $3.50, $2.70; FIRE, $2.80.

GALLARDIA took command at once, drew clear in the run to the first turn and, rated along in front for the remainder of the way, was never seriously threatened. COHORT MISS, a trailer early, moved up steadily in the closing three furlongs and, despite closing gamely, was unable to reach the winner. BIFF, in closest attendance of the party for most of the way, weakened slightly through the stretch run. ADOBE POST was unable to enter into serious contention. SOURCE CIRCLE never was a serious factor, racing back in the ruck throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:36½. Off at 5:38½. Winner, Araho Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOFTY LADY, $15.40, $7.20, $4.60; ROCK POINT, $3.70, $3.10; DARKLING, $4.40.

LOFTY LADY, steadied along for the first half-mile while within striking distance of the pace, moved up stoutly after passing the three-furlong pole and, wearing down ROCK POINT after straightening out in the stretch, drew out steadily in the last furlong. ROCK POINT took command at once, was rated along in front under slight restraint, was rushed repeatedly at the head of the stretch, but was unable to keep pace in the closing test. DARKLING, slow to begin, moved up steadily leaving the rear, back stretch and closed with a belated bid through the stretch. BLACK FALCON had good speed forcing the pace, but weakened in the drive. KINDACORN moved up midway of the far turn, but was unable to keep pace when placed under pressure. ZEMBLA was outrun.

Biggest Day Costs Jockey Haas $50

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—Jockey Leon (Buddy) Haas had his biggest day of the Hawthorne race meeting today, but his zeal cost him $50 in fines.

Haas had three straight winners, starting with the second race, all at good odds. He had no trouble in piloting Grey Streak home in the second event, but was charged with letting his mounts in the third and fourth races, Gunfire and Bert Reid, swerve. The stewards fined him $25 in each case. The rulings did not affect his mounts, however.

American Boat Leads In Canada's Cup Event

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP).—In a surging sea kicked up by a 25-to 30-mile-an-hour near-gale the Conewago of Rochester Yacht Club outsailed the Invader II of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto today in the first of the series of races for the prized Canada's Cup, premier trophy of international fresh water yacht racing. The winner had a 2 minutes and 27 seconds margin at the finish.

Maneuvering skillfully in the 5-minute interval from the warning signal to the starting gun, Skipper Wilmot V. "Rooney" Castle, of the American defender, slipped across the line a few seconds after it sounded and was never headed.

Red Flaherty Joins Hole-in-One Club

Washington's hole-in-one ranks opened to receive a new member yesterday as Red Flaherty, Indian Spring Country Club member, shot an ace on the ninth hole of the Congressional Country Club links. Using his No. 4 iron, Flaherty covered the 135-yard distance with a single hefty stroke which carried easily to the green and rolled into the can. Flaherty was playing with F. J. Newland, W. H. Kilbourne and F. M. Murray.

Intercity Swim Listed Here Sunday

Pick of District, Baltimore Compete at Maryland Club Gardens.

THE old rivalry between Washington and Baltimore breaks out anew this Sunday at the Maryland Club Gardens pool when the pick of the swimmers of both cities compete in the annual intercity meet with the Mayor Howard Jackson Trophy at stake. The District A. A. U. is sponsoring the event.

Members of the Washington All-star aggregation are yet to be selected, but the make-up of the team is already pretty well conceded. George Groff, the Shoreham speedster and District sprint champion, will head the Capital team, while Ann Bono and Rita Augusterfer, District 50 and 100-yard aces, are expected to lead the local women forces.

Broaddus, Lyman on Team.

Johnny Broaddus, who won third place in the recent Junior National diving championships, and Joe Lyman, second place winner, will represent Washington in their specialty, while Bill Marmion, Paul Wilson, Ernie Boggs and Knox Moncure, of the Y. M. C. A., are also felt certain to make the team.

Charlie Bateson, of the Shoreham, in the 220; Leonora Taube and Betty O'Toole in the women's races; Marie Duvall in the diving; Joe LaSalle in the men's free style events; Bob Jordan in the men's 220, Bob Varella in the back-stroke, Marjorie Burch in the women's breast-stroke and Dyer Ghormley in the men's breast-stroke are other strong candidates from whom the Washington representatives will be selected.

Browns Buy Texas Player.

Houston, Tex. (U.P.).—The St. Louis Browns have bought "Beau" Bell, Galveston right-hand slugger and former Texas A. & M. College star. Bell will report at the close of the Texas League season.

Sophs Are Key to C. U.'s Grid Success in '34, Says Bergman

Coach Would Prefer Son a Good Student Than Football Star.

HE'D rather have his son a good student than a football star; sophomores will make or break Catholic University's grid season this year, and high school football is faster in the East than it is in the West. These were a few thoughts—among others—to which Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, C. U.'s hale-and-hearty grid coach, gave expression yesterday as he settled down at his desk after three weeks vacationing in the West.

"No," said the former Notre Dame half back, looking at the picture of 13-year-old Arthur J. Bergman, jr., on his desk, "I don't care especially whether Artie plays football or not. If he does, all right, but I'd rather have him get good marks. He was an honor student in high school last year and that means more to me."

Coach Bergman lit a cigar and branched off on C. U.'s prospects for the 1934 season, the training season for which begins two weeks from Tuesday.

Hit by Losses.

"There isn't much to say about the team," he said. "How everything turns out depends on our sophomores. We lost four tackles, including Phil Gross and Tom Nally. Then we lost Jimmy Lyons, a guard; Eddie White, center, and John Ball, end; Capt. John Jankowski, right half; Charlie McVean, quarter; Bob McVean, half, and Tom Finn, half. Practically all these positions must be filled by sophomores.

"Of course, we have some experienced men returning—Bill Conter, captain and guard; Gus Augusterfer, quarter; Tom and Babe Gearty, backs; Tom Oliver, full, and others, but where you have to fill in with sophomores it's bound to make an inexperienced team as a whole."

High school football became the subject of conversation and the C. U. coach, who has been fishing and golfing in Indiana, voiced the belief that the scholastic game is of higher caliber in the East than in his part of the country, the Midwest.

"It can't help but be," he explained. "You have bigger cities in the East; more material to draw from and can pay the coaches more. There are a lot more high and prep schools in the East, too; there is more competition. Right here in Washington, for instance, the high school boys play faster football than in the West. Look at all the high and prep schools around here."

Praises Nagurski.

Coach Bergman thinks the Chicago Bears will find the college All-Stars in the All-Star game, August 29, at Chicago tougher opposition than most people think.

"If they play professional rules the college boys will be up against it. They won't be prepared for an offense allowing passes from any point back of the scrimmage line. If they play college rules, it'll be fairly close.

"A man like Bronko Nagurski, the Bears' full back, though means a

Gold Cup Boats In Regatta Here

Seven Already Entered in President's Cup Race, Including El Lagarto.

THIS year's President's Cup Regatta to be held September 20, 21, 22 and 23, will be featured by competition between the largest group of Gold Cup boats ever entered in one race, it was announced yesterday by L. Gordon Leech, chairman of the race committee. Seven entries already have been received for the race for which only a dozen boats in the world are qualified.

Heading the list will be George Reis' El Lagarto, winner of last year's President's Cup Race and holder of the Gold Cup championship for a number of years. The ill-fated Ethel Ruth, which was forced out by motor trouble after setting a lap record in last year's competition, will be back again as the Miss Saranac, having acquired a new name and new motor in passing from the ownership of John Shibe to Edmond A. Guggenheim. Bob Burdick is expected to pilot the Guggenheim entry.

The Delphine IV, owned last year by Horace Dodge and driven by Bill Horn, now belongs lock, stock and barrel to Horn, who will again pilot it. The Arctic Tern, perennial contender in the Gold Cup class, has again been entered and is expected by the boat-wise to furnish some dark horse competition. The Tern recently established a lap record in the Baltimore Regatta, indicating to the nautical-minded that she is being worked into the fine pitch essential for winning performances.

Jack Dunn's brand new Jay Dee will be an entry, as will John Rutherford's Louisa and Aaron DeRoy's Hornet.

Canadian P. G. A. Aug. 28.

Montreal (U.P.).—The annual Canadian Professional Golfers' Association Championship will be played on the Montreal Country Club course on Aug. 28, 29 and 30, it is announced.

25 District Golfers Among 741 Seeking to Qualify Today for U. S. Amateur

Vinson Tops Final Drill With 74

Matches Cards of Reigel and Howell; Nee Turns In 75.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

FIVE FARMS COURSE, Baltimore, Md., Aug. 20.—Gene Vinson, of the Manor Club, Washington; Bobby Reigel, Middle Atlantic champion, and Billy Howell, former Walker Cup star, the latter two from Richmond, showed the way with 18-hole scores of 74 each, as the aspirants for 14 qualifying places in the National Amateur section golf trials put in their final practice licks today for tomorrow's 36-hole test.

Vinson, former Mississippi State Open and amateur titleholder, set a burning pace with a 33 on the back nine after negotiating the outgoing side in 41. His card for the incoming side, which included three birdies, was a nifty piece of shotmaking and proved the best nine-hole score reported since the golfers embarked on their tune-up rounds last Friday.

Both Howell and Reigel shot 38's on the outgoing nine, but neither waxed enthusiastic over his scoring.

Nee Shoots 75.

Maury Nee, Columbia Country Club golfing star, did a 75 to make the score reported by Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale, the lanky lad who carried Ross Somerville, 1932 National Amateur champion, to the twenty-first hole before losing in the second round last year. Algie S. Gardiner, jr., also of Canada, scored a 79. Dave Ewell, jr., and Tommy Howell, both of Richmond, shot 77's. Talbot Speer, of the host club, had 76, and sorry to report there are no more practice scores.

The majority of the 25 District golfers who are entered in the event spent the day hitting two and three balls on every hole, and familiarizing themselves with the greens, which, believe you me, are lightning fast, and are going to give the 66 golfers in the field ample cause for worry. This course is tightly trapped too, and the golfer who can steer clear of these hazards will be mighty lucky.

Billy Dettwiler, of Congressional, had 38 going out with a spectacular deuce on the 163-yard fourth. He played only six holes on the back side. Harry Pitt, of Manor, played 13 holes, but not in succession. The Moose knows the course, having won the Baltimore invitation here three times.

Lunn in Team Match.

Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase, young District amateur champion, teamed with Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, to defeat Chandler Harper and Morton McCarthy, of Virginia Beach, Va., 3 and 2, in a special match. The scoring was nothing to brag about. Harper, winner of the medal in the sectional trials for the past two years, admits he'll have a tough time qualifying, despite his two 73's on Sunday.

The field was reduced to 66 tonight with the withdrawal of Harry A. Parr 3d, veteran Host Club golfer, who is ill.

Of the Washington contingent, Roger Peacock, Harry Pitt, Nee, Dett wiler, Martin McCarthy, Miller Stevinson and Gene Vinson, are strongly favored to qualify. Today the experts were agreed that 156 would qualify.

The course measures 6,630 yards, and the boys will shoot from the back tees. Par follows:

Out..... 4 4 4 3 4 5 4 4 3—35
In..... 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 3 4—35—70

741 Seeking Places.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—On 23 courses in this country and one in Honolulu, 741 golfers will try tomorrow to qualify for the all match play National amateur golf championship, which will open at the Country Club of Brookline, Mass., September 10.

Thirteen players, headed by the defending champion, George Dunlap, are exempt from the sectional qualifying round, 36 holes of medal play, and the remaining 167 places will be filled by tomorrow's test. The field at Brookline has been limited to 180 players.

In addition to Dunlap, ten other former champions were granted exemption—Chandler Egan, Bob Gardner, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans, Davy Herron, Jesse Guilford, Jess Sweetser, Max Marston, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston and Ross Somerville, only Canadian in history to win the title. So, too, were Lawson Little, present British amateur king, and Rex Hartley, former British Walker Cup player.

Discussion often reverted to the question as to why Dizzy Dean didn't return to the Cardinal office the morning following his suspension by Frisch. Dizzy declared he did go there.

Dizzy's sore arm was an uppermost subject in the cross-fire of questioning, and it was brought out that Dizzy said at New York that he would develop a sore arm whenever he needed it.

So incensed were the participants in the hearing at one time the short and ugly word blazed through the closed door.

Landis said he would release a resume of the proceedings when he returned to Chicago.

Jewelers Would Play.

'His Boys' Thrill Detroit Owner

Green Battles Powell at Stadium

Return Match Is Added to Bass-Sarron Card; Hogan vs. Matan.

THE Benny Bass-Pete Sarron 10-round at Griffith Stadium next Monday, which already looms as the most promising bout on the local horizon since the legalization of boxing, was given further support yesterday when it was announced that Joe Green had been signed for a return match with Pete Powell in a preliminary six.

Victorious in 16 out 18 starts since deserting the amateur ranks, Green's only setbacks have occurred at the hands of Powell, who held him to a draw in Norfolk and decisioned him on Washington's first legal outdoor fight card.

Pete Sarron turned on the steam in his workouts at the Green Oaks Tavern yesterday and is prepared to gallop down the stretch in a furious blast of prefight fighting. Aiming for the shot at Frankie Klick, which has been promised the winner of the next Monday engagement, the colorful Birmingham bruiser has accumulated a varied assortment of the best sparring partners to work with.

Bass is reported plugging steadily away in Philadelphia, determined to achieve top condition for the fight and at the same time make the requisite weight of 129 pounds to save a forfeit he has posted. According to grapevine reports from the Philadelphia Fish's gymnasium, Bass is lashing out with his knockout right in a manner boding ill for Sarron, who never before has faced such a terrific puncher.

Eddie Hogan, Billy Duffy's newest heavyweight sensation, will oppose Chester Matan, of New York, in an eight-round semifinal. An additional six-rounder and an opening four are in the making.

Warrenton Nine Divides.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Wanderers, local ball club, faced two teams on their home diamond yesterday and were shut out, 2 to 0, after seven hard-fought innings by East End, also of Warrenton, in the first game, but took the second from the Fire Department team of Vienna, Va. Vienna made their three tallies in an eighth-inning rally, but during the rest of the game Childs, pitching for the Wanderers, blanked them and struck out nine men.

Gallico

Offers to Employers Two Fine Athletes Seeking College Educations.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—A tall, stalwart young man, wearing a lettered sweater, and accompanied by his father, came in to see me the other afternoon on a curious mission. The young man had just graduated from high school and was looking for a college to go to. For a wealthy man there is a wide choice in this matter, but not for those whose financial situation will not permit them to buy an education.

The young man was very frank and struck me as a fine young Irish-American. He would like to be hired by some nice college to play football for them. He can play end and half back, pitch baseball, play basket ball and run the 440.

Wants Education As Pay.

In return for his service, he wishes nothing but an education, the opportunity to expose himself to some books and acquire a profession. He is willing to work his way through if he can get a scholarship to pay his tuition. He asked for some assistance and I confess that I was at a loss to know how to go out and get hired by a college. The only thing I could think of doing was to advertise.

I am a little behind the times in such matters and do not even know whether colleges are hiring football players any more. I know they used to in the good old golden days, but with the depression the blight hit that business too. The colleges have been trying to hire bankrolls rather than football players the last few years, and if you have ever tried to hire a bankroll for any length of time you will know how tough that is.

But I should think that with all the schools scattered around the country there should be some place where an ambitious and willing young athlete could swap touchdowns for teaching.

No Names Mentioned.

I will mention no names, but my candidate is 6 feet 2 inches tall, Celtic parentage, weighs 180 pounds, and was a member of a championship high school grid team. He has sufficient regents units and his four-year average of scholastic marks was 76. He is ambitious and eager to make something of himself and comes of poor and honest parents. He is loyal and conscientious and will give his best. He is not looking for a salary but merely an education. He is not averse to travelling.

Then, too, I have in line a fine Lithuanian, but in the same circumstances, 6 feet tall and weighing 175 pounds, an end on another championship school eleven, a fast, rangy, fearless chap who is eager to hire out to some reputable school of good standing in the scholastic and intellectual world. He also is willing to work his way through, waiting on table or doing odd jobs, provided he has access to classrooms and libraries and is given a chance to win a degree or a profession.

Not Running an Agency.

I am not running an agency for football players, but it so happened that both of these cases came to my notice about the same time, and I was amused to find how utterly unsophisticated I am in such matters and I am axious to correct this.

I will consider all offers written to me by coaches or colleges as strictly confidential, and will forward them to the young men in question. It also seems to me an excellent opportunity for some altruistic alumnus to present his school with a couple of good football players.

Braves vs. Red Sox.

Boston, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—The Boston Braves and Boston Red Sox, Hub big league teams, have agreed to play their second "unemployment relief" game on August 31, Mayor Mansfield announced today. In the first game, last September, the Braves defeated the Sox, 2 to 1.

The Hub teams also meet in a preseason "city championship" series annually.

Turner Sticks To Bortnick As Referee

Garibaldi Is Warned to Control Self; Szabo Smooth Worker.

ADVANCE stories anent the impending wrestling match between Gino Garibaldi and Sandor Szabo at Griffith Stadium Thursday have been so bloodcurdling in their predictions that even Promoter Joe Turner believes them—which is quite a compliment to Washington's wrestling writers.

After having read that it was Garibaldi who scrambled Szabo's right ear, thus changing his appearance from a matinee idol to a wrestler, and that the Hungarian youth has picked out Thursday's bout to seek revenge, and realizing that Garibaldi has a temper and may retaliate if Szabo starts anything, Turner last night wired a wire to the Italian.

Turner, who evidently fears a murder—or perhaps two of them—told Garibaldi that his demand for a referee other than Bennah Bortnick was denied and that, if the Italian shows any fits of temper and gets too rough, his name will be scratched off Washington's list of welcomed snarlsters.

Garibaldi, a rough and rugged fellow, has caused lots of trouble here in the past. Not only has he torn at least a dozen of Bortnick's shirts, and never paid for any of them, but once he hurled the rolypoly arbiter out of the ring headfirst. The Italian also has handled some of his opponents rougher than even the wrestling rules permit, and once was barred here for three months by Promoter Turner for half-killing Frank Judson.

So Garibaldi has been warned and, if he starts murdering Szabo, his many admirers here will have to go to Baltimore or Richmond to see him work for the next few months.

"I don't wanta handcuff Gino or try to introduce pink tea tactics to wrestling here," said Turner, "but we got laws here and the cops are liable to crack down on us if the boys get too rough and seriously hurt each other. I didn't warn Szabo," the promoter added, "because he is a smooth worker, has never been disqualified, and, if he is out to punish Garibaldi, I am sure that he will do it in a legitimate wrestling manner."

Tennis Semifinal Gained by Latona

Defending Capital City League Champ Wins.

Tony Latona, defending champion, gained the semifinal round of the annual Capital League tennis tournament yesterday by eliminating John Cullen, 6—2, 6—1, to get one jump ahead of the field. Happy Jacob gained the quarter-finals, winning from Trigg by default. The remaining quarter-final tests are slated for today, with Garber facing Hy Ritzenberg, seeded No. 2; Deck, No. 4, meeting Jacob and Shankin, No. 3, playing Buchanan, at 5 o'clock.

In the doubles, Deck and Ritzenberg, seeded second, defeated Hoffecker and Dreschsler, 6—4, 7—5, in the first round, and Goubeau and Stocklinski eliminated Buchanan and Heiskell, 7—5, 6—3. Erans and Bradley play Cullen and Post in a first-round match today at 5 o'clock and at 5:45 Shenkin and Latona, seeded first, play Staubley and Trigg.

Boxing Solons Delay Furr Decision

Ruling to Be Made After Hearing Called for Next Monday.

LEFT groggy and hanging on the ropes by some two hours of conflicting testimony, the Boxing Commission yesterday deferred until next Monday decision on the strange case of Phil Furr, the District's welterweight champion, who walked out of the fight against Bob Wilson at the Riding and Hunt Club last night. The commission is withholding the ultimate decision pending the introduction of more conflicting testimony, which is expected to be forthcoming from the commission doctor who examined Furr last Wednesday and pronounced him in condition to go through with the bout against Wilson, for which he had been signed by his manager, Harry Groves.

At the end of the commission's hearing, Groves, who believes the entire muddle was perpetrated by some one seeking to obtain Furr's contract, made the supreme gesture by offering to return the papers on Fadeaway Philbert without receiving one cent in return.

"You tell your client I'll give him back his contract," Groves told Lawyer Martin J. McNamara, who represented Furr before the Commission, "and then if he still wants to be a fighter he can come back to me without a contract and I'll make a fighter of him."

Lawyer, Doctor Testify.

McNamara stated that his client was not in physical condition to fight Wilson last night as scheduled and that his right wrist was so painfully injured that he could not train properly. He stated that Dr. DeMayo had treated Furr for the injury and advised him against doing any hitting with his right for several weeks.

Dr. DeMayo testified that Furr had come to him for one treatment, that he had X-rayed the injured wrist, baked it and advised Furr to return for further treatment, which Furr neglected to do. His testimony tended to prove that Furr was not in shape to fight Wilson at the time the bout was scheduled.

May Bear Dr. McNitt.

Just who will be summoned before the boxing solons next Monday has not yet been definitely decided, but Chairman VanDoren told the press following the hearing that Dr. H. J. Russell McNitt, another commission doctor who examined Furr last Wednesday before the commission ordered him to go through with the fight, would be called in.

Groves was not called upon to testify, but told reporters that he believed Furr was in condition for the fight, pointing out that he fought and knocked out Ray Bowen for the District welterweight championship, after receiving the wrist injury in the Petrolle bout which, it is claimed, makes it impossible for him to train or box.

Benson Too Thin—Needs More Heft, Says Griff

Clark Griffith thinks that Elder Al Benson, bewhiskered rookie pitching recruit, may develop into a winning hurler with additional weight. Griff estimated Benson to be 15 or 20 pounds under weight from barnstorming through the country with the House of David nine, and is now too lean to show at his best advantage.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

A FISHING party composed of members of the Department of Highways were week-end guests of Lieut. Comdr. W. H. Caldwell at Colonial Beach, Va. W. B. Champion, room 527, District Building, reporting for the party says:

"The party made a very successful trip last Saturday morning aboard the Betty May, Capt. Hopkins commanding. The catch was made between the hours of 4:30 and 8 a. m., and consisted of 200 hardhead, 26 trout (good size), 15 Norfolk spots, two taylors and two small bluefish. This was one of the best catches of the 'finny tribe' brought in to this resort this season. Peeler crabs and bloodworms were used for bait.

"Of the Department of Highways, Principal Inspectors Morris Gainey, Joseph Perry, Julian Whitestone and Chief Inspector William B. Champion were present. Mr. Robert P. Whitestone, of Alexandria, Va., was also a member of the party and, incidentally, failed to land the largest trout hooked."

Make Large Haul.

T. R. Pickett, of the Department of Justice, sends the following good report: "Mr. Charles B. Veiner, special assistant to the Attorney General, took a party of eight on a fishing trip Saturday evening. A wonderful time was had by all.

"The party included A. Veiner, William Foster, Jack Cochrane, Miss Marie Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Niccum and Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Pickett. The fish caught were all hardheads and large ones; 136 were caught and weighed over 340 pounds, an average of 2½ pounds per fish.

"Mr. Pickett took first prize for catching the largest number of fish. Miss Thomas running a close second. Mr. Cochrane took first prize for catching the largest fish.

"The fishing grounds were The Gooses; the boat was obtained through Capt. Sam Dixon at Plum Point and was piloted by a very able man, Capt. Anthony Parks."

A report from Capt. Brady R. McKay, St. Jeromes Creek, Md., written last Friday, says: "Thursday, August 16, R. B. Maxwell, W. E. Mundy and three others, all from Washington, caught 55 bluefish trolling near Holland Island. They were fishing with me, and the fish would average about 2 pounds each. (Holland Island, east of the Deep Hole.—J. M.)

Weigh 6 Pounds.

"A party from Washington trolling at Southwest Middles Tuesday with Capt. R. H. Lumpkins landed 22 blues. Only three of them would weigh about 4 pounds; the rest were from 6 to 8 pounds, and one weighed 9 pounds. The catch weighed 145 pounds, an average of over 6½ pounds each.

"A party from Washington trolling with Capt. Gilbert McKay made a big catch of blues Thursday. Most all of the boats have made nice catches. Sometimes they are very large, sometimes small. Everybody is busy."

Mrs. Catherine Gass, 770 Park road, fished last Monday with her son, Lawrence, a short distance out from Colonial Beach, Va. They were in a rowboat; the outboard motor went bad, and Lawrence was rowing back to shore. Nothing else to do, Mrs. Gass cast her line overboard and—zooey! She reeled in a 16-pound rockfish.

Report Verified.

The report of this catch was made by Lillian Wysong, 1311 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. She and a number of friends were visiting the beach at the time and saw the fish at the pier.

W. N. Barret, 803 Decatur street, accompanied by W. E. Tilf, Ed Brown and M. Brown, visited the lower Chesapeake the latter part of the week and turned up at Frank Del Vecchio's sports store, 1212 Eleventh street southeast, Saturday with two bonitos, 12½-pounder and a 20-pounder. They were caught still-fishing near York Spit Light, between Reedsville and Norfolk. The 20-pounder was 41 inches long.

Three-Way Tie In League at Alexandria

Police Blank Columbias, 4-0, Putting Post Nine in Second-Half Race.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Police ball tossers jumped into a three-way tie with the Columbia Firemen and The Washington Post nines for the championship of the second half of the Alexandria Commercial League here today by trimming the fire-fighters, 4 to 0, before the largest crowd of the season.

Shout Taylor held Columbia in submission during the early innings, but was relieved by Rip Hicks, who rounded out Taylor's whitewash performance. The hitting of Sarge Simms, well-known patrolman, was instrumetnal in the Police triumph.

The winning rallies occurred in the fifth frame, when the Cops pushed across two runs, and in the next inning when they counted twice more. A double by Simms in the fifth and his single in the sixth produced the winning tallies.

Vance Knocked Out.

Lefty Vance, the Firemen's ace moundsman, lacked control and was knocked out of the box in the fifth to be replaced by McMenniman.

The managers of the three deadlocked teams are to meet at the Columbia Firehouse tomorrow night at 7:30 to discuss the play-off for the second-half title.

Kann's Team Booked.

Manager John Travers, of the Alexandria Eagles, forfeited his chance of playing the Celtics today by refusing the terms of the Celtic manager, Beach. Unless an agreement is reached later in the week, the teams will not meet again this season.

After the run-in with the Eagles management, the Celtic mentor got busy immediately and booked the Kann's nine, winner of 21 out of 22 games. The game will take place at Baggett's Stadium Sunday at 3 p. m.

The Celtics are requested to report to Coach Kidwell at Baggett's Thursday and Friday afternoons at 5:15 for practice sessions.

Post Team Practices.

The Washington Post team is to work out at Baggett's tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 p. m. A heavy batting drill is the necessary tonic that has been prescribed for The Post hitters to make the team a contender for the city commercial title.

The following games are listed in the Northern Virginia League this week:

The Post Sandlotter

THE 1934 All-Star teams of the Georgetown Church League of The Post Association, picked by the four managers of the teams composing the league, the league umpire, and the official scorer finds the champion Grace outfit gaining the lion's share of the honors with six of its players on the first team. The line-up is: Boteler (Grace) first base; Pizza (Grace), second base; Wanley (West Washington), shortstop; Bowman (West Washington), catcher; Omera (Grace), and Shiery (Metropolitan), pitchers. In view of their outstanding performances and consistent play throughout the season, Omera, oBteler and Wanley were unanimous choices.

The second team also shapes up as a strong aggregation with Timmons (West Washington), first base; Linger (West Washington), second base; Gillard (Grace), shortstop; Burgess (Mount Vernon), third base; Felner (West Washington), left field; Omohundro (Metropolitan), center field; R. Fletcher (Mount Vernon), right field; Cozzens (Grace), catcher; Bean (West Washington and G. Fletcher (Mount Vernon) pitchers.

In today's East Washington League game, the league-leading Renroc A. C. will hook up with the Capital Power Plant Club at 5:15 o'clock. After losing their first league game, the Renrocs have forged to the front by virtue of a powerful batting attack which bodes no good for the Power Plant hurlers. Al Farrell will toe the mound for the Renrocs.

The Thirteenth District Democratic Club of the Southwestern County League, of Baltimore, is desirous of arranging games with unlimited teams of Washington and vicinity on a home-and-home basis, preferably with a double-header here and another one in the Monumental City. Teams interested should get in touch with Martin Ruppert at 215 Louden avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Just when the Kenilworth A. C. of the District Independent League of The Post Association seemed to be getting into stride as attested by its victory Sunday over the league-leading Mount Rainier Grays, the injury jinx took some of the joy out of the victory. Dave Gibson, Kenilworth shortstop, probably will be lost to the team for the rest of the season due to injuries received in an auto accident. As Dave was playing bang-up ball afield and at bat, his absence will be keenly felt.

Gichner Iron Works, runners-up in the Industrial League, are casting about for a game to be played Thursday on the West Ellipse. Gichners would prefer to play some team in the National Capital League, preferably Sanicos. Manager Gichner can be reached tonight at Wisconsin 3390 between 6 and 7 o'clock.

The following games are on the schedule of the Columbian Insect League for today: Rock Creek Ramblers vs. Takoma Playground, 1 o'clock; Buddy Myers vs. Capitol A. C., 11 o'clock. Both games will be played on the South Ellipse.

E. M. Lawrence, president of the District Independent League, has announced that there will be a meeting next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in The Post Sports Department to settle the protest that has been filed by the Mount Rainier Grays in regard to their game with the Kenilworth A. C. last Sunday. Managers of the teams in question, the umpire of the game, and Mr. Long, member of the board, are requested to be present.

Marooned, 8-1, Detroit Winner

Mata Hari, Fractious at Post, Finishes Third.

Detroit, Aug. 20 (AP).—They said it was a fluke when Marooned and Rock X beat out Mata Hari, Charles T. Fisher's fleet filly, last week, but they did it again today, easier than before, at the Detroit Fair Grounds.

Probably Mata Hari, a contender in the Kentucky Derby and other important stakes this season, wore herself out at the post. Anyway, she never threatened seriously after the first quarter mile and finished two and a half lengths back of Rock X in third place.

Marooned, from the Le Mar Stock Farm, was off like a shot, led all the way and finished two and a half lengths in front of Rock X, going away. Time for the six-furlong event, run as the $1,000 Junior League Handicap, was 1:11 2-5. Rock X took second place away from Mata Hari at the half, but couldn't overtake the flying Marooned.

Backers of the winner in the mutuels were rewarded with $17.20 for $2. Rock X paid $4.60 to place, while Mata Hari, an odds-on favorite, paid only $2.20 to show.

Long-shot prices predominated throughout the card. Chinese Indian paid $17.20 in winning the first race. Straight tickets on Shawnee, in the second race, were worth $25 and Memphis Lass repaid her backers with $13.40 in the third event. Attraction and The Point won the fourth and fifth events, paying $8 and $7, respectively.

White Oaks Winner.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The White Oaks beat the Warsaw Club nine, 5 to 3, behind the pitching of Purks, who allowed the visitors only four hits, while his teammates were getting ten. Finney, White Oak right field, hit a homer in the fifth inning.

25 District Golfers Among 741 Seeking to Qualify Today for U. S. Amateur

Vinson Tops Final Drill With 74

Matches Cards of Reigel and Howell; Nee Turns In 75.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

FIVE FARMS COURSE, Baltimore, Md., Aug. 20.—Gene Vinson, of the Manor Club, Washington; Bobby Reigel, Middle Atlantic champion, and Billy Howell, former Walker Cup star, the latter two from Richmond, showed the way with 18-hole scores of 74 each, as the aspirants for 14 qualifying places in the National Amateur section golf trials put in their final practice licks today for tomorrow's 36-hole test.

Vinson, former Mississippi State Open and amateur titleholder, set a burning pace with a 33 on the back nine after negotiating the outgoing side in 41. His card for the incoming side, which included three birdies, was a nifty piece of shotmaking and proved the best nine-hole score reported since the golfers embarked on their tune-up rounds last Friday.

Both Howell and Reigel shot 38's on the outgoing nine, but neither waxed enthusiastic over his scoring.

Nee Shoots 75.

Maury Nee, Columbia Country Club golfing star, did a 75 to make the score reported by Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale, the lanky lad who carried Ross Somerville, 1932 National Amateur champion, to the twenty-first hole before losing in the second round last year. Algie S. Gardiner, jr., also of Canada, scored a 79. Dave Ewell, jr., and Tommy Howell, both of Richmond, shot 77's. Talbot Speer, of the host club, had 76, and sorry to report there are no more practice scores.

The majority of the 25 District golfers who are entered in the event spent the day hitting two and three balls on every hole, and familiarizing themselves with the greens, which, believe you me, are lightning fast, and are going to give the 66 golfers in the field ample cause for worry. This course is tightly trapped too, and the golfer who can steer clear of these hazards will be mighty lucky.

Billy Dettwiler, of Congressional, had 38 going out with a spectacular deuce on the 163-yard fourth. He played only six holes on the back side. Harry Pitt, of Manor, played 13 holes, but not in succession. The Moose knows the course, having won the Baltimore invitation here three times.

Lunn in Team Match.

Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase, young District amateur champion, teamed with Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, to defeat Chandler Harper and Morton McCarthy, of Virginia Beach, Va., 3 and 2, in a special match. The scoring was nothing to brag about. Harper, winner of the medal in the sectional trials for the past two years, admits he'll have a tough time qualifying, despite his two 73's on Sunday.

The field was reduced to 66 tonight with the withdrawal of Harry A. Parr 3d, veteran Host Club golfer, who is ill.

Of the Washington contingent, Roger Peacock, Harry Pitt, Nee, Dett wiler, Martin McCarthy, Miller Stevinson and Gene Vinson, are strongly favored to qualify. Today the experts were agreed that 156 would qualify.

The course measures 6,630 yards, and the boys will shoot from the back tees. Par follows:

Out..... 4 4 4 3 4 5 4 4 3—35
In..... 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 3 4—35—70

741 Seeking Places.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—On 23 courses in this country and one in Honolulu, 741 golfers will try tomorrow to qualify for the all match play National amateur golf championship, which will open at the Country Club of Brookline, Mass., September 10.

Thirteen players, headed by the defending champion, George Dunlap, are exempt from the sectional qualifying round, 36 holes of medal play, and the remaining 167 places will be filled by tomorrow's test. The field at Brookline has been limited to 180 players.

In addition to Dunlap, ten other former champions were granted exemption—Chandler Egan, Bob Gardner, Francis Ouimet, Chick Evans, Davy Herron, Jesse Guilford, Jess Sweetser, Max Marston, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston and Ross Somerville, only Canadian in history to win the title. So, too, were Lawson Little, present British amateur king, and Rex Hartley, former British Walker Cup player.

The Deans

Discussion often reverted to the question as to why Dizzy Dean didn't return to the Cardinal office the morning following his suspension by Frisch. Dizzy declared he did go there.

Dizzy's sore arm was an uppermost subject in the cross-fire of questioning, and it was brought out that Dizzy said at New York that he would develop a sore arm whenever he needed it.

So incensed were the participants in the hearing at one time the short and ugly word blazed through the closed door.

Landis said he would release a resume of the proceedings when he returned to Chicago.

Jewelers Would Play.

'His Boys' Thrill Detroit Owner

Green Battles Powell at Stadium

Return Match Is Added to Bass-Sarron Card; Hogan vs. Matan.

THE Benny Bass-Pete Sarron 10-round at Griffith Stadium next Monday, which already looms as the most promising bout on the local horizon since the legalization of boxing, was given further support yesterday when it was announced that Joe Green had been signed for a return match with Pete Powell in a preliminary six.

Victorious in 16 out 18 starts since deserting the amateur ranks, Green's only setbacks have occurred at the hands of Powell, who held him to a draw in Norfolk and decisioned him on Washington's first legal outdoor fight card.

Pete Sarron turned on the steam in his workouts at the Green Oaks Tavern yesterday and is prepared to gallop down the stretch in a furious blast of prefight fighting. Aiming for the shot at Frankie Klick, which has been promised the winner of the next Monday engagement, the colorful Birmingham bruiser has accumulated a varied assortment of the best sparring partners to work with.

Bass is reported plugging steadily away in Philadelphia, determined to achieve top condition for the fight and at the same time make the requisite weight of 129 pounds to save a forfeit he has posted. According to grapevine reports from the Philadelphia Fish's gymnasium, Bass is lashing out with his knockout right in a manner boding ill for Sarron, who never before has faced such a terrific puncher.

Eddie Hogan, Billy Duffy's newest heavyweight sensation, will oppose Chester Matan, of New York, in an eight-round semifinal. An additional six-rounder and an opening four are in the making.

Warrenton Nine Divides.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Wanderers, local ball club, faced two teams on their home diamond yesterday and were shut out, 2 to 0, after seven hard-fought innings by East End, also of Warrenton, in the first game, but took the second from the Fire Department team of Vienna, Va. Vienna made their three tallies in an eighth-inning rally, but during the rest of the game Childs, pitching for the Wanderers, blanked them and struck out nine men.

Gallico

Offers to Employers Two Fine Athletes Seeking College Educations.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—A tall, stalwart young man, wearing a lettered sweater, and accompanied by his father, came in to see me the other afternoon on a curious mission. The young man had just graduated from high school and was looking for a college to go to. For a wealthy man there is a wide choice in this matter, but not for those whose financial situation will not permit them to buy an education.

The young man was very frank and struck me as a fine young Irish-American. He would like to be hired by some nice college to play football for them. He can play end and half back, pitch baseball, play basket ball and run the 440.

Wants Education As Pay.

In return for his service, he wishes nothing but an education, the opportunity to expose himself to some books and acquire a profession. He is willing to work his way through if he can get a scholarship to pay his tuition. He asked for some assistance and I confess that I was at a loss to know how to go out and get hired by a college. The only thing I could think of doing was to advertise.

I am a little behind the times in such matters and do not even know whether colleges are hiring football players any more. I know they used to in the good old golden days, but with the depression the blight hit that business too. The colleges have been trying to hire bankrolls rather than football players the last few years, and if you have ever tried to hire a bankroll for any length of time you will know how tough that is.

But I should think that with all the schools scattered around the country there should be some place where an ambitious and willing young athlete could swap touchdowns for teaching.

No Names Mentioned.

I will mention no names, but my candidate is 6 feet 2 inches tall, Celtic parentage, weighs 180 pounds, and was a member of a championship high school grid team. He has sufficient regents units and his four-year average of scholastic marks was 76. He is ambitious and eager to make something of himself and comes of poor and honest parents. He is loyal and conscientious and will give his best. He is not looking for a salary but merely an education. He is not averse to travelling.

Then, too, I have in line a fine Lithuanian, but in the same circumstances, 6 feet tall and weighing 175 pounds, an end on another championship school eleven, a fast, rangy, fearless chap who is eager to hire out to some reputable school of good standing in the scholastic and intellectual world. He also is willing to work his way through, waiting on table or doing odd jobs, provided he has access to classrooms and libraries and is given a chance to win a degree or a profession.

Not Running an Agency.

I am not running an agency for football players, but it so happened that both of these cases came to my notice about the same time, and I was amused to find how utterly unsophisticated I am in such matters and I am axious to correct this.

I will consider all offers written to me by coaches or colleges as strictly confidential, and will forward them to the young men in question. It also seems to me an excellent opportunity for some altruistic alumnus to present his school with a couple of good football players.

Braves vs. Red Sox.

Boston, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—The Boston Braves and Boston Red Sox, Hub big league teams, have agreed to play their second "unemployment relief" game on August 31, Mayor Mansfield announced today. In the first game, last September, the Braves defeated the Sox, 2 to 1.

The Hub teams also meet in a preseason "city championship" series annually.

Turner Sticks To Bortnick As Referee

Garibaldi Is Warned to Control Self; Szabo Smooth Worker.

ADVANCE stories anent the impending wrestling match between Gino Garibaldi and Sandor Szabo at Griffith Stadium Thursday have been so blood-curdling in their predictions that even Promoter Joe Turner believes them—which is quite a compliment to Washington's wrestling writers.

After having read that it was Garibaldi who scrambled Szabo's right ear, thus changing his appearance from a matinee idol to a wrestler, and that the Hungarian youth has picked out Thursday's bout to seek revenge, and realizing that Garibaldi has a temper and may retaliate if Szabo starts anything, Turner last night wired a wire to the Italian.

Turner, who evidently fears a murder—or perhaps two of them—told Garibaldi that his demand for a referee other than Bennah Bortnick was denied and that, if the Italian shows any fits of temper and gets too rough, his name will be scratched off Washington's list of welcomed snarlsters.

Garibaldi, a rough and rugged fellow, has caused lots of trouble here in the past. Not only has he torn at least a dozen of Bortnick's shirts, and never paid for any of them, but once he hurled the roly-poly arbiter out of the ring head-first. The Italian also has handled some of his opponents rougher than even the wrestling rules permit, and once was barred here for three months by Promoter Turner for half-killing Frank Judson.

So Garibaldi has been warned and, if he starts murdering Szabo, his many admirers here will have to go to Baltimore or Richmond to see him work for the next few months.

"I don't wanta handcuff Gino or try to introduce pink tea tactics to wrestling here," said Turner, "but we got laws here and the cops are liable to crack down on us if the boys get too rough and seriously hurt each other. I didn't warn Szabo," the promoter added, "because he is a smooth worker, has never been disqualified, and, if he is out to punish Garibaldi, I am sure that he will do it in a legitimate wrestling manner."

Tennis Semifinal Gained by Latona

Defending Capital City League Champ Wins.

Tony Latona, defending champion, gained the semifinal round of the annual Capital League tennis tournament yesterday by eliminating John Cullen, 6—2, 6—1, to get one jump ahead of the field. Happy Jacob gained the quarter-finals, winning from Trigg by default. The remaining quarter-final tests are slated for today, with Garber facing Hy Ritzenberg, seeded No. 2; Deck, No. 4, meeting Jacob and Shankin, No. 3, playing Buchanan, at 5 o'clock.

In the doubles, Deck and Ritzenberg, seeded second, defeated Hoffecker and Dreschsler, 6—4, 7—5, in the first round, and Goubeau and Stocklinski eliminated Buchanan and Heiskell, 7—5, 6—3. Erans and Bradley play Cullen and Post in a first-round match today at 5 o'clock and at 5:45 Shenkin and Latona, seeded first, play Staubley and Trigg.

Boxing Solons Delay Furr Decision

Ruling to Be Made After Hearing Called for Next Monday.

LEFT groggy and hanging on the ropes by some two hours of conflicting testimony, the Boxing Commission yesterday deferred until next Monday decision on the strange case of Phil Furr, the District's welterweight champion, who walked out of the fight against Bob Wilson at the Riding and Hunt Club last night. The commission is withholding the ultimate decision pending the introduction of more conflicting testimony, which is expected to be forthcoming from the commission doctor who examined Furr last Wednesday and pronounced him in condition to go through with the bout against Wilson, for which he had been signed by his manager, Harry Groves.

At the end of the commission's hearing, Groves, who believes the entire muddle was perpetrated by some one seeking to obtain Furr's contract, made the supreme gesture by offering to return the papers on Fadeaway Philbert without receiving one cent in return.

"You tell your client I'll give him back his contract," Groves told Lawyer Martin J. McNamara, who represented Furr before the Commission, "and then if he still wants to be a fighter he can come back to me without a contract and I'll make a fighter of him."

Lawyer, Doctor Testify.

McNamara stated that his client was not in physical condition to fight Wilson last night as scheduled and that his right wrist was so painfully injured that he could not train properly. He stated that Dr. DeMayo had treated Furr for the injury and advised him against doing any hitting with his right for several weeks.

Dr. DeMayo testified that Furr had come to him for one treatment, that he had X-rayed the injured wrist, baked it and advised Furr to return for further treatment, which Furr neglected to do. His testimony tended to prove that Furr was not in shape to fight Wilson at the time the bout was scheduled.

May Bear Dr. McNitt.

Just who will be summoned before the boxing solons next Monday has not yet been definitely decided, but Chairman VanDoren told the press following the hearing that Dr. H. J. Russell McNitt, another commission doctor who examined Furr last Wednesday before the commission ordered him to go through with the fight, would be called in.

Groves was not called upon to testify, but told reporters that he believed Furr was in condition for the fight, pointing out that he fought and knocked out Ray Bowen for the District welterweight championship, after receiving the wrist injury in the Petrolle bout which, it is claimed, makes it impossible for him to train or box.

Benson Too Thin—Needs More Heft, Says Griff

Clark Griffith thinks that Elder Al Benson, bewhiskered rookie pitching recruit, may develop into a winning hurler with additional weight. Griff estimated Benson to be 15 or 20 pounds under weight from barnstorming through the country with the House of David nine, and is now too lean to show at his best advantage.

Three-Way Tie In League at Alexandria

Police Blank Columbias, 4-0, Putting Post Nine in Second-Half Race.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The Police ball tossers jumped into a three-way tie with the Columbia Firemen and The Washington Post nines for the championship of the second half of the Alexandria Commercial League here today by trimming the fire-fighters, 4 to 0, before the largest crowd of the season.

Shout Taylor held Columbia in submission during the early innings, but was relieved by Rip Hicks, who rounded out Taylor's whitewash performance. The hitting of Sarge Simms, well-known patrolman, was instrumetnal in the Police triumph.

The winning rallies occurred in the fifth frame, when the Cops pushed across two runs, and in the next inning when they counted twice more. A double by Simms in the fifth and his single in the sixth produced the winning tallies.

Vance Knocked Out.

Lefty Vance, the Firemen's ace moundsman, lacked control and was knocked out of the box in the fifth to be replaced by McMenniman.

The managers of the three deadlocked teams are to meet at the Columbia Firehouse tomorrow night at 7:30 to discuss the play-off for the second-half title.

Kann's Team Booked.

Manager John Travers, of the Alexandria Eagles, forfeited his chance of playing the Celtics today by refusing the terms of the Celtic manager, Beach. Unless an agreement is reached later in the week, the teams will not meet again this season.

After the run-in with the Eagles management, the Celtic mentor got busy immediately and booked the Kann's nine, winner of 21 out of 22 games. The game will take place at Baggett's Stadium Sunday at 3 p. m.

The Celtics are requested to report to Coach Kidwell at Baggett's Thursday and Friday afternoons at 5:15 for practice sessions.

Post Team Practices.

The Washington Post team is to work out at Baggett's tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 p. m. A heavy batting drill is the necessary tonic that has been prescribed for The Post hitters to make the team a contender for the city commercial title.

The following games are listed in the Northern Virginia League this week:

By Jean Monk.

A FISHING party composed of members of the Department of Highways were week-end guests of Lieut. Comdr. W. H. Caldwell at Colonial Beach, Va. W. B. Champion, room 527, District Building, reporting for the party says:

"The party made a very successful trip last Saturday morning aboard the Betty May, Capt. Hopkins commanding. The catch was made between the hours of 4:30 and 8 a. m., and consisted of 200 hardhead, 26 trout (good size), 15 Norfolk spots, two taylors and two small bluefish. This was one of the best catches of the 'finny tribe' brought in to this resort this season. Peeler crabs and bloodworms were used for bait.

"Of the Department of Highways, Principal Inspectors Morris Gainey, Joseph Perry, Julian Whitestone and Chief Inspector William B. Champion were present. Mr. Robert P. Whitestone, of Alexandria, Va., was also a member of the party and, incidentally, failed to land the largest trout hooked."

Make Large Haul.

T. R. Pickett, of the Department of Justice, sends the following good report: "Mr. Charles B. Veiner, special assistant to the Attorney General, took a party of eight on a fishing trip Saturday evening. A wonderful time was had by all.

"The party included A. Veiner, William Foster, Jack Cochrane, Miss Marie Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Niccum and Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Pickett. The fish caught were all hardheads and large ones; 136 were caught and weighed over 340 pounds, an average of 2½ pounds per fish.

"Mr. Pickett took first prize for catching the largest number of fish. Miss Thomas running a close second. Mr. Cochrane took first prize for catching the largest fish.

"The fishing grounds were The Gooses; the boat was obtained through Capt. Sam Dixon at Plum Point and was piloted by a very able man, Capt. Anthony Parks."

A report from Capt. Brady R. McKay, St. Jeromes Creek, Md., written last Friday, says: "Thursday, August 16, R. B. Maxwell, W. E. Mundy and three others, all from Washington, caught 55 bluefish trolling near Holland Island. They were fishing with me, and the fish would average about 2 pounds each. (Holland Island, east of the Deep Hole.—J. M.)

Weigh 6 Pounds.

"A party from Washington trolling at Southwest Middles Tuesday with Capt. R. H. Lumpkins landed 22 blues. Only three of them would weigh about 4 pounds; the rest were from 6 to 8 pounds, and one weighed 9 pounds. The catch weighed 145 pounds, an average of over 6½ pounds each.

"A party from Washington trolling with Capt. Gilbert McKay made a big catch of blues Thursday. Most all of the boats have made nice catches. Sometimes they are very large, sometimes small. Everybody is busy."

Mrs. Catherine Gass, 770 Park road, fished last Monday with her son, Lawrence, a short distance out from Colonial Beach, Va. They were in a rowboat; the outboard motor went bad, and Lawrence was rowing back to shore. Nothing else to do, Mrs. Gass cast her line overboard and—zooey! She reeled in a 16-pound rockfish.

Report Verified.

The report of this catch was made by Lillian Wysong, 1311 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. She and a number of friends were visiting the beach at the time and saw the fish at the pier.

W. N. Barret, 803 Decatur street, accompanied by W. E. Tilf, Ed Brown and M. Brown, visited the lower Chesapeake the latter part of the week and turned up at Frank Del Vecchio's sports store, 1212 Eleventh street southeast, Saturday with two bonitos, 12½-pounder and a 20-pounder. They were caught still-fishing near York Spit Light, between Reedsville and Norfolk. The 20-pounder was 41 inches long.

The Post Sandlotter

THE 1934 All-Star teams of the Georgetown Church League of The Post Association, picked by the four managers of the teams composing the league, the league umpire, and the official scorer finds the champion Grace outfit gaining the lion's share of the honors with six of its players on the first team. The line-up is: Boteler (Grace) first base; Pizza (Grace), second base; Wanley (West Washington), shortstop; Bowman (West Washington), catcher; Omera (Grace), and Shiery (Metropolitan), pitchers. In view of their outstanding performances and consistent play throughout the season, Omera, oBteler and Wanley were unanimous choices.

The second team also shapes up as a strong aggregation with Timmons (West Washington), first base; Linger (West Washington), second base; Gillard (Grace), shortstop; Burgess (Mount Vernon), third base; Felner (West Washington), left field; Omohundro (Metropolitan), center field; R. Fletcher (Mount Vernon), right field; Cozzens (Grace), catcher; Bean (West Washington and G. Fletcher (Mount Vernon) pitchers.

In today's East Washington League game, the league-leading Renroc A. C. will hook up with the Capital Power Plant Club at 5:15 o'clock. After losing their first league game, the Renrocs have forged to the front by virtue of a powerful batting attack which bodes no good for the Power Plant hurlers. Al Farrell will toe the mound for the Renrocs.

The Thirteenth District Democratic Club of the Southwestern County League, of Baltimore, is desirous of arranging games with unlimited teams of Washington and vicinity on a home-and-home basis, preferably with a double-header here and another one in the Monumental City. Teams interested should get in touch with Martin Ruppert at 215 Louden avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Just when the Kenilworth A. C. of the District Independent League of The Post Association seemed to be getting into stride as attested by its victory Sunday over the league-leading Mount Rainier Grays, the injury jinx took some of the joy out of the victory. Dave Gibson, Kenilworth shortstop, probably will be lost to the team for the rest of the season due to injuries received in an auto accident. As Dave was playing bang-up ball afield and at bat, his absence will be keenly felt.

Gichner Iron Works, runners-up in the Industrial League, are casting about for a game to be played Thursday on the West Ellipse. Gichners would prefer to play some team in the National Capital League, preferably Sanicos. Manager Gichner can be reached tonight at Wisconsin 3390 between 6 and 7 o'clock.

The following games are on the schedule of the Columbian Insect League for today: Rock Creek Ramblers vs. Takoma Playground, 1 o'clock; Buddy Myers vs. Capitol A. C., 11 o'clock. Both games will be played on the South Ellipse.

E. M. Lawrence, president of the District Independent League, has announced that there will be a meeting next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in The Post Sports Department to settle the protest that has been filed by the Mount Rainier Grays in regard to their game with the Kenilworth A. C. last Sunday. Managers of the teams in question, the umpire of the game, and Mr. Long, member of the board, are requested to be present.

Warrenton Springs Bows to Flint Hill, 13-9

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.). The Springs, Warrenton nine, bowed to the Flint Hill team, 13 to 9, in a return engagement yesterday that was marked by heavy slugging on both sides. C. Hunsberger, the Springs' catcher, was the big gun for the fray, connecting every time in five trips to the plate.

Both teams used only one pitcher throughout, Parr for the Springs and Bruce, Flint Hill hurler, taking all the punishment.

Mata Hari, Fractious at Post, Finishes Third.

Detroit, Aug. 20 (AP).—They said it was a fluke when Marooned and Rock X beat out Mata Hari, Charles T. Fisher's fleet filly, last week, but they did it again today, easier than before, at the Detroit Fair Grounds.

Probably Mata Hari, a contender in the Kentucky Derby and other important stakes this season, wore herself out at the post. Anyway, she never threatened seriously after the first quarter mile and finished two and a half lengths back of Rock X in third place.

Marooned, from the Le Mar Stock Farm, was off like a shot, led all the way and finished two and a half lengths in front of Rock X, going away. Time for the six-furlong event, run as the $1,000 Junior League Handicap, was 1:11 2-5. Rock X took second place away from Mata Hari at the half, but couldn't overtake the flying Marooned.

Backers of the winner in the mutuels were rewarded with $17.20 for $2. Rock X paid $4.60 to place, while Mata Hari, an odds-on favorite, paid only $2.20 to show.

Long-shot prices predominated throughout the card. Chinese Indian paid $17.20 in winning the first race. Straight tickets on Shawnee, in the second race, were worth $25 and Memphis Lass repaid her backers with $13.40 in the third event. Attraction and The Point won the fourth and fifth events, paying $8 and $7, respectively.

White Oaks Winner.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—The White Oaks beat the Warsaw Club nine, 5 to 3, behind the pitching of Purks, who allowed the visitors only four hits, while his teammates were getting ten. Finney, White Oak right field, hit a homer in the fifth inning.

Departmental Play-Off Opener to G. P. O.

Agriculture Loses 8-5 Contest

Investigation Protests Reversed Ruling in Favor of Aggies.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE defeated Agriculture, 8-5, in the first game of their series for the Departmental League championship yesterday, while Bureau of Investigation sought to have a ruling of President Walter Shomo, who paved the way for Agriculture to battle for the crown by awarding it the first-half honors, set aside.

Investigation, claiming that it won the first-half title when it defeated Agriculture in a play-off after both teams tied for the flag with nine victories and three defeats each, contends that Shomo erred in his decision bestowing the crown upon the Aggies.

The Sleuths won nine games and lost three in the first half, while Agriculture won nine, lost two and tied one. The Aggies subsequently played off their tie with Navy Yard's team and lost. Later they played Investigation for the title and right to meet the second-half champion in a play-off for the league championship, and again lost.

President Reverses Ruling.

Shomo, who sanctioned Agriculture's play-off of its tie game with Navy Yard, later reversed himself after conferring with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, basing his decision on an American League ruling which precludes the necessity of replaying tie games. There is nothing in the Departmetnal League regulations covering the situation.

Investigation, which was not notified of Shomo's action until late yesterday afternoon, has announced that it will carry its case to the board of arbitration of The Washington Post Baseball Association, which has jurisdiction in such matters, as the league is affiliated with the association.

The winner of the league championship will participate in the city-wide championship series sponsored by The Post Association.

Hunt Club Tries Out New Type of Glove Devised to Make Blows More Potent

Bulk of Padding Moved From Over Knuckles to Around Wrists.

THE face lifting in the boxing bouts at the Riding and Hunt Club last night was done with a type of boxing glove, designed and made especially to allow the leather pushers to inflict the greatest amount of damage to each others' features while still conforming to the law requiring the use of mauling mittens weighing not less than 8 ounces.

In the new glove there are but 5 ounces of weight in that portion that covers the hand, and the other requisite 3 ounces are contained in heavy padding which extends up the wrist. In no State is the use of gloves weighing less than 5 ounces generally countenanced and the glove being christened at the Hunt club tonight is expected to remove objections being voiced against the heavier mittens. It will not, however, remove the objections voiced against the 8-ounce gloves on the grounds that fighters in the smaller-weight classes become arm-weary swinging gloves of that size, which tends to slow the action.

Use of the 8-ounce gloves in the District is not required by order of the Boxing Commission, but is made mandatory by the act of Congress legalizing boxing in Washington. Use of lighter gloves can be made legal only by Congressional action, which many are prepared to agitate when the Nation's solons convene in January of next year.

Harrisonburg Club Climbs In Race

Culpeper's Lead Cut to One Game; Crucial Contest Sunday.

HARRISONBURG, Va., Aug. 20 (Spl.). — Harrisonburg climbed to within one game of the league-leading Culpeper club during the past week, but the fans believe the runners-up started their winning streak too late.

Culpeper has the Valley League pennant unless it runs into unexpected opposition in the three remaining games with Charlottesville and the one postponed contest with Woodstock. Harrisonburg, to be assured of even a tie, must vanquish Charlottesville next Saturday and Culpeper on Sunday.

Won Five Straight.

Harrisonburg registered its fifth straight victory yesterday when Johnny Keister gained a 3-to-1 verdict over Lefty Scrivener, of Charlottesville. During this streak the Harrisonburg pitchers have yielded their opponents only four runs. This includes a 2-to-1 triumph over Culpeper.

Culpeper protested long and loud over the calling of the game in the ninth inning because of rain. The league leaders had men on third and first when Umpire Ramey decided that it was too wet to continue. The customary 30 minutes was waited. The umpire was backed in his judgment by League President George Holtzman.

Ended Winning Streak.

This victory, registered by Keister over McIntyre, evened the season's series between the two contenders. The game here next Sunday will be the deciding one. Harrisonburg halted the Culpeper streak at 22, which, of course, included exhibition contests.

Woodstock had another disastrous week, losing to Culpeper, Charlottesville and Harrisonburg. In their last four games the Woodstock tossers have scored only three runs. With Lefty Bradley in fine form, Woodstock held Culpeper scoreless until the seventh. Then came the blow-off and before the game was over the league leaders had eight runs. Against Charlottesville, Woodstock succumbed to a seven-run inning and then held the opposition safe.

Fight Fans Give Von Reedon $289

Following an impassioned plea by Announcer James J. Lake, a collection was taken at the Riding and Hunt Club bouts last night for Charlie Von Reedon, the local featherweight who recently was operated upon for an eye ailment. When the pennies, nickles, quarters and bills (including one $5 note) were all counted, there was $289 for Von Reedon.

"Gipp was a great player and he could kick. Narguski can't. But even at that, Nagurski is a greater all-around player than Gipp was. Nagurksi could have been all-American end, tackle, guard, full or half back. Thorpe is the only man I've seen his equal."

Series Opener Captured by Acacias

THE first game of the five-game series between Center Market and Acacia, first and second half winners in the National Capital League of The Post Association, resulted in a 3-to-1 victory for Acacia.

Hopping off to a two-run lead in the first inning, the Insurance men played errorless ball behind the five-hit pitching of Joe Sullivan, former Eastern High star moundsman.

Boyd's two triples were the telling blows for Acacia. Robey led the Marketmen at the bat.

Play Again Today.

These two teams, which are playing for the right to represent their league in The Post Association series of week-day league champions, which is to begin on September 5, will meet again today on the North Ellipse diamond.

Cumberland Y. M. C. A. Water Derby Listed

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Great interest is being shown in the second annual water derby to be staged by the Central Y. M. C. A. Aquatic Club at Minke's pool, on the afternoons of August 26 and September 2. The two-day program calls for 47 events open to men and women, divided into three classes as follows: Seniors, 18 years or over; junior, 14 to 17 inclusive, and juvenile, 13 and under. In addition to the regular speed tests, there will be comedy races.

Frederick Bows To Union Bridge

Result Ties Both Teams for County League Lead; Score Is 3 to 1.

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.).—Union Bridge defeated Frederick at McCurdy Field before a large crowd, 3 to 1; Middletown downed Taneytown, 9 to 0; Thurmont took the measure of Brunswick, 15 to 10, and New Windsor set back Woodsboro, 9 to 4, in the County League. The victory places Union Bridge on even terms with Frederick for first place in the pennant race with two games more for the teams before the close of the season.

Frederick scored its lone run in the first inning on a walk and two wild heaves.

Union Bridge scored twice in the third inning on a single and four walks. The cement makers clinched the game with one more run in the eighth session.

The Middletown-Taneytown setto was featured by the fine pitching of Art Hauver who held the Carroll County team to three hits.

Thurmont Gets Early Lead.

Piling up a early lead enabled Thurmont to win from Brunswick in the railroad town. One big inning, the fifth, when five hits, a sacrifice, walk and an error, accounted for six runs, enabled New Windsor to set back Woodsboro.

The Federal Diary

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

WITHIN a day or two a familiar poster will be conspicuously tacked up in every Federal executive establishment in the country. This circular will be headed by the word Warning in big black type.

Thousands of these sheets have been printed and are being distributed by the Civil Service Commission. Their mission is to call attention to the fact that any political activity by classified employes is prohibited.

The circulars outline and interpret the law forbidding political activity, so that each employe will not jeopardize his position by any political work in the fall elections or primaries.

Dr. Curtis F. Marbut, chief of the division of soil survey, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture, will leave at the end of this month for a conference on soils at Barcelona, Spain.

After the conference he will participate in an excursion of soil specialists over the Spanish peninsula and part of north Africa. He plans later to spend a few months as advisor on soils to the Geological Survey of China. He will return to this country next spring.

THE executive committee of Lodge No. 116, American Federation of Government Employes, is unanimously opposed to the staggered pay plan. The committee believes that employes should not be discriminated against because almost all workers have payment of rent and bills arranged for the regular period.

A regular meeting of the lodge will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Agriculture Department, south building. By-laws will be presented for adoption. A social program has been arranged.

John Mansuy, jr., who, incidentally, is considered one of the city's best dancers—he has won several cups—has a remarkable record as a Government employe.

At the age of 16, Mansuy (*) was a messenger in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Dr. Clarence S. Ross, chief of the section of petrology, Geological Survey, is examining ore from Virginia titanium deposits. This element is becoming increasingly important as a paint pigment in place of white lead. The study is being made in cooperation with the Virginia Geological Survey.

After six months he was transferred to Commerce with a rating of assistant messenger. Then he became an under clerk in the Aeronautics Bureau. And now, at the age of 20, he is assistant chief of inventory, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Agriculture.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan's Courage"), or to Loew's Palace (Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in "Treasure Island"), or to Loew's Fox (stage, All-Washington Revue; screen, Robert Montgomery in "Hideout").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Postettes.

Raphael Gering (*) has started work in the Bureau of Navigation, Navy, in the position vacated by the departure of Leroy Meyer.

Mrs. Marjorie Rhodes, stenographic pool of the Division of Investigation, Justice, has returned to work after a short vacation spent at her summer cottage at Franklin Manor Beach, Md.

Miss Bernice Booke (*), has been transferred from the Geological Survey, Interior, to the General Accounting Office and assigned to the Audit Division.

Miss Otillia Braentigan, Agricultural Engineering, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Emily Leahy, Plant Industry, motored to their home at Bellville, Ill., for a vacation which will extend to Labor Day.

Miss Alice E. Gaylord, Audit Division, G. A. O., has left for her home in Douglas, Mich. Miss Gaylord was given a send-off by her associates at the office. Gifts included a toy wrecking car. Miss Gaylord is driving.

U. S. Educators Going to Chile

Will Attend the Second Inter-American Conference.

A closer union of the peoples of America by means of public education is one of the aims of the second inter-American conference on education, to be held at Santiago, Chile, September 9 to 16.

The United States and virtually all of the Latin American countries will be represented at the conference, which, though planned by the Inter-American Federation of Education, is being held under the auspices of the Chilean government.

The official delegation from the United States is made up of Dr. J. C. Wright, of the United States Office of Education, chairman; Dr. William F. Notz, dean of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service; Miss Faith Hunter Dodge, journalist and instructor in Spanish in the schools of Chicago, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, assistant dean of the School of Education, University of Minnesota.

Noted Dance Director Forecasts Increased Output of Musicalized Film Plays

Dave Gould Is Exponent of a New Film Form

Is a Native of This City; Myrt and Marge Soon; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Since the producers of motion pictures have seen fit to develop a considerable number of singing stars, and since it has been found that story value can be successfully combined with music, the public may expect a larger number of musicalized screen features from now on. The talents of such players as Bing Crosby, Jeannette MacDonald, Grace Moore, Lanny Ross, Irene Dunne, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Ruby Keeler, Lilian Harvey, John Boles, Joe Morrison and a host of others will not be sacrificed to any ill-founded prejudice merely because the first musical films were poor ones.

These are among the interesting views expressed by Dave Gould, a native Washingtonian, who has become a noted dance director for both stage and screen, at an informal luncheon spread in his honor in the executive offices of the RKO-Keith Theater by Manager Hardie Meakin yesterday afternoon at 1.

Soft-Spoken and Retiring.

Mr. Gould is a soft-spoken, retiring young man, sun-tanned to a deep bronze, whom one would never guess was the creator of the ice ballet in "Melody Cruise," or the "Carioca" in "Flying Down to Rio," to mention only two of his conspicuous achievements for the celluloids. Before he went in for pictures, he had to his credit all three of the "Little Shows" and some dozen or so other Broadway hits. The young man, obviously, knows his stuff.

Asked how long is required to "build up" such ensemble scenes as the ice ballet and "Carioca" numbers, for example, Mr. Gould surprised his listeners no end.

"The ice ballet," said he, "was rehearsed and 'shot' in three days. The 'Carioca' took eight days and the 'Continental,' which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will sing and dance in 'The Gay Divorce,' the screen version of Fred's recent stage vehicle, consumed exactly 10 days—but will be bigger than the 'Carioca.'

"This 'Continental' is in three distinct tempos and is based on the idea of kissing while dancing. It is a ballroom effect that has never before been attempted and is confidently expected to be an overnight ballroom sensation among nonprofessional dancers, just as the 'Carioca' was."

How Tunes Are Born.

When inquiry was made as to the source of the tune to which the "Carioca" was danced in "Flying Down to Rio," Mr. Gould told an interesting story that reveals how inspirational some of these tremendous Hollywood hits really are!

"Vincent Youmans was under contract to write the music for 'Flying Down to Rio,'" he explained, "but insisted that he be relieved of the job when told that the music must have the peculiar Spanish lilt of South American native rhythms. 'But I have never written any of that kind of music' he pleaded, with tears in both his eyes and his voice. I can't do it. I don't know how to begin and, if I did, I wouldn't know where to go from there.'

"So Lou Brock and I bought about 100 phonograph records of South American and Spanish compositions and took them over to Vince's apartment in the Garden of Allah. We also took along about 100 bottles of Scotch. For several days, Vince did nothing but alternate long cold ones and Spanish records. Then, thoroughly saturated with the spirit of the occasion, he sat down and wrote the 'Carioca.' And that's how hit tunes are born!"

Four Pictures a Year.

Gould's contract is for four pictures a year at RKO-Radio. Any over that number he negotiates for independently. When his stint is completed on the Hollywood lots, he is privileged to come East and devote his talents to the stage if he sees fit. That is what he is doing on this junket East. He has been visiting his mother here for several days, but left for New York yesterday afternoon to prepare for the staging of one of Sam Harris' new musical productions. Since Mr. Harris, whose "As Thousands Cheer" is still going strong, is to produce four new musicals this fall, Dave is not sure which one he will get. He does know, however, that he is expected back in Hollywood late in October.

For Fred Astaire he predicts a vast public popularity following the release of "The Gay Divorce."

"He will be bigger than any of the crop of newcomers to the West Coast," says Mr. Gould. "He is a great dancer, a fine light comedian and has an ingratiating personality. He can't miss, you watch what I tell you." Mr. Gould is emphatic on this point.

Picked Own "Baby Stars."

Just for the fun of it—and one suspects for whatever favorable publicity might accrue from the experiment—while the craze was on, Dave selected a group of 13 "Baby Stars" of his own personal choice from the girls who have worked for him in musical pictures and prophesied bright futures for them as featured players, if not actually stars. Of the 13, a half-dozen already are playing "bit" parts and the others are on their way. The selections were made from a total of about 2,000 girls he has used in his various pictures, all on the RKO-Radio lot. The girls are now scattered all over Hollywood, making good under many producing companies.

When he is shooting his big musical scenes, eight cameras work from as many angles simultaneously. These various angle shots, one learns, are frequently made into a composite that gives the impression of a much larger and more expansive scene than actually was staged.

Asked where his inspiration for new dances and new effects come from, Mr. Gould gave the artist's usual answer.

"One never knows about that. It seems that when something new and different is needed, the hunch just presents itself from nobody knows where. The important thing is that it presents itself. But I will say this, that the pictures on which I have worked have been so thoroughly planned in advance of production that the time in which the songs were to be written and their titles have been decided upon before the composer commissioned to do the scores have been called in."

Cousin of Noted Comic.

Mr. Gould, as I have said, is a native Washingtonian. He also is a cousin of Ben Blue, well-known, Washington-born comedian, who is soon to be seen on a local stage.

On the coast, L. Monta Bell, former Capital newspaper man and film director, and now a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Maxine Doyle, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, and now coming along as an actress on the Warner lot, are among his intimate friends.

As I have also previously remarked, it requires no great time in his company to become convinced that Dave Gould knows his stuff.

Look back over his record, if you doubt it.

Included among yesterday afternoon's brief callers was Mark M. Vance, formerly of the staff of Variety, the mouthpiece of the theatrical profession, and now avant courier for Myrt and Marge, the popular radio figures who will headline next week's stage bill at Loew's Fox. Mr. Vance knows the "show game" backward and likes nothing better than to reminisce. We burned a few ears, dating clear back to the year of eighteen-hundred - and - none - of - your - business. Some fun.

About Myrt and Marge.

In addition to all the reminiscence, Mr. Vance contrived to slip in a word now and again to remind me that Myrt is Myrtle Vail in real life and the mother of Marge, whose real name is Donna Damerel. Both have experienced the vicissitudes of extensive stage careers that have equipped them admirably for their radio characterizations.

If Myrtle Vail had never run away from her home in Joliet Ill., to go on the stage at the age of 15, there would not, of course, ever have been any team of Myrt and Marge of present-day fame. But Myrtle did run away from home and eventually found her way into the chorus of the old LaSalle Theater musical stock company in Chicago, whose productions used to run for weeks on end, owing in large measure to the limited capacity of the theater, which was merely the old Pabst Blue Ribbon restaurant converted into a playhouse, with seats for only a few hundred. She sang and danced herself into the front row and then became a principal.

Cupid Shoots a Dart.

Meanwhile, the little chap with the bow and arrow got busy around the LaSalle troupe and Myrtle fell in love with George Damerel, the tenor of the company, and he with her. They were married. A daughter was born. She was named Donna Damerel. Donna followed in her mother's footsteps and while attending a Chicago high school decided one day to call it quits and go on the stage. She learned to sing and dance and joined the act her parents were presenting in vaudeville over the old Orpheum and Keith circuits.

And now here come mother and daughter to Washington for the first personal appearances they have ever made in the Capital. Although George Damerel and Myrtle Vail have come to the parting of the ways, Marge is happily married to Gene Kretzinger, the Gene of Gene and Charlie, harmony team, taking the air over CBS out of Chicago.

We are informed by our al fresco operative that Glen Echo Park's latest novelty, the "sifflieur"—just plain whistler and imitator of our feathered friends of field and forest to you—in the person of Wilbur May, park attache for the past six years, scored a tremendous hit with last night's crowds. Mr. May made his public debut in the Spanish Garden Ballroom as an added attraction with Dave MacWilliams' Orchestra. He will appear twice nightly throughout the week.

"Drunkard" is in Again.

Tonight begins the Roadside Theater's production of "The Drunkard," presented by the melodrama cast of the company's two-ply acting organization, headed by Eugene Kressin, Frances Brunt, Janet Coon, Frederic Haskin, jr., and Thomas Matthew Cahill.

"The Drunkard" will be presented by this organization as a revival of a revival, differing somewhat from the versions seen in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, New York and other centers. Instead of the costumes and settings of the 1840s—the decade in which the play was first produced—the era of the "gay Nineties" will be suggested. The musical accompaniment, played by Louis Malone, will enhance the illusion of this period.

The original Boston Museum acting version is being employed by the Roadsiders and will be found to differ somewhat from the editions of the play antedating its employment as a sterling piece of temperance propaganda.

Tomorrow night, beginning at 10:15, the Roadside Theater again will go on the air with the concluding acts of the play. "The Drunkard, or The Fallen Saved" will be broadcast through Station WMAL from 10:15 to the final curtain, with Jim McGrath as announcer. A sufficiently comprehensive resume of what has gone before will be given to enable the listeners to grasp the portent of the broadcasted portions of the hardy old melodrama, which, as we have previously remarked, is the most popular "comedy" in America, at the moment.

Congratulations to Gene Ford, who staged the "Going Native" all-Washington revue, current on the stage at Loew's Fox, upon having been appointed to the stage directorship of the Eastern Division of Loew's, Inc., under the divisional managership of Carter Barron. That means that Mr. Ford, an able and amiable young man, will have his headquarters in the National Capital, instead of New York. Congratulations, also, at Loew's Eastern division.

Leading the League Note.

A contemporary has remarked that little Shirley Temple, judging from the experience of other child prodigies, assumes baby stardom with two strikes on her as far as adolescent and adult success before the cameras is concerned.

Maybe so, but who cares about two strikes when he has already made three hits and is batting 1,000?

Oil Stove Explodes; Home Is Destroyed

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 20 (Spl.). The explosion of an oil stove while Mrs. Clayton Mentzer, near Williamsport, was preparing breakfast today, caused a fire which destroyed the house.

A Famous Scene Reaches Screen

This is probably the most discussed scene in "The Pursuit of Happiness," the comedy with which the National Theater Players opened their last-spring season in Washington, and which now is being produced in pictures under the direction of Alexander Hall. This "shot" is of the screen version, with Francis Lederer and Joan Bennett in the costellar roles, and depicts the quaint, old New England custom of "bundling," the idea upon which the comedy, by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner, is based.

Straight From the Studios

Radio Is Invoked as Test of Suitable Film Material; Donald Woods Gets Lead in "Sweet Adeline;" Week-End Grist of Hollywood News.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Aug. 20.—While "Enchanted April" has been pointed to as the next Ann Harding picture at RKO, the final selection of her film is contingent on a unique experiment. Ann last night (Sunday) took part in a radio broadcast of an unpublished book, written by Tom Lennon, called "The Laughing Journey," which may prove the sovereign choice. That depends on the reaction to the broadcast, and that's the experiment. It was decided to test out the "Laughing Journey" on the air prior to putting it on the film, and if public response was favorable, why, then the story will be deemed right.

ANN HARDING.

Naturally, the entire book could not be broadcast, but a chapter was chosen as substance for a sketch.

The author, Lennon, was heard over the air with Miss Harding. A test just like this has never been made before. Whatever picture is elected as the next for Miss Harding, the star plans to produce "The Peacock Feathers," a color feature, to be made under Walter Wagner's supervision.

Cagney-O'Brien Air Film Set.

So successful has "Here Comes the Navy" been as a box-office attraction, that the feature concerning naval aviation, which will star James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, is to be started as soon as possible. The original is by John Monk Saunders, who has already done various flying narratives pertaining to the war. Adaptation is in the hands of Malcolm Stuart Boyland. The title of the film will be "Flying Leathernecks." Cagney and O'Brien have each been starred in an individual production since "Here Comes the Navy." Cagney's is called the "Perfect Week-End," and O'Brien's, "I Sell Anything."

Billie Burke As Socialite.

The personality of Billie Burke is to illumine the cast of "Forsaking All Others," in which Joan Crawford, Clarke Gable and Robert Montgomery have leads. Miss Burke will have a role in this similar to the one she played in "Dinner at Eight"—a socialite, to be exact.

The picturization is credited to Joseph Mankiewioz and the direction to W. S. Van Dyke. This is Miss Burke's first assignment at M.-G.-M. since "Dinner at Eight."

Donald Woods "Adeline" Lead.

It's Donald Woods who wins the lead in "Sweet Adeline," and that is a real achievement for this chap, who appeared in "As the Earth Turns," "Fog Over 'Frisco" and "Merry Wives of Reno." He will play opposite Irene Dunne. Comparatively, Woods is a newcomer. He was brought from the New York stage, where he acted in "Singapore," to appear opposite Ruth Chatterton in "Female," but a change in plans occurred. After that came the pictures mentioned at Warner's and one or two at Fox, including "Charlie Chan in London." At the moment Woods is back in the footlight world at Ellitsch's Gardens in Denver.

Keith Between Stage and Screen.

Ian Keith is going to do nothing but fly and fly during the next week. The reason is that while appearing in "Mary of Scotland," on the stage in San Francisco, he also will be doing duty in "Dangerous Corner," at the RKO studio. Then he will have to spend his days here, except for matinee engagements, and his nights in the North. When he will sleep, unless it is on the plane and a few hours snatched between 2:30 a. m. and dawn, nobody knows. He arrived early yesterday morning for his first work on the set. The cast of "Dangerous Corner" now includes, besides Keith, Melvyn Douglas, Conrad Nagel, Virginia Bruce, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Betty Furness and Henry Wadsworth. Keith plays a "light villain" brother of Nagel.

Morley Drury Experting.

Morley Drury, remembered as a star football player seven or eight years ago, is to have a fling at the game in a new way. He will be technical adviser of the picture "Kick Off," which Glenn Tryon is to direct. The cast has not been settled in detail, but Eddie Quillan is one member and Marion Nixon, just married to William Seiter, the director, another.

Bert Allen "Menace."

An important chance will be given Robert Allen in "Menace," which will figure Gertrude Michael, with Paul Cavanaugh, John Davis Lodge and others, including Henrietta Crossman, Halliwell Hobbes, Raymond Milland and Desmond Roberts. The Allen role will compare with those of Cavanaugh and Lodge. The story revolves around the character portrayed by Miss Michael, and is of the mystery-melodrama type, with which she has been associated since appearing in "Murder at the Vanities."

Pommer Likely To Stay On.

Erich Pommer will arrange to produce another picture following "Music in the Air" from all indications. It was not certain whether this European producer would remain in Hollywood or return to Paris, but the German stage play "A Woman Lies," by Stanislas Fedor, has been purchased by Fox, and Seton I. Miller has adapted it to the screen and the intention is to have Pommer produce it. The probabilities are that Joe Hay, who was brought here from Europe by Columbia, but who has not yet made a picture, will direct.

Comedienne Progressing.

Mary Lou Treen, tall, red-headed comedienne, is pretty well thought of in the studios. She is known from her work here in the little theaters. She has just been chosen to play the wise-cracking secretarial role in "Babbitt," with Guy Kibbee and Aline MacMahon. Maxine Doyle has been cast as Kibbee's daughter. Glen Boles and Nan Gray, in the youthful romantic leads, and Arthur Aylesworth and Russell Hicks are others.

New "Limehouse Nights" Candidates.

Jean Parker and Loretta Young are now being mentioned for that lead in "Limehouse Nights," over which so much unsettlement has existed ever since Sylvia Sidney retired from the cast. Heather Angel now seems definitely a prospect for it, as the necessary arrangements could not be made between Paramount, the company making the picture, and Universal, where Miss Angel is under contract.

Pageant of the Film World.

Production of the "Little Minister" is to start Saturday, according to present plans, with Katharine Hepburn starred and John Beal in the lead. C. Aubrey Smith and Monte Blue are in "Lives of a Bengal Lancers," while Helen Lowell, who made a hit in "The Midnight Alibi" and one or two other films, has been cast in "Half Way to Heaven," taken from "Saturday's Children." Barbara Stanwyck will be seen in a political film when "Concealment" is produced. She is the Governor's daughter and the role is very dramatic. David Holt has been signed to a long-term contract at Paramount. Arando Agini, stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera, has been signed to supervise technical details of "Enter Madame," which stars Elissa Landi. Elliot Nugent is the director. Cesar Romero, who appeared in "Strictly Dishonorable" on the stage, and in "The Thin Man" on the screen, is regarded as a find by Universal. He has been placed under long-term contract, and will take a lead in "Cheating Cheaters," by Max Marois, which Stanley Bergerman is to produce. He is a Cuban by birth. R. C. Sherriff is to see to the production of his Napoleonic play, "St. Helena," in New York. He will leave Saturday.

Movie Stars Out Of Coast Red Trial

Denials Cause Attorney to Forego Subpenas.

Sacramento, Calif., Aug. 20 (U.P.). Seventeen alleged Communists will go to trial here without the testimony, for or against their cause, of several prominent moving picture players, it appeared tonight.

District Attorney Neil McAllister, confronted with the denial of James Cagney, Dolores Del Rio, Ramon Novarro and Lupe Velez that they are Communist sympathizers, decided not to subpena them.

His decision is subject to revision if new evidence links them to the Red cause, however. Their only connection so far is the mention of their names in correspondence or memoranda seized when police arrested Blonde Caroline Decker, secretary of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union.

The defendants indicated they would plead not guilty. Miss Decker and Pat Chambers, widely known strikeleader, said they would conduct their own defense.

Ickes Inspects Maine Dam Region

Secretary Studies Site of Proposed Power Plant.

Lubec, Me., Aug. 20 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes arrived here tonight to survey the Passamaquoddy Bay region, proposed site for a $49,000,000 tidal hydroelectric power generating project.

Accompanied by Maj. Phillip M. Fleming, PWA engineer, Ickes motored here from Bar Harbor, where he conferred earlier today with Representative John G. Utterback, on the project. An application for a $49,000,000 loan, filed by Dexter P. Cooper, Inc., was rejected by PWA on the ground insufficient evidence had been presented or a market for the power.

Howell Predicts Great Air Future

Hints at Secretaryship for U. S. Aviation.

Paris, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Clark Howell, chairman of the new United States Air Board, said tonight he was convinced aviation "is destined to develop beyond belief."

Howell, of Atlanta, Ga., arrived from Italy where he had been observing the advance of aviation in a survey of European airways. He declined to comment on the projected creation of an air secretaryship in the Washington Administration, but remarked significantly:

"Unquestionably aviation is bound to profit by some sort of centralized direction. If submitted to efficient single control, it is destined to an unbelievable growth."

Howell is to go to London on Wednesday.

Officers, Units Appointed for Army Problem

MacArthur Will Direct Operations at General Headquarters.

By Harris B. Hull.

The military units and the commanding officers to participate in the Command Post Exercise, America's most important peace-time military mobilization to be held at the War Department here next week and in New Jersey the first week in September, were announced yesterday at the War Department.

At the same time it was stated that the first "situation" on which the military problem will be based has been issued to certain unit commanders. These officers have been directed to submit their solution of the first requirement to general headquarters immediately.

The general military situation in the mimic warfare is this:

The United States is involved in a war in the West which has existed for a short time. As a result of this the fleet is concentrated in the Pacific area and the general headquarters air force is assembled at airports on the West Coast.

Four-Army Plan Involved.

Immediately following the declaration of war in the West, Congress authorized a mobilization. The four-army plan, present system of War Department organization, was placed in operation.

As the situation in the West was found to be serious, the Third and Fourth Armies were directed to this theater of operations. The First and Second Armies were held in reserve to reinforce the troops in the Pacific area or to meet other emergencies.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff and commander in chief of the forces in the field, has ordered the commanders of the First and Second Armies to prepare plans for concentrating their troops in the North Atlantic area on a moment's notice. MacArthur has taken this action fearing a sudden invasion of our Atlantic Coast by a coalition of powers who might take advantage of the Nation's weakened position, due to the concentration of the troops in the West, and attempt to get a foothold in the East.

The units and officers to participate in the exercises at the War Department and in the field are:

Stock Trading Is Smallest in Twelve Years

Market Sinks Four-tenths as Sales Drop to 274,440 Shares.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The speculative deadlock tightened its grip on the stock market today and trading shrank to the smallest volume in more than 12 years.

In five hours of routine dealings, only 274,440 shares changed hands on the "big board," the lowest since July 5, 1922. With a much smaller list of shares to trade in then, the exchange recorded a volume of 237,000 shares.

Price movements were mixed, but the main drift continued toward slightly lower levels. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks sagged four-tenths of a point to 71.2.

Stocks Ignore Dividends.

Declaration of an extra dividend of 50 cents a share by Du Pont and resumption of dividends by Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit failed to ripple the calm surface of the stock market.

With the dollar firm in foreign exchange dealings and bonds holding fairly steady, the stock market lacked the recent inflationary stimulus, although the rise of the daiy commodity indices was watched with close interest by inflation-minded traders.

Scattered liquidation in steel shares was prompted by the American Iron and Steel Institute's estimate that operations had sagged to 21.3 per cent of capacity from 22.3 per cent a week ago, the lowest of the year, and comments of steel observers that no early expansion in steel buying was expected.

U. S. Steel Preferred.

U. S. Steel preferred duplicated its minimum price of the year on a drop of more than 2 points. Bethlehem, American Rolling Mill, A. M. Byers and Republic Steel yielded for fractional losses.

B. M. T. spurted more than a point on announcement directors had declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share, the first since April, 1932. Du Pont sold only a shade higher but it was assumed the Du Pont directors merely were passing on the recent extra dividend declared by General Motors.

Railroad shares were a trifle firmer, especially granger roads, which had been under pressure recently on predictions drought losses would curtail their volume of traffic. The first of the individual weekly traffic statements to be published disclosed little change from the preceding week.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press).

Carpet wools—In foreign carpet wool centers quotations are reported strong with sellers asking slightly higher prices than a week ago.

Flour—Mill agents in the New York district report a fair volume of business for last week. A contract involving 200,000 barrels for a large Eastern baker was said to have been closed by a Kansas mill.

Cotton goods—Print cloth sales last week were estimated at the equivalent of two week's production at the current rate. Mills did equally well in the preceding week. Prices were firm.

Paper — Mechanical pulp prices declined last week, but chemical pulp quotations held unchanged. Paper demand continues in the seasonal lull, except for specialties, which have been selling in good volume.

Chemicals—A low rate of operations in the glass industry tends to restrict buying of soda ash and arsenic. Fertilizer materials are firmer.

Coal—Bituminous production, according to trade reports, showed a moderate reduction in the first two weeks of August and was substantially smaller than in the corresponding weeks a year ago.

Wall Street Briefs

Safeway Stores System sales for the four weeks ended August 11 were $18,535,453 against $17,287,318 in the like 1933 period. For the 32 weeks ended August 11 sales were $144,033,671, compared with $131,673,145 in the corresponding 1933 period.

California crude oil production in the week ended August 18 averaged 508,400 barrels daily against 513,700 barrels in the previous week.

Directors of the Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky were scheduled to meet within 20 days to decide whether to apply for listing of the company's stock on the New York Stock Exchange. The shares are now traded on the New York Curb Exchange.

Prices of Tobacco Average Lower

Atlanta, Aug. 20 (AP).—The average price paid for tobacco on Georgia's 14 Bright Leaf markets during the week ending August 17 dropped to 14.38 cents per pound, H. K. Ramsey, statistician of the State Department of Agriculture, announced today. The average price for the second week of the season was 20.45 cents per pound and for the first week 22.62 cents per pound.

Sales during the third week totaled 6,898,032 pounds, compared to 20,053,004 pounds last year. The average price per pound during the third week in 1933 was 9.80 cents per pound.

During the opening week this year 6,986,738 pounds were auctioned and the second week saw sales of 15,247,178 pounds. Sales to date range around the 30,000,000-pound mark. The Government maximum production allowed Georgia for the year is 40,000,000 pounds.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Secretary Wallace's Latest Attempt to Defend the Agricultural Program Reflects None of His Usual Clear-Headedness.

By Ralph West Robey.

Secretary Wallace's latest defense of the agricultural program is one of the most extraordinary pieces of economic reasoning yet put out by an Administration spokesman. It was presented in a special article in the New York Times last Sunday. In it Mr. Wallace discards the clear-cut reasoning that heretofore has characterized many of his analyses. He becomes a mere politician, slashing and slugging critics with no apparent regard for either accuracy or consistency.

The necessity for the AAA, we are told, arose from the fact that we had 50,000,000 too many acres under cultivation. These had been brought under cultivation because of foreign markets. The foreign markets developed during the war and then were supported "by allowing investment bankers to flimflam the guillible public to the tune of from $500,000 to $1,000,000,000 worth of mostly worthless foreign bonds annually." Those who "league themselves with chaos," the Secretary says, "for 12 long years" followed this course and maintained foreign purchasing power. The showdown" came in 1930. The "loans were unrecoverable because we hoisted tariff barriers and would not accept goods in return."

Policies in the Twenties Assured Financial Troubles.

With much of this thesis everyone will agree. It now is evident—as it was evident during the twenties—that we can not continue to have a credit balance on both the visible and the invisible items. So long as we are a creditor nation on capital account, we must be a debtor nation on the sale of goods. If we are to continue to sell more abroad than we buy, we must write-off our foreign investments. So much, so good. But what has the last 18 months afforded in the way of a lasting and positive correction?

Tariffs today are just as high in absolute amounts as they were when the present Administration took office. This, in itself, would ba bad. Our old tariff walls, as Secretary Wallace emphasises, made our foreign loans unrecoverable. But on top of this the present Administration has added a new burden. Through its monetary policy it, in effect, has increased our tariff walls by approximately 70 per cent.

This has been done by making all foreign articles we buy cost us, as importers, some 70 per cent more. For example, an article priced at 100 francs would have cost us on March 4, 1933, $3.92. Today it costs us $6.63. This is not the way one facilitates the importation of goods and enables our farmers to sell more abroad.

Monetary Policy Started As Early as AAA Program.

This monetary policy is as old as the AAA. Early last summer it became evident that it was the official view that the dollar was overvalued. From the first, therefore, those responsible for the agricultural program have had all the evidence they possibly could need to conclude that nothing effective was going to be done in the way of building up foreign markets through making it possible for foreigners to sell in this country. Their real task, therefore, was to work for a permanent reduction of acreage under cultivation for domestic markets.

Instead of doing this the AAA has been designed to assure that the acreage would not be permanently withdrawn. It has paid farmers to keep it available. It, in a word, has gone directly contrary to the principles that Secretary Wallace says must be followed if the foreign markets are not to be regained.

The result is that today we are as far away—perhaps farther away—from a lasting solution of the farm problem than we were 18 months ago. We have reduced production, aside from the drought, but we have done it by wholesale bribery. The excess acreage still is there, ready to be brought back into use at any time the Government stops making it profitable to keep it fallow. And our tariff walls, in a real sense, are vastly higher than they were even when those who "league themselves with chaos" were in power.

Goods Markets.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Cotton goods opened the week much quieter today with prices firm; moderate sales of finished goods were made.

Lower prices at Australian auctions added further unsettlement to domestic wool values. Clothing manufacturers did a light business.

Jayson farm curtailment amounting to 25 per cent is to be continued until orders improve. Silk goods were quiet. Burlaps were slightly firmer abroad and unchanged here.

Visible Supply U. S. Grain

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat increased 1,793,000; corn increased 4,054,000; oats increased 1,117,000; rye increased 21,000; barley increased 392,000.

Silk Market.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Raw silk futures closed barely steady 1½ to 3 lower; sales, 1,140 bales. October, 1.09½*; December, 1.12*; January, 1.12½*. Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 83.9 Level

Fluctuations Are Slight as Trading Declines to $6,245,000.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Inertia marked proceedings in today's bond market and price changes, as a whole, were negligible.

With most active traders "on the fence" for the moment, transfers totaled only $6,245,000, par value, the smallest aggregate since September 13 last year.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 83.9.

Lack of Interest.

Dealers attributed the lack of interest partly to the listlessness in the equities division and to the somewhat obscure trends of business and industry.

Another decline in steel production to the lowest level since the American Iron and Steel Institute began publishing weekly figures last fall did not aid sentiment.

Railway loans, especially those of the higher grade classification, were in fair demand and moderately higher. Among the best of the carriers were some bonds of Santa Fe, Central Pacific, Burlington, St. Paul, New Haven, Northern Pacific and Union Pacific. Alleghany Corporation liens, however, were an exception, several of these losing 1 to 3 points.

Among the utilities and industrials a moderately better tone was exhibited by issues of American Telephone, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, Interborough Rapid Transit, Laclede Gas, Richfield Oil and Sinclair Oil. Paramount bonds showed gains of 1 to 2 points and Vanadium 5s got up 2 points, to 85. Losers of fractions to a point or so included loans of Postal Telegraph, American & Foreign Power, Dodge Bros., Goodrich and National Dairy.

U. S. Government Section.

While there was a turnover of only about $1,890,000 in the United States Government section, price declines ranged from one-thirty-second to eleven-thirty-seconds of a point.

The foreign division was mixed. Brazilian obligations were relatively active at gains of about a point. Polish issues also firmed.

German loans showed no pronounced response to the results of the National referendum. The Dawes and Young plan issues did virtually nothing, but some of the central agricultural bank loans were heavy.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed In Light Sales

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Transfers on the curb exchange today were the lowest, with one exception, since March 30, 1933. Sales approximated only 82,000 shares. Price changes were narrow and a trifle mixed.

Some of the metals and oils were moderately reactionary. Utilities were steady. Pepperell Manufacturing gave up part of its recent gains, dipping 3¾ points on small odd lot sales.

Gulf Oil sagged 2 points while declines of sizable fractions to around a point occurred in Silver King Mining, Schiff Co., Newmont, Lake Shore, Hiram Walker and Humble Oil. Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Aluminum Co. of America, preferred, Pan American Air and Wright Hargreaves finished about unchanged.

Brazilian Traction & Light finished up nearly a point, while slight improvement prevailed in Dow Chemical, Hudson Bay Mining, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift International, Atlas Corporation and British American Tobacco "B."

Washington Business Angles

By J. R. Brackett.

(Associated Press.)

The committee of Cabinet members which President Roosevelt appointed some time ago to figure out a price policy, if that is possible, has found no policy as yet.

This isn't because there hasn't been an effort but because the field of industry is so complex that generalities are impossible.

Prices seem to be just about the toughest problem the economic experts in the Government have tried to solve, and the only concensus discernible is that artificiality in the price structure is the thing to avoid.

Saying that, however, isn't even the same thing as saying price-fixing itself is always wrong, and, according to officials, is far from asserting that open price filing constitutes the condemned artificiality.

Price fixing, if carefully fitted to a particular situation, may be helpful in preventing abnormal fluctuations—which are as economically disastrous as prices fixed on a high level.

Open prices—the filing of price lists of all competitors with a central agency which makes the combined information available to all—may or may not lead to harmful price fixing, but price publicity in itself can serve to stop secret rebates.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson in a recent speech condemned the kind of price fixing which artificially fixes an inflexible economic level, but at the same time and somewhat unusual for a Government official, he gave his approval to the general theory of price publicity.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The dollar extended its gains in terms of foreign currencies yesterday.

Wheat Values Advance on Buying Drive

Foreign Markets Inspire Gains; Oats and Rye Unchanged.

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—A steady stream of buying orders today resulted in fractional advances in grain prices although the upturn was held in check by profit-taking sales.

Trading sentiment here was strengthened materially by firmness of foreign markets and new increases in cash grain prices. Buying was strong enough to establish gains of around 2 cents in wheat and almost a cent in corn at times, but these bulges were whittled down in the closing rush of selling to realize profits.

Wheat closed with a net gain of ⅛ to ⅝ cent above Saturday's finish; December new deliveries at $1.04⅞ to $1.05, showing a reaction of almost a cent from the top figures of the day. Corn ended irregularly at a range of ⅛ loss to ⅛ gain.

Oats and Rye Unchanged.

Oats and rye were virtually unchanged although some deliveries showed fractional advances. Barley was swept up more than 2 cents into new high ground for the season, continuing the advance of last week. Trade gossip indicated the strength in barley was due to the efforts of maltsters to secure supplies.

Advances at Liverpool resulted largely from reports of the importation of Canadian durum wheat into the United States. Buenos Aires and Rotterdam also exhibited strength that was reflected here.

Volume of trading at Chicago was light, most of it being the changing over of hedges from September to deferred deliveries. The spread between September and December options narrowed in most grains and in wheat it contracted to a range of only ⅝ to ¾ cent.

Hard Wheat Upturns.

Upturns of cash prices to a point where hard wheat was selling as much as 7 cents over September futures was a strengthening factor. Reports Government authorities were considering removal of import duties on feed grains to prevent starvation of live stock resulted in a sharp rise in oats at Winnipeg, but little change was noted in the oats market here.

High temperatures in the Southwest and absence of precipitation in that area induced a fair volume of buying in corn but this was offset somewhat by reports of rains and cooler weather in Middle West sections.

A private authority said after inspection of Central Illinois crops that as corn approaches maturity it is increasingly evident the yield even in best fields will be disappointing.

Provisions were higher in sympathy with fresh advances in hogs.

Steel Market Depressed as Orders Lag

Prices and Employment Up for Year; Output Is Down.

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—Seven weeks have elapsed since consumers stocked up with steel, and the failure of new demands to appear long after the time anticipated, with widespread labor difficulties and increasing uncertainties regarding Government policies, is exerting a pronounced depressing influence in the markets, states the magazine Steel.

Scanning the immediate horizon, steelmakers can see only prospects for additional Government work and some revival in automobile requirements.

To find a counterpart of the doubt that prevails among steel sellers it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the Administration's recovery program. A year of the steel code—the anniversary of which fell on Sunday—finds steel wages, prices and employment enhanced 8 to 10 per cent, and iron and steel production down 55 to 57 per cent.

Auto Output Down.

Automobile output, continuing to decline, last week was slightly under 54,000 cars, though the recession is meeting with unusual resistance, the reduction in output from the week of July 14 being only 20 per cent.

Some prolonged shutdowns in the automobile industry will be made over the Labor Day period and the month is expected to be the slowest in motorcar productivity since January. Though the first steel tonnage releases for 1935 models appear to be scheduled for that month, it is generally believed that it will be late in September or October before actual rolling of the steel commences.

While many of the lighter finished steel rolling mills are idle, awaiting accumulations of miscellaneous orders, structural shape mills are operating at a relatively high rate, mainly on Government awards. Architects and engineers have few new projects before them; a survey of 40 in one of the leading industrial districts last week revealed prospective steel tonnage from the total number is less than 2,000 tons.

U. S. Loan Menaced.

A local political dispute in Allegheny County (Pittsburgh) threatens to cause the Government to withdraw a loan for bridges requiring 50,000 tons of steel. Including 5,000 tons for a viaduct at Baltimore, structural steel awards for the week amounted to 13,000 tons, compared with 23,882 tons in the preceding week.

Rail mills this month are completing the last of the rail orders placed earlier in the year under Government sponsorship. Railroad equipment repair this year, generally, has not measured up to expectations, due to mounting costs—estimates in some instances exceeding Federal loans. The Baltimore & Ohio has opened several car and locomotive repair departments to complete its PWA repair program. Illinois Central is to award eleven Diesel locomotives this month.

Steelmakers look for a fairly good seasonal recovery in agricultural requirements this fall, basing hopes on the increase in farm product prices and Government subsidies, to offset some of the loss caused by the drought.

Bookings Are Larger.

Though actual steel bookings so far this month are larger than for the comparable period in July, orders chiefly are for rounding out inventories. In some districts the volume is 50 per cent larger, though tonnage is far below anticipated quotas. Current shipments are one-fifth to one-fourth those of June.

Notable among specific orders is an award of 2,000 tons of steel pipe for Standard Oil of California, with prospects for early placing of 14,000 additional tons for a 108-mile line. The Department of Agriculture has purchased 749 tons of telephone wire.

Within two weeks steelmakers will begin to formulate prices for fourth quarter, to open books September 1. Reduced demand has precluded any broad test of the increases named for third quarter.

Naval Ship Bids.

Last week bids on the 12 naval ships to be built by private yards were opened and apparently full code prices were quoted. The real test, however, is expected shortly when the Government—offering to let steelmakers cut code prices 15 per cent—receives bids for 12 ships for construction in the Navy's yards. These 24 vessels require approximately 40,000 tons of steel.

Steelworks operations last week dropped 6 points to 21½ per cent. Pittsburgh was down 4 points to 15 per cent; Chicago, 4 to 28; Wheeling, 4 to 26; Cleveland, 19 to 13; Buffalo, 9½ to 23½; eastern Pennsylvania, 2½ to 20½; New England, 9 to 29, and Youngstown, 16 to 22. Birmingham advanced 5 points to 25 per cent, while Detroit held at 77 per cent.

Steel's price composites are unchanged, the iron and steel index holding at $32.23; finished steel, $54, and steelworks scrap, $9.96.

New York Bank Stocks React in Past Week

New York, Aug. 20.—New York City bank stocks recorded a moderate reaction during the past week. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Holt Rose & Troster, totaled $1,408,837,000 on August 17, as compared with $1,445,985,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $37,149,000, or 2.57 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.68 per cent compares with a yield of 5.53 per cent on August 10. The current market value is now 1.15 times their known book value, unchanged for the week, and based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 10.0 times their known earnings, against 10.3 times at the close of the previous week.

Anti-Semitism Spreads, Jews At Parley Told

Geneva, Aug. 20 (AP).—Jews of the world, through Dr. Nahun Goldmann, president of the Committee of Jewish Delegations, tonight warned the Hitler regime in Germany that Jewry has known more powerful adversaries than the Third Reich, and has "always outlasted them."

Goldmann, addressing the opening session of the world Jewish conference, scored the German government and reported also he had found anti-Semitic tendencies in Austria and a strong movement against his race in several South and Central American countries.

Names Other Nations.

He named Argentina and Mexico among the latter and charged also that the Jewish religion, Hebrew literature and Zionism are persecuted in Soviet Russia.

Germany was accused by Goldmann of trying to realize an exaggerated racial principle "by brutal methods of force."

"Democracy, liberalism, freedom and tolerance," he declared, "will retain their values when posterity will look back upon the Third Reich as a thing of horror."

No Compromise.

There can be no compromise, Goldmann added, in the Jewish fight against the policy in the Reich against the race.

Referring to the boycott against Hitler Germany, Goldmann announced that it will be continued until Jewish rights are completely restored.

"The anti-German boycott," he said, "is the spontaneous reaction of mortified Jewish self-esteem, and the masters of the Third Reich, who always have the words 'honor, dignity and self-respect' on their tongues, should be the last to take exception to our answer to their challenge."

The speaker recommended negotiations to secure proper guarantees for Jews, whose economic life, he said, was being crushed by the economic policy of Soviet Russia.

Vast Cash Sum Shipped Here

Richmond, Va., Aug. 20 (AP).—Gov. George J. Seay, of the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank here, said today that a large shipment of money was made from the Richmond Bank to the United States Treasury in Washington on Saturday.

"It was an unusual shipment," Gov. Seay said, "and extra precautions were taken to protect it."

Escorted by State police cars the money went overland to Washington in armored trucks. State police armed with machine guns in addition to their service revolvers, and private detectives, guarded the shipment. Gov. Seay did not divulge the amount transferred nor would he say if it was in gold or notes.

Officials of the Treasury said last night that they knew nothing of the reported shipment.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Mrs. Man Takes Rover's Part

There's no use telling you that Mr. Man wasn't good and mad when he got back home and found that somebody had taken his geese, for he was. But Rover and Howler had each caught a big fat rabbit, and Rover had them lying right by the step when Mr. Man began quarreling with him for letting somebody come there and get his geese. Rover told him that the rabbits had been getting so saucy lately that they would come up and eat things in the garden right in the big daytime, and that he thought Mr. Man wanted him to watch them. Mr. Man said that he did, but he didn't want somebody to come and get his geese while Rover was gone after rabbits.

"Well," Mrs. Man said, "what did you expect the dog to do? Did you want him to lie down here and watch the rabbits eat all the turnips and collards in the garden? If he did that, you would beat him, and he couldn't run rabbits and keep robbers off of the geese at the same time. Anyway, here are two rabbits, and they are most as big as the geese, so take them out and skin them, and I'll have one of them for supper."

"You just ought to have seen Rover running around trying to help Mrs. Man cook supper. And the way he hung out his tongue and smiled at her was really funny. He wouldn't have been a bit surprised if Mr. Man had whipped him, and he was mighty thankful to Mrs. Man for keeping him out of trouble. He went to the wood box and took up wood and brought it to Mrs. Man, and when she went to the well for water, he went with her, and he jumped up and played around just like he used to do when he was a puppy. It pleased Mrs. Man a lot, and when they were through with supper she gave a mighty big plateful to him, and there was a nice piece of rabbit on it. She had worn her new hat to town that day, and several people had told her how young she was looking, and so she couldn't feel mean and ugly, just because somebody took two geese while she was hearing such things. Yes, "it might have been worse," and she told Mr. Man so.

And so, geese or no geese, Mrs. Man was happy, and Rover was happy, and if Mr. Man was very mad, he had a mighty poor way of showing it, for he had filled his pipe with some of the new tobacco he got in town, and was telling a joke that he had heard in town, and that he had just thought of. So the Man family was all pretty well satisfied.

As for Blackie and the others over at the Big Tree: Well, if you were sitting at the head of your table, with a brown roast goose in front of you, with nothing to do for the rest of the night except to feed it to your friends who sat around the table, and eat it yourself, would you worry yourself so sick that Doctor Coon would have to hurry to his medicine chest for some medicine to kill your worries? Jay Bird wouldn't believe it if you should tell him such a thing.

Pair to Probe Boy's Hanging

Richmond Mother of Lad Who Died in District Retains Lawyers.

Richmond, Aug 20 (Spl.).—A thorough investigation of the circumstances surrounding the death of James Dalton Poindexter, jr., 14-year-old Richmond school boy, found hanged in a Washington lodging house on Friday afternoon, was promised today by two Richmond attorneys who have been retained by the lad's mother and friends. They are to act notwithstanding the announcement from Washington police that the case is closed and a suicide certificate issued.

Convinced that there may be mysterious factors in the case, Ralph Bethel, attorney, and Vic Robertson, fireman, who holds a license to practice law, will visit Washington Thursday to make a complete investigation.

Mr. Robertson reported today that so far his colleague and he are basing their belief in the possibility of foul play on several reports, none of which has been investigated.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Welcome! — By Harry J. Tuthill

GEORGE... THE WAY YOU DASHED UPSTAIRS AND INTO THIS HOUSE.
LISTEN, I'VE GOT IKE AND TESSIE. THEY'RE ON THEIR WAY HERE NOW IN A TAXI. MY FOXY BROTHER HENRY WAS, PRACTICALLY SPEAKING, HOLDING THEM PRISONERS.
WHAT! SIMPLY BECAUSE IKE AND TESSIE ARE COMING INTO MONEY, HENRY AND SALLY HAD THEM LOCKED UP? WHERE?
THEY WERE PRISONERS BECAUSE IKE COULDN'T LEAVE WITHOUT AT LEAST CARFARE, AND EVERY TIME HE TALKED ABOUT BORROWING A LITTLE, HENRY WALKED AWAY FROM HIM.
WHEN I GOT THERE HENRY WAS MOWING HIS LAWN, SO I WINKED AT IKE TO WALK OUT TOWARD THE GARAGE WHERE WE COULD TALK PRIVATELY.
AFTER I LEFT, IKE AND TESSIE WERE TO TELL HENRY AND SALLY THEY WERE GOING FOR A WALK. THEN GRAB A TAXI AND COME HERE.
AH IKE! ONE MOMENT, I'LL BE RIGHT DOWN THERE!

DICK TRACY — A Call at the Coffee Pot

Walt Mason, Himself

The Coroner.

The coroner has no peace or rest, he has to go and hold his quest just when he'd like to sleep; he has to drive 10 leagues or so through mud and sleet and slush and snow, and wade through torrents deep. He can't enjoy his frugal meals, for while he plies his knife he feels he will be called away to view some dead man who's been found all lifeless by the village pound, some poor unlucky jay. His duties are severe and grim, and they must sometimes worry him, but never does he balk, although his labors are in vain—he can not resurrect the slain, or make the dead men walk. The doctor, when he's called at night, to visit some poor dying wight, may haply do some good, may put a poultice on his knees, or stem the current of disease with pills of cottonwood. The doctor chortles as he drives, for he is bent on saving lives, the noblest work on earth; he's bent on easing human pain, and so, while driving through the rain, he gets his money's worth. The pastor sometimes leaves his shack to journey through a night so black he can not see his nose, to bear some golden words of hope to one who's sliding down the slope to where death's river flows. But when the coroner braves the storm to hold a inquest on some form, there is no thought to cheer; he can not bridge the chasm dread between the living and the dead, or dissipate one fear.

NOW REMEMBER - NOT A WORD TO HER TODAY. WE'LL JUST GO IN AND LOOK THE PLACE OVER.
OKAY!
GOOD MORNING.
I THINK I'LL HAVE A SMALL STEAK WITH FRENCH FRIED POTATOES AND COFFEE.
I'LL HAVE THE SAME, PLEASE.
I'M SORRY - BUT I DON'T KEEP STEAKS. I CAN GIVE YOU A NICE HAMBURGER SANDWICH OR A HOT DOG - AND ROLLS AND COFFEE.
WHAT! YOU DON'T HAVE STEAKS? WHAT IN——!
YOU SEE THE TRADE HERE DOESN'T WARRANT CARRYING THE MORE EXPENSIVE CUTS OF MEATS - SO I...
THAT'S PERFECTLY ALL RIGHT, MY DEAR! THERE - THERE! WE'LL JUST HAVE ROLLS AND COFFEE.

Legenza Jury Due to Decide His Fate Today

Richmond, Aug. 20 (AP).—The trial of Walter Legenza, alleged Tri-State gangster charged with the murder of E. M. Huband, a Federal Reserve truck driver, was recessed today until 9 a. m. tomorrow shortly after the panel of 20 veniremen from which the jury will be selected was completed.

Judge John L. Ingram said he hoped to see completion of the trial by tomorrow night.

Legenza apparently was unmoved as prospective jurors told the court they were not opposed to capital punishment.

Defense Witnesses.

Charles W. Moss, defense counsel, who last Monday asked for a continuance in order that he might have the testimony of New York witnesses, today said he had some of them. He said Thomas Brescia was here and, according to Moss, is the owner of a restaurant on Pearl street, New York, where Legenza is said to have eaten supper at the time the murder was committed here.

Moss said also that he had another New York witnesses who was the operator of a rooming house in which Legenza was supposed to be staying on March 8, the day of the slaying.

The prosecution is expected to rely largely on the testimony of Arthur Misunas, who with Legenza and Robert Mais are alleged to be key men in what is known as the Tri-State Gang.

Misunas, captured in California, has pleaded guilty to participation in the murder, naming Legenza as the actual killer.

Others to Be Called.

Mrs. Leonora Gosslyn Fontaine, who said she was shot by gangsters because she "knew too much," was in a long conference with Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon just before the not guilty plea was entered. She was brought here early today from Washington under police escort. The party came in three automobiles. Neither she, Misunas nor Mais was in the courtroom at the opening.

Marie McKeever, arrested with Mais in Baltimore, was expected to be called as a witness. Also present was Leo Deward, United States postal inspector from Washington, who was instrumental in the arrest of Misunas and who was released from a Richmond hospital today, where he had been recuperating from injuries suffered when a Washington police car overturned last Monday.

In addition to Misunas and Mrs. Fontaine, the State's witnesses include J. R. Briggs and C. B. Harris, of Richmond, said to have witnessed the shooting; Coroner J. M. Whitfield and detectives, police officers and postal inspectors from both Richmond and Washington.
